Preface

Part I is concerned with Rudd origins and early Rudd history from the 10th through the 16th Centuries. It also includes comments on other Rudds besides the Irish Rudds in Part II. Part II is a record of one Irish Rudd family with nine children, covering roughly 238 years of family living history, from 1760 to 1988. We have used the first person and generally recount visits to areas of Rudd activity and our contacts with current descendants of the Rudd families. No attempt has been made to authenticate or document all information sources as many of the contacts have been just person to person. Some information is based on memory, incomplete records,and sometimes hearsay. Whenever possible we have tried to give proper credit for information gained from specific sources.

Since family records must consist of dated material, many references to current occupations, locations, marital status and general aspirations are outdated soon after they are recorded. Family photos used have the same dated limitations. There will be some errors in dates, middle names, spouse information, and spellings.

However, Part II is a rather complete history of the lines of descendants from the nine children of Gordon Arthur Rudd and his wife Alicia Wellwood Rudd. These children were born between 1800 and 1831 in Rathsarn parish in Queens County, Ireland, now County Laois. Part II recounts what is known of the nine children, their spouses, and families and traces the descendants in each line roughly to the year 1988.

In an overview of general Rudd characteristics dating back to William Rudd, Lord of Meath, Dublin area in Ireland in 1076, we borrow comments form the preface of Mary Amelia Rudd's book RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY published in 1920 after a lifetime of research into early English records. She sums up her findings on the Rudd family as: "a simple record of an ancient family of the lesser gentry.....Though the Rudds cannot be numbered with the great ones of the earth, there is much in their history as a family to inspire the members to keep fair an ancient and honorable name.....The purity of family life is maintained at a high level in all branches both north and south (England). Apparently with little ambition but with ample capabilities, most Rudds were content with their lot in life, especially if as landed proprietors that lot was cast in the remote dales of Yorkshire, Cumberland, or Westmoreland. Nevertheless if called upon to enter any sphere of society or work, they have invariably shown themselves capable of rising to the occasion. With few exceptions intensely loyal to Church, King, and family, there is a stability about them which many families might envy. With plenty of courage, they are well-fitted to defend themselves and their determination of character has been not infrequently called obstinacy. Marked by a high sense of justice and honor, their word is their bond."

It is hoped the history of the Rudd descendants continues to live up to these commendable Rudd standards.

Introduction

Some may ask why we spend years researching family origins. It does take time; a lot of time, and a lot of patience. It also results in periodic frustration. But first of all genealogy is a fascinating and challenging hobby. It is a wonderful opportunity to meet many interesting people with mutual interests and to investigate many historical locations. Some are personally historical as family landmarks enriched by memories.

Anyone who has done much traveling has learned, surely, that travel just to be traveling from place to place for its own sake can become boring rather quickly. It seems empty without a special interest. There just must be a strong reason for meaningful, motivated travel. Genealogical research provides a definite objective and rewarding goal. Seriously, family records are links with the living past. A recent pamphlet on "roots" emphasized "If you don't take steps now to chronicle your own life and to preserve the history of your family, then be prepared to step quietly into the ranks of sleeping ancestors".

We are all links between what is past and what is to come. Carl Sandburg wrote: "People are what they are because they have come out of what was." The dust jacket of Hal Borland's Country Editor's Boy reads: "Memories should endure. Unless we know where we came from, something about the road we traveled as a people, how can we know who we are or where we are going?" This need is accentuated in our times by the nature of our lives. In the past, families lived in the same house for many years, perhaps hundreds of years, grew up and died in the same areas. We are becoming migrants. Most of us are only third or fourth generation members in the New World.

Shelly wrote: "History is a cyclic poem written by Time upon the memory of man." "He who knows no history is bound to repeat the error of the past."....Anon. Our families are frequently fragmented; scattered far and wide by frequent moves often due to school or job changes. As a result we have a growing national interest in our "roots", before the "trail" is lost. We experience a greater need for belonging to the larger clan and shared histories. We have read: "Families are forever, they pass from generation to generation through the years together."

In our Rudd records the nine original children of Gordon Arthur Rudd and Alicia Wellwood Rudd are coded from 1 to 9. All nine children established families; had children of their own (coded 1.1 to 9.9); and between the nine families all first generation descendants were first cousins with a common set of Rudd grandparents. A few children of these first cousins are still alive in 1988 and are designated by three digit code numbers; for example, 7.71. These grandchildren of the original nine, all share Gordon and Alicia as their great-grandparents and are all second cousins. There are many surviving third cousins across family lines with four digit codes, for example, 1.642, which is my personal code. These third cousins are generally the senior members of existing families. Their children are fourth cousins across family lines and are designated with five digit codes, for example,

1.6421, my first-born Robert. They are the present middle aged group. Their children are fifth cousins and are designated with six digit codes, for example, 1.64211 Robert's first child, Cathryn. These fifth cousins are getting their homes and businesses established and raising children of their own, who are sixth cousins with seven digit codes, for example, 1.642111, Cathryn's first child, Susan Rudd Cooper, to whom this study is dedicated.

The next generation, seventh cousins across the Rudd family lines with eight digit codes, are steadily joining our expanding extended family. In 1988 most of us are third, fourth, and fifth generation descendants, sharing significant interrelationship even among the most remote of us.

How significant you may well ask. Let's look at our genetic connections. Human cells contain 46 chromosomes. The germ cells, the sperm and the egg, are the only exceptions. They contain only 23 chromosomes. Every chromosome contains literally thousands of genes connected in a single file along the chromosome filament like buttons on a string.

Each of us started out as a single cell, a zygote, when the sperm fertilized an egg. With their genes, the 23 chromosomes in the egg from the mother combined with the 23 chromosomes containing their genes in the father's sperm to form a normal cell containing 46 chromosomes (23 pairs). Before that cell divided, each chromosome filament doubled and reproduced every gene within its structure. The two identical filaments pulled apart in cell division and both resulting cells contained all the chromosomes and genes the original cell possessed. This process repeated itself until some 50 trillion cells which make up the human body were produced, all duplicates of those original 23 chromosome pairs and the genes they contained. The chromosomes in our bodies are roughly identical, the product of long lines of descent. However, we are far from being clones. Our anatomical features, our physical characteristics, our personalities, may show wide variations as a result of the myriad gene combinations possible. Closely related sets of genes may produce some remarkably similar results, varied by the contributions of the various and colorful partners chosen as spouses by our Rudd family forebears.

Tracing only the Rudd element of heredity, let us assume 100,000 diverse genes are in a human cell. These are in addition to the many identical genes that all human cells contain characteristic of the human species. Brothers and sisters would inherit 50,000 genes from their Rudd parent. First cousins sharing a Rudd grandparent would inherit 25,000 genes from the Rudd line. Rudd second cousins would fall heir to 12,500 genes from their Rudd great-grandparent. Third cousins share one Rudd great-great-grandparent, and receive 6,250 genes from the Rudd line. Similarly fourth cousins retain 3,125 genes from their Rudd ancestor, and fifth cousins inherit 1,562 Rudd genes. Sixth cousins, seven generations from their common ancestor would still retain 781 Rudd genes in each cell of their bodies. So, all of us are significantly related, with a substantial number of common genes, and many repetitive physical and other similar characteristics. This is our common genetic heritage.

PART I

Early Rudd Origins and Rudd General History

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

In terms of early Rudd history, much credit must be given to the extensive research of Mary Amelia Rudd of Stroud, England. She was born in 1863 in Ballincoleg, County Cork, Ireland, where her father was manager of the Royal Gunpowder Mills for the Queen of England. Mary Amelia grew up in Dovenby, Cumberland County, in northern England. She became interested in early family records after a great uncle gave her research notes on the Rudd family.

He was William Frederick John Rudd, 1780-1876, Colonel, First Royal Scots. She spent years researching old records particularly in northern England where most early known Rudds were located. Mary Amelia Rudd published her incomplete findings in 1920; 280 pages, as Records of the Rudd Family. There is a chapter on Irish Rudds, the chief coverage being the Rudds of Clone, County Wexford, southeast Ireland. There is also a chapter on American Rudds compiled by Malcolm Day Rudd of Connecticut. He was a descendant of Jonathon Rudd of Saybrook, Conn., an English Rudd immigrant, historically the first known Rudd in America, in 1639. Both chapters are limited in their coverage and include no information on the Gordon Rudds of Queens County, Ireland, or their descendants. Mari Rudd, my wife, descends from Jonathon Rudd of Saybrook records.

We have drawn heavily on Records of the Rudd Family in our coverage of Rudd origins and early Rudd history. In 1980 and 1985 Mari and I visited several of the historical areas of Rudd history described in the 1920 book. Upon contacting the publishers, J.W. Arrowsmith, Ltd., of Bristol, England, for further information on the book;, they had no record of the printing. They commented that this was no doubt a privately printed book with costs of production covered by family subscription; which it was. There are 54 subscribers listed including the Oxford Bodleian Library, the National Library of Wales, the New York State Library, and the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. It is through these sources that the very limited number of copies are still available. While there are other books on specific Rudd families, this is the only known reference attempting to review Rudd origins.

WHAT IS IN A NAME?

Surnames as such are of fairly recent origin except for nobility. The ordinary person in times past took the name of his overlord or a nickname that emphasized some physical characteristic or the type of work or trade he was involved in or the location of his home area. The Celts, Anglo Saxons, and Scandinavians all used a single name for each individual. There were few surnames before the 12th Century. Names were changed frequently, some by direct order. As late as 1465 every Irishman in Dublin, Meath, Louth, and Kildare Counties was ordered to take the name of "a town, a colour, an art such as smith, an office such as cook".

Rudd is apparently a Danish name originally meaning red or ruddy, and could have applied to either hair or complexion. It has been spelled in many ways: Rud, Rhud, Rudd, Ruud, Rhude.

There are currently many Ruds in the Copenhagen telephone directory, but only one Rudd in 1985. In checking the Royal Library of Copenhagen for Rudd origins, Mary Amelia Rudd was told that Rudd sounded definitely Scandinavian and would be spelled Rutr in Icelandic. In the later part of the 10th Century there was a famous Icelandic chief by that name, one of the principal persons in the Laxadala Saga. His brother was married to the daughter of an Irish king. Also most people have heard of Eric the Red who left Iceland to found the first Scandinavian settlement in Greenland in 985. He was father of Leif Ericson, the first known European discoverer of North America, perhaps in Labrador.

In the 1970s Ireland's first Chief Herald, Edward MacLysaght, published Surnames of Ireland. Dr. MacLysaght listed Rudd as "an English name, derived from the Anglo Saxon "rud" meaning "red", which came to Ireland in the first half of the 17th Century and has since been closely identified with County Wexford." In Eldon C. Smith's New Dictionary of American Family Names, 1973, Rudd is listed as English and Norwegian, as a descendant of Rud, a pet form of Rudolf, meaning wolf. It is also listed as a variant of Rood, a dweller in or near the clearing in the forest.

In the 1920 Records of the Rudd Family, Mary Amelia Rudd states she found no traces of Rudds in southern Anglo Saxon England. She said Rudds, in fact, have generally settled in the north of England, and Yorkshire was the home of the family after they had left Ireland, and after the short Welsh episode. There is considerable indication that Rudds were originally Danish Vikings.

Smith's American Surnames lists the 2,000 most common names in America in 1969, headed by 2,250,000 Smiths, 700,000 Wilsons, and 50,000 Walls, Gordon Arthur Rudd's mother Rachael's name. Neither Rudd nor Wellwood made the list. The fact that the name Rudd officially dates back to 1076 and earlier establishes Rudd as one of the older family names in history.

EARLIEST RUDDS

On the northeast English coast there is a village of Rudston about twenty miles south of Scarborough and five miles west of Bridlington that offers impressive evidence of early Rudds There is a large monolithic stone on the grounds of the Church of England's Church of All Saints that is difficult for scholars and historians to explain. The massive stone stands about 25 feet above the ground, with as much footage below ground, and is estimated to weigh 44 tons. The stone itself is unique in the area as it is unlike any local stone. It had to be brought in from some distance. The favorite story on its origin is quoted by Mary Amelia Rudd in her book from an article published in Notes and Queries on 4 Nov., 1871: "The Scandinavians planted near the graves of their great men and warriors large upright stones called Beanta stones. It seems probable that the huge monolith in Rudston Churchyard may be one of these. An ancient saga still preserved at Copenhagen states that a Viking called Rudd died and was buried in the Yorkshire wolds; and that afterwards his Beanta stone was sent over from Denmark and erected at his place of sepulture, which ever after was called Rudston having before borne another name."

When we visited the Rudston area in 1980, I talked with an archeologist in York. He said it was a good story but the prevailing theory is that the monolith predated the Vikings and could have been of the same vintage as Stonehenge in southern England. The Rudston church bulletin on the monolith states it was probably erected during the late Neolithic period or the Bronze Age; that the name Rudston may have been formed from the Old English words "rood" (or cross) and "stan", meaning stone. The Church of All Saints stands alongside the stone. The popular explanation is that the Devil, angered at the building of a monument to his adversary, hurled a huge stone javelin at the church to destroy it, but by divine intervention his arm was deflected and the stone landed in its present position. We still prefer the saga of the sepulcher in honor of the Danish chief, Rudd.

THE DANISH VIKINGS

The earliest Rudds on record in Ireland were Danish Vikings. We need a brief summary of early Irish history to appreciate this information.

The Celts, or Gauls, descended from the Spanish Milesians, came into Ireland as early as 300-500 BC; some think as early as 1000 BC. They and the earlier inhabitants over whom they prevailed were generally undisturbed by major invasions over a thousand years and became the Gaelic Irish people. Around 500 AD the Irish were Christianized supposedly under the evangelical influence of St. Patrick. He was born in Brittany, France, or possibly Britain, about 373. He was captured at 16 and held as a slave for 7 years in Ireland serving as a shepherd. After his release and escape to his homeland, he trained as a monk and was ordained a bishop at age 60 by Pope Celestine who named him Patricius, a noble Roman name. St. Patrick was sent to convert Ireland as a missionary with twenty priests and deacons in 432. They traveled widely and converted rulers and their courts and the common people as well until St. Patrick's death in 460. The monasteries of Ireland grew and flourished as centers of culture and knowledge for some 300 years. There were Irish seminaries of Christian and classical learning during the Dark Ages (500-1000 AD). Latin and Greek were brought to Ireland by Europeans fleeing the tides of barbarism which followed the fall of the Roman Empire in the fifth century. These languages were preserved in Ireland which became the center of learning for classical literature also. In the fifth century scholars traveled to be educated in St. Patrick's monastery, church, and school in Armagh. Educational and ecclesiastical missionaries went out from Ireland to all parts of the then known world from these centers of wealth and literary treasures.

During this extended period, Norsemen had revolutionized ship building with the development of the keel, a stabilizing main timber extending the full length of a ship. This made open sea travel possible over long distances. The Age of the Vikings was 800-1050 AD. They used the combined powers of the wind and oars to travel the far reaches of the known world. They were scourging the European and Russian coasts and conducting hit and run raids up navigable rivers well before 800 AD. Soon fleets of vessels took over entire areas and established colonies.

Northern England was an early target located across the North Sea to the south. York was captured in 886 and renamed Jorvek. It became first the Norwegian and later the Danish capital of Northumbria which covered a large part of northern England and remained Viking territory for 100 years. Late in the 800's the Danes actually divided the rest of England with Alfred the Great, the Anglo-Saxon king. Viking raids had started around 786. Three Danish Viking brothers, sons of Ragnar, took most of England except Alfred's Wessex. There was a treaty with Alfred in 886. The Saxons fought back and gradually recovered Danish controlled territory. By 954, Alfred's grandson, Edred, took back Northumbria and pushed the Vikings out. In 980 Vikings renewed their raids and England ultimately became Viking territory again. King Canute I (Sven I) was King of Denmark and England. His son Harold I, became King of England and ruled till 1040. By 1042 the Vikings were again losing power.

The early Vikings had control of the islands along the Scottish and Irish coasts: the Orkneys, the Isle of Man, the Hebrides, and the Shetlands. Vikings settled Iceland around 900. Stories tell of Vikings stealing or marrying wives in Northern Ireland to take to Iceland. Two-thirds of the present Icelandic population have Scandinavian roots; the other one-third have Irish and Scot roots.

In Ireland the monasteries were prime targets for early raiders. Colonies were planted at major river mouths. Dublin was a fortified Viking stockade by 841. Similar colonies were planted in Limerick, Cork and Waterford. The River Shannon became a Viking waterway. Whole territories were invaded. Eventually these colonies became powerful independent states headed by the foreign kings. These were centers of trade with both the Irish and the outside world beyond Ireland. All of this developed through times on in-fighting with Irish chiefs for territorial rights; Vikings allied with Irish chiefs against the chiefs' enemies. Ireland was fragmented and weakened by tribal rivalries.

Earliest Vikings in Ireland were mostly Norwegians called "White Heathen" by the Irish for their tunics of cloth and leather. The Danes were better organized and were the first to use body armor. They were called "Black Heathen" by the Irish for their dark metal coats of mail, helmets, and visors, and their black long ships. As early as 847 a Danish armada of "seven score" (140) ships descended on the east coast of Ireland, not to fight the Irish but to challenge their Norwegian "cousins" in their Irish coastal settlements. They plundered and burned the libraries at St. Patrick's school in Armagh eight times. The Danes defeated the Norwegians at the battle of Carlingford Lough in 851 after plundering Dublin. However in 857 Amhlaobh, son of the Norwegian king, was king of Dublin. From 911 to 934

Murtough, son of the Irish king of Meath, Mor-the-Great, was victorious over the Danes at Tara, seat of the Irish high kings. Mor was Emperor of Ireland, while Brian Boru was king of Munster and southern Ireland 976-979. In 1014 at age 73 Brian Boru and his son led a victorious army and broke the power of the Danes at the Battle of Clontarf, near Dublin in which both father and son lost their lives. The Danes had allied with supporting fighting men from the northern islands and with the King of Leinster in Ireland, with some 20,000 men on each side of the great decisive confrontation.

After Clontarf, the Danes who were still in Ireland settled down and became as Irish as the Irish natives. Long before this time there had been general mixing and intermarriage. The custom of "fosterizing" children was common in Ireland. The children were adopted out even to enemy families like pawns and prisoners thus exchanging hostages to insure peace and improve relations. Many of the Norsemen had been converted to Christianity. Dublin was a Christian city by 1100 despite foreign kings.

THE RUDD LORDS OF MEATH

There were three generations on record of Rudds, Lords of Meath, starting with William Rudd in 1076. We have no information on the significance of this title or whether there were several Lords of Meath. The only reference is the pedigree of the Northhamptonshire Rudds taken from British Museum records. This resulted from a heraldic visitation in 1623 by the Chief Herald. Family chart #1 is a reproduction from RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY. The heading, THE PEDIGREE OF THE ANCIENT FAMILY OF THE RUDDS, LORDS AND OWNERS OF DIVERS LANDS WITHIN THE COUNTY OF MEATH IN IRELAND.

Presently Meath is a county northwest of Dublin; however as early as the first century Meath was a fifth province of Ireland, created by Tuathal the Desired. Meath had been a small district. Tuathal, the ruling king, enlarged it 18 times from one tuath to eighteen tuaths by cutting off portions from each of the four traditional provinces: Ulster in the north, Connaught in the west, Munster in the southwest, and Leinster in the southeast. The new Meath became the province of the Ard Righ or High King of all Ireland, centered at Tara, ancient ritual site.

Regarding the heraldic visitations, coats of arms were originally developed to identify knights in battle to distinguish friend from foe. As the number of coats of arms multiplied some control became necessary. Royal Heralds in the Court were assigned the regulation and issuance of coats of arms and the determination of their authenticity. King Richard III formalized the function in the establishment of the College of Arms in 1484. Visitations were tours of inspection by Heralds and were conducted roughly once each generation county by county. This was continued for only 150 years beginning in 1529 through 1686. The Heralds reviewed and developed family pedigrees, settled disputes of validity, and authenticated family records. Chart 1 is the pedigree of a Rudd family from 1076 to 1623.

William Rudd, Lord of Meath, 1076, heads the pedigree. Nothing further is known of him except the name of one son, John, who apparently succeeded him and inherited his title. John Rudd, Lord of Meath, c.1105, married Avilla, daughter of Rockfield of Monmouth, located in the southeast area of Wales on the English border. Only one son, Robert Rudd, is listed. This begins the Rudd connection with the French-Norman Welsh. Wales proved to be a much tougher obstacle to the Normans than the invasion of England by William the Conqueror in the 1066 Battle of Hastings.

The Normans were in Chester and Shrewsbury and Hereford early. These towns are along the border of Wales and England. William assigned three of his strongest Earls and their armies to these areas immediately after the capitulation of the English at Hastings. North Wales was temporarily overrun but the first permanent conquests were in the south along the western coast. It was here that the Norman adventurers took over the status and power of displaced resistant native Welsh dynasties.

The Anglo-Norman families became the ruling classes, including the Rockfields in Monmouth, the Clares in Glamorgan, and the Marshalls of Pembroke on the southwest coast of Wales. The Earls of Clare were cousins of William the Conqueror. His cousin, Richard, Earl of Brionie, in Normandy, France, came into England with William. Among several grants he was given the town and Castle of Clare, in Suffolk, England. Later the family was in Wales where they owned much property in the state of Monmouth near Tintern and Chepstow close to the River Severn. The eldest son, Gilbert de Clare, carried the title of Earl of Clare. He married Adeliza, daughter of the Earl of Clermont, which indicates the family was established on the Welsh frontier with England already. Their son, Richard Fitz Gilbert, inherited the Earldom of Clare and married Adelega, sister of the Earl of Chester. They produced five daughters and migrated into the Dublin area, apparently, as Robert Rudd, still Lord of Meath, c1130 married Jane, one of Richard, Earl of Clare's daughters. This Richard, Earl of Clare, is not Richard de Clare, Earl of Pembroke, known as Strongbow who invaded Ireland and became King of Leinster.

Robert Rudd is the last listed Lord of Meath, the end of this Irish Rudd line perhaps. We have no history on the disposition of Rudd lands or what precipitated the general move to Wales, but the marriage into the Clare family must have been a factor for change in the turbulent years.

THE FRENCH NORMAN INVASION

As perspective, we make a brief comment on the French Norman invasion of Ireland which began in 1169. Dearmuid MacMurrough, King of Leinster, is credited with inviting the Norman English into Ireland. As early as 1152, he was in trouble when he abducted Dervorgilla, the wife of O'Rourke, Prince of Breffni. O'Rourke recovered his wife with a vengeance. Thirteen years later together with the Ard-Righ Roderick, the High King, the King of the Danes of Dublin, and many Leinster chiefs who hated MacMurrough for his tyranny, defeated his army and banished him from Ireland. MacMurrough sought help from Henry II of England and received permission to recruit any of Henry's subjects willing to go to Ireland. Richard de Clare, Norman Welsh Earl of Pembroke, known as Strongbow, was the hoped for leader for the army. Strongbow was a bold and daring warrior, but also a spendthrift and deeply in debt. He was interested in repairing his fortunes in Ireland. Strongbow first sent his half brothers, Knights Robert Fitzstephen and Maurice Fitzgerald, in the spring of 1169, with a small force including mercenary Flemings from Flanders.

MacMurrough joined them with a force of 500 Leinstermen. They besieged and took the Danish city of Wexford in the southeast. With further recruits they defeated a Waterford army nearby. In 1170 Strongbow arrived with more troops, after a promise of MacMurrough's daughter, Aoife, in marriage along with the heirship of the Irish kingdom of Leinster. Their combined forces took Waterford. Two Danish rulers were killed.

After Strongbow's marriage to Aoife, they moved their forces north and punished O'Rourke by laying waste Meath and Breffni. It was MacMurrough's death that same winter which terminated the action. Perhaps this was when the Rudds left Meath. Strongbow was now eligible to become King of Leinster. King John granted him this right over the objections of many Leinster chiefs. Robert Rudd's father-in-law, Richard, Earl of Clare, must have been involved in these activities since he and his family had appeared in Dublin where Robert, Lord of Meath, had married Richard's daughter, Jane, c.1130.

SIR JOHN RUDD, KNIGHT OF THE SEPULCHRE, CAPTAIN OF YSTRAD MEURIG, LORD OF THE BARONWICH

John Rudd is the only son of record from the union of Robert Rudd and Jane, daughter of Richard, Earl of Clare. He was no doubt born in Ireland, c.1155, but probably grew up in Wales where the Clares became a dominant family in the south and on the west coast. Uncle Roger, the then current Earl of Clare and Hartford, had led an army of conquest into the province of Cardigan, south central Welsh coastal area, in 1106. His grandfather, Gilbert, first Earl of Clare, built the Norman castle at Ystrad Meurig which was a mountain pass outpost to protect the larger coastal castle at Aberystwith 13 miles northwest. John Rudd was deeply involved with the Clares. He was also a bridge to the Welsh lords through his wife, Tanglwist. She was the daughter of Rees, Prince of South Wales, and Gwenlhain, daughter of Modoke ap Meredith, Prince of Powis. Her paternal grandmother was Gwenlhain, daughter of Griffith ap Conan, Prince of North Wales. Her grandfather was Griffith ap Rees, Prince of South Wales. Her paternal great-grandfather was Rhys ap Tewdwr, King of South Wales, who married Glwadis, daughter and heir of Rhywallon ap Kynnyn, Prince of Powis (S. Wales). (Note: Tewdwr as in Tudor, as in Henry VIII, born on the Isle of Anglesey, N. Wales, 1491).

John Rudd was made Captain of the Castle of Ystrad Meurig and Lord of the Baronwich by a gift of his uncle, Roger Earl of Clare. This was anything but a peaceful frontier post. The Welsh lords were far from subdued. They staged periodic counter attacks against the Normans. The native Welsh still controlled the highlands and inaccessible valleys. Further south, Carmarthen was the chief town and fort of the Normans in southwest Wales and was a prime target. In 1136-37 the Welsh took Carmarthen, burned the castle at Aberystwith on the coast, and destroyed the Ystrad Meurig castle. Cardigan was again captured by the Welsh in 1167 and the Clares and Cliffords were driven out. The castle at Ystrad Meurig, during John Rudd's custody, was destroyed at least twice: in 1187 by Clwen Gwynedd and his brother Cadwalader and in 1189 by Maelgyn ap Rhys. In 1980 we investigated both Aberystwith castle ruins and the remains of the destroyed Ystrad Meurig walls at the mountain pass site.

Substantial high walls and turreted towers of the Aberystwith castle still stand by the sea.

We also located a copy of RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY by Mary A. Rudd in Wales National Library in Aberystwith where the University of Wales is also located. There is much less to view on the barren knoll some distance behind the present post office at the village of Ystrad Meurig which straddles a small but strategic pass between the coast and the mountains. We toured the site with the present owner, Mr. Mansel Osbourne-Jones and saw part of an ancient "keep" and remnants of old stone walls in rubble. The ruins are on the present Hewblas farm which Mr. Osbourne-Jones owns. Through the centuries most of the original stones of the castle and its battlements have been incorporated into the structures of the surrounding farm houses in the small village. The area has been classified as a Historical Monument in recent times and no stone may be moved without a permit.

In 1188 the Third Crusade was being preached in Britain and France. Saladin, the Chief Saracen, and the Muslims had retaken Jerusalem, 1187. Pope Gregory VIII and his successor, Pope Clement III, issued a fervent call for a renewal of the Holy War against the Infidel. The Welsh bishops, including Bishop Gerald of St. David's Cathedral on the coast of southwest Wales, were preaching the Cause in the Cardigan area. Prince Rees ap Grufydd, John's father-in-law, and the Prince's sons, Maelgwn and Griffith, and John Rudd were among those who joined the Third Crusade. (The Welsh word "ap" means "of".)

The actual crusade did not start until 1190, after a two year delay. Prince Rees had died in 1189 and was buried at St. David's Cathedral in Wales. Built in 1151, this cathedral is located on the southwest coast of Wales. It was the center of Welsh religious life. Before Henry VIII separated England from the Roman Catholic Church, two pilgrimages to St. David's were equivalent to one to Rome. Under Henry VIII it became the Welsh center of the Anglican Church. In 1980 we located the sarcophagus of Prince Rhys (Rees) on the right aisle, with a full figure effigy in a knight's full armor atop the stone coffin, with the lion-rampant crests on the tunic and a reclining lion at the figure's head and at the feet.

King Richard I of England (1157-1199), known as Richard, Couer de Leon (the Lion-hearted), was programmed to lead the Third Crusade along with Philip II Augustus of France and Frederick I Barbarosa, King of Germany. Several lesser leaders were also involved including Archduke Leopold of Austria. Richard was not only King of England but also head of Normandy and Anjou provinces in France. He had proven himself a brilliant soldier in defending his duchy in France against baronial revolts. His primary ambition was not to rule England, but to lead the Crusade. His policy in 1189 was to put everything up for sale to buy allies, troops, ships, and munitions regardless of the consequences. He raised a formidable army and navy before departing for the Holy Land in the summer of 1190. He stopped in Sicily and overran it, taking Messina by storm, and conquered Cypress. While in Cypress he married Berengeria, daughter of the Spanish King, Sancho VI of Navarra. Richard joined the other crusaders at Acre in June 1191. Acre fell in July; Joppa in September; but beyond that the Third Crusade had little positive results after reaching the Valley of Hebron.

There was serious quarreling among the crusade leaders. King Richard antagonized most of them. He had been betrothed to Anne, the sister of Philip of France. Richard repudiated this betrothal by marrying Berengeria in Sicily and quarreled with Philip who withdrew his forces and returned to France after the capture of Acre. By the Treaty of Messina Richard set up a local government in Sicily in opposition to Frederick Barbarosa (red-beard). This infuriated the Germans and incited his brother, John, in England to treachery and rebellion during this Robinhood period. The German candidate to receive the crown of Jerusalem was mysteriously killed and Richard was blamed. He insulted Leopold of Austria and challenged him by pulling down Leopold's banner. A 1980's television drama portrayed Richard as being shot mysteriously by one of his fellow crusaders but with a Saracen arrow to throw the blame on the Muslims while negotiating with them. Consequently the Third Crusade as such did not reach Jerusalem, but after a year of skirmishing arranged a truce in September 1192 through Hubert Waller (later to become Archbishop of Canterbury in England), with Saladin, head of the Saracens. The truce was to be for 3 years, 3 months, 3 weeks, and 3 days to permit the crusaders to hold Acre and some coastal areas and give Christian pilgrims free access to the shrines of Jerusalem.

Sir John Rudd of Wales was part of all this Third Crusade. He had left his wife and three sons in Wales and set forth for the Holy Land either overland to Marseille on the Mediterranean Sea or by sailing from Wales to join Richard at Messina, Sicily. In the adventure with Richard, John Rudd was knighted by King Richard in the field. An additional distinction, John was dubbed a Knight of the Holy Sepulchre, a very significant title indicating he and Rhydderch ap Cawdor, Grufydd ap Elidyr Goch, and Harry Dhu, also bearing the title, actually entered Jerusalem. While in Jerusalem Sir John Rudd donated his lands in Wales to maintain the House of Saint John in Jerusalem.

Sir John Rudd accompanied King Richard on the homeward journey. To avoid Philip's hostility in France, they sailed through the Adriatic Sea. They repulsed Greek pirate attacks and their ship was driven ashore near Venice in a storm. The Germans were provoked with Richard after the politics in Messina. In Austria itself, Leopold was to be avoided. Richard disguised himself as a pilgrim and headed north through the mountains with a very small party toward Vienna. Sir John Rudd was reported to be the only knight in the party along with at least one pageboy. After several days of strenuous mountain climbing with three days without food, they reached the Austrian village of Gynacia. Locals claim this is now Erdberg inside the city limits of present-day Vienna. They risked sending the disguised pageboy in search of food. Tragically, his too-rich-looking gloves and rather lavish purchases aroused local suspicions. Archduke Leopold's men were alerted. They tortured the boy who soon revealed where King Richard was. In the resulting attack, ill-fated defense, and capture of King Richard, Sir John was mortally wounded. He is said to be buried in the Vienna suburb. Richard was first held in Leopold's castle high above the town of Durnstein on the Danube River some 20 miles west of Vienna, between Melk and Krem. As to Richard's ransom and rescue, the Archbishop of Canterbury in England offered a reward when Richard's captivity was known; however the place of his imprisonment was a secret. Richard's faithful blonde minstrel boy, called Sanger Blondel in legend, may have been part of the kingly party who survived. He played and sang Richard's favorite songs while searching for the prison. One moonlit night at the mountainside castle he sang his usual songs, and heard the next verse sung by King Richard in response. Archbishop Hubert Waller intervened for Richard again as he had with the Saracen truce. He led the effort to raise the unheard-of ransom monies for the release of Richard 14 months later, a total of a half million dollars or 100,000 English pounds, by levying 1 pound on each knight's annual fee and a general tax on rents and goods.

In 1980 we approached Durnstein area on a local train from Salzburg by way of Linz. At the small Pochlarm village rail station, only German was used locally. We were rescued by two sisters also going to Durnstein. Dr. Ann and Marianne Neuhaus from Munster guided us through the heavy rain to the obscure bus stop and then onto the small open ferryboat to cross the Danube to Melk. We took a tiny train together for the few miles up-river to the very small station. Walking through old vineyards along the single road uphill along the riverbank, we entered Durnstein on foot reflecting on its ancient history.

We were welcomed into the Sanger Blondel hostel in the small village set precariously along the high cliffs. The Johann Schendls, hostel-inn owners, have been in the Durnstein area since 1400. The craggy ruins of Leopold's 12th Century castle loom over the village and the river from an impressive height. We climbed the 1,000 feet up the steep path to the ruins dominating the curve of the Danube River and tried to imagine the times and the plight of Richard and his imprisonment. Was he permitted to enjoy the grand, commanding view with the fall's colorful steep slopes covered in lush vineyard? Was he alone after the loss of his only knight, Sir John Rudd? The anguish he knew was not tempered by the exquisite beauty of Leopold's Austria.

Durstein is an historical and unique village and well-steeped in the romantic legend of King Richard and his Sanger Blondel. The actual land area of Durnstein is merely a few blocks in length on the riverbank and a shallow block wide each side of the single street between the river and the towering cliffs. Living space is at a premium; homes attach to the city wall as their rear wall. The scarce space is crucial in the tiny cemetery. The zealously tended graves are adorned with live flowering plants, parklike, in the 100-foot square. There is a yearly fee; if delinquent or the family extinguishes, the plot is vacated. Behind the iron grill door of a small alcove beneath the tiny chapel collections of ancient bones are neatly stacked with the skulls lining the top level; a grim solution the villagers live by.

As authentication, we quote Burke's HISTORY OF THE COMMONERS, Vol. IV, p.382, published in London, 1838: "During the Crusades and after, Wales seems to have supplied its quota of knights to the Order of the Grand Cross. Their names occur occasionally in MS. pedigrees; Sir John Rudd of the family of Rudds of Aberglasney, in the vale of Towy, who had been governor of Ystrad Meurig Castle, on his return trip from the Holy Land with Richard I was mortally wounded in Austria when his king was taken prisoner by Archduke Leopold in 1192."

Sir John Rudd left three sons in Wales: Robert, John, and Richard. As he had donated his Welsh lands to charity in Jerusalem, his family had to vacate their homes. This is an end of the Rudd family Welsh connection as far as the pedigree of the William Rudd family is concerned but not the end of the Welsh Rudds. Sir John's widow, Tanglwist, remarried Meredith ap Rudd ap Bladri, Lord of Hwnwway. Sir John's second son, John, married and remained in Wales. John II's daughter, Ann, married David ap Llewellin of Cardiganshire, Esq.. The third son, Richard died without offspring. There were no doubt brothers and sisters in each generation of the pedigree who formed other Rudd lines. However, pedigree records in general followed the coats of arms which only the eldest son inherited.

In RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY, Miss Rudd states the line from the eldest son, Robert, was a major source of Rudd descendants in Northern England. Robert Rudd married Elenor, daughter and heir to Ithall, Lord of Brinne, Lancashire on the west coast of England. This marked the transition of a major Rudd line from Ireland and Wales to Northern England.

THE EARLY ENGLISH RUDDS

RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY by Miss Rudd is chiefly concerned with English Rudds and their proliferation. She researched the records shire by shire and found Rudds generally throughout the northern counties of England. Some of them were of earlier dates than the Sir John Rudds of Wales. This is a period of very few records and general illiteracy outside the Church. It was also the era of the Black Plague when nearly one-third of the population was wiped out by bubonic plague. It had been said a person makes his mark in the record books only three times in a lifetime; at birth, at marriage, and at death; however only royalty and the nobility received that recognition in the Middle Ages. Most of the early records were Chancery records where some Rudd was in legal complications. Later the wills left by property owners and the upper gentry were the largest source of Rudd information. Miss Rudd found no instances of early Rudds of Anglo-Saxon origin, but all were from the northern Danish areas.

In general Rudds were found early in Yorkshire, the original center of Danish control in England. Some of them may have been located there for a long period of time. Others, including our William Rudd pedigree line came in from Ireland and Wales according to Miss Rudd's research. They spread from Yorkshire to the most northern English counties along the Scottish border in Cumberland on the west coast, Westmorland and Durham north of Yorkshire, and Northumberland in the northeast area of England. Rudds also spread south to Bedfordshire, Hertfordshire, Buckingham, and Essex, northeast of London, and to Middlesex, Berkshire, and Warwickshire which are nearly suburbs of west London. One of Sir John Rudd's grandsons, Robert II, son of Robert, married into Devonshire in southwest England.

Many Rudds were yeomen owning a small piece of property which they farmed personally. Some were landed gentry with titles through their marriages. Many were well educated, particularly in the 16th and 17th centuries, and many were Church-connected. RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY lists 74 Rudds in Holy Orders and 22 in the Services ranging from Sergeant to Rear Admiral. The English Rudd records are spread over 200 pages. A person with English Rudd ancestry might find early family information in Miss Rudd's research.

For general information, a few representative samples of early English Rudd families are listed. To begin, a bit of England's basic geography will help orient events. England is roughly a triangle with 360 miles on a side. The land area is 50,000 square miles, a bit larger than the combined provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia or of the State of New York and somewhat smaller than the State of Washington on the U.S. west coast. In the era of the horse and buggy transportation, when I was a young boy in Alberta, Canada, our range of travel and activities was within ten miles. Twenty miles was a long distance. England is divided into 42 counties called shires, ranging in size from Yorkshire, the largest at 6,000 square miles, to Bedfordshire at 473 square miles, and the Isle of Wight at 147 square miles. As we mention a county in regard to the Rudds, we will attempt to include the approximate location and distance from London.

Robert Rudd, first son and heir of Sir John Rudd and Tanglwist, inherited the Lordship of Brinne in Lancashire with his marriage to Elenor, the heiress and daughter of Ithall, Lord of Brinne. Lancashire faces the west coast north of Liverpool, some 200 miles northwest of London. The title remained in the Rudd family for at least three generations descending first to Robert and Elenor's eldest son, William Rudd, and then to William's son, John. John's only child was a daughter, Margaret, who conveyed the title to her husband, Sir Gilbert Gerrard, Knight. Robert and Elenor's second son, Anthony, is the first Rudd of this pedigree to be connected with Yorkshire which is due east of Lancashire and stretches to the east coast of England. Anthony Rudd married Jane, daughter of Anthony Lord Lucy and widow of Sir William Middleton of Yorkshire. Their son was Robert Rudd, Esq., of Yorkshire, and a daughter, Margaret, wife to Warren of Highfield. The Lucy family was an historic family involved with early history in England. The Rudds maintained Lucy connections over an extended period of time.

There were many Rudds in Yorkshire. The earliest record found and listed by M.A. Rudd was of Willelmus Rud who fled from Justice in 1175. Gerard Rudd of Moreby was listed in the GREAT ROLLS OF THE PIPE in 1189. These predate Sir John Rudd's death in the Third Crusade. In 1290 at Clipstow a Henry Rudd was accused of carrying away goods, abducting a bondsman, and assaulting the men of a Walter de Stirkland. In Leeds area, in Yorkshire, an Alexander Rud was listed as returning a bovate of land to a de Lascy in 1257. Rudds are in the POLL TAX RETURNS OF SNAITH in 1379: a Laurence Rudd and wife Alice; an Alexander Rudd and wife Joanna; and a Robert Rudd. A John Rudde is listed as holding land at Burton in 1278.

In western Yorkshire's Killinghall area there is continuous evidence of Rudd families from 1379 to modern times. The Rudds of Slaidburn were traced back to 1572. There is a continuous line from Thomas Rudd of Batterix from c.1640. Also Rudd families were in Allerton area of northern Yorkshire as early as 1457. A William Rudd received a writ from the Sheriff of York in 1285. For an insight into the times, a copy of one will is included in the Appendix from Leonard Rudd of Easby, northern Yorkshire, in 1568. This will is of special interest as Leonard's eldest son, Anthony Rudd, became Bishop of Saint David's Cathedral in southwest Wales where he preached to Queen Elizabeth I.

Much information in RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY was obtained from recorded wills. Ordinary people seldom made a will and many of the landed gentry died intestate as well. Miss Rudd's records show the Rudds moved north from Lancashire and Yorkshire to the four counties fronting on the Scottish border. Rudds were in Cumberland on the west coast by 1278. Rudds were in Cockermouth area for centuries where many were connected with the manors of Lord Lucy. At least two Rudds were in Lord Lucy's army c.1300 in the war with the Scots. Mary Amelia Rudd's family was among the Dovenby Rudds dating back to Robert Rudd in the Parish of Bridekirk in the early 1600s. A Benjamin Rudd of Cumberland, c.1700, emigrated to Dublin. He started a brief line of Dublin Rudds which lasted three generations.

The first recorded Westmorland County Rudd, northwest of Yorkshire, was John Rudd who sought sanctuary in Durham Cathedral in 1503 after killing an Xtopher Kirke in self defense. There were at least six branches of Rudds in Westmorland dating back to 1500's.

George Rudd was a distinguished member of the University of Oxford as attested to in his will dated 1584. In Durham, the county due north of Yorkshire, Ranulphus Rud was in the Halmote Rolls in 1296.

John Rude was Dean of Lanchester in 1483. At least six generations of Durham Rudds descended from John Rudd, born c.1610, in Stanford, Westmorland County. This family line included a vicar in 1689, a Lawyer to the Bishop in 1721, and a Fellow of Trinity College in 1701 among other notables. The County of Northumberland on the northeastern boundary of England with Scotland also contributed early Rudds where the Assize Rolls listed a John Rudd in 1269.

Scions of the Rudd family had drifted south from Yorkshire along the east coast to Lincolnshire about 120 miles north of London. The first notation of a Rudd in Lincolnshire was found in a Charter of King John in 1201 listing certain gifts to the Church by Nicol Rudde and Wilmus Rudde. In 1336 William Rudde was among those pardoned for their outlawry in the County of Lincolnshire. In July, 1523, the King's assent was granted to the election of John Rudd as Mayor of Boston. Many Rudds were located at Winterton and Quadring. Henry Rudd of Winterton had a distinguished career at Cambridge University. His first degree was granted in 1477. There were at least five generations of Rudds at Quadring. Also on the east coast, Norfolk is 90 miles northeast of London. The earliest record found of Rudds in Norfolk was in 1324 when John Rudde and his wife were listed in land records. Another John Rudd was a Priest of the Parish School of Kirksted in 1560. The Brandenham area records showed many Rudd entries from 1539 to 1760.

Northamptonshire is roughly in the center of England east of Birmingham and 60 miles northwest of London. It is the final English home of the William Rudd descendants from Ireland. These are the Rudds of Higham Ferrers where six generations of Rudds lived from c.1500 to 1630. This family comprises the second half of Chart 1 which resulted from the Official Visitation of Northamptonshire in 1618-1619. Actually they descended from Thomas Rudd of Upper Dean in Bedfordshire who descended from John Rudd who was the youngest son of Elenor and Robert Rudd, Lord of Brinne, in Lancashire. Thomas Rudd's grandson, Thomas, married Alice Pemberton, daughter of Robert Pemberton of Rushdon, making the first recorded Rudd connection with the ancient Pemberton family. At least three later Rudd-Pemberton marriages followed.

There were earlier Rudds in Northamptonshire: a Clergyman, John Rudde, Pbr. (Presbyter) was recorded December, 1392. A plate in the Chancel of Higham Ferrers dated 1436 commemorates a Thomas Rudd.

Some 30 miles north of London and southeast of Northampton, Bedfordshire also had its quota of early Rudds. Thomas Rudd, the ancestor of the Higham Ferrers Rudds, settled in Upper Dean where one Thomas Rudd was mayor. The will of another Thomas Rudd, a wealthy haberdasher, was recorded in 1597. In the late 1500s the family of Edmond Rudd showed at least eight generations in the Bedfordshire area. Miss Rudd's record of Rudds who moved into London was brief: "Thomas Rudd to London".

Closer to London's northern and northeastern suburbs are the counties of Hertfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Essex; all were home areas of early Rudds. In Hertford in 1590 a Clement Rudd was appointed Rector in Preston in succession to his father. The will of Richard Rudd at Lilley, 1534, showed the family ownership of Walden End in King's Walden. Some Hertfordshire Rudds became early Quakers when it was not then a popular religion. Samuel Rudd was reported as "suffering much persecution for his adherence to that faith". The family of Thomas Rudde, c.1575; which included his son, Thomas, and three grandsons, Thomas, William, and John; was labeled "The Rudds of Buckinghamshire", the only Rudd or Rudde family recorded there in the Oxford area northwest of London.

In 1634 the Official Visitation of Essex showed a John Rudd family in Pitling consisting of two sons and four grandchildren. Mathew Rudd, the younger son born 1555, entered the Law. Humphrey Rudd, son of a William Rudd, headed the Rudd family at Orsett in County Essex. He was a sea-merchant who died in Galway, Ireland, returning from the East Indies where he had purchased large amounts of merchandise.

In areas west and northwest of London, Rudds survived in the counties of Middlesex, Berkshire, and Warwickshire. The 1566 will of a Thomas Rudd was the earliest Rudd will found recorded in Middlesex. Another Thomas Rudd, yeoman, left his body to be decently buried in the Parish churchyard in Enfield. In 1625, Anthonie Rudd, citizen and "milliner" of London, made a petition concerning money matters against Dorothy Carnabie. The deaths of several Rudds were recorded in London Quaker records: Martha, 1663; Mary, 1665; Elizabeth 1666; Solomon, 1669; and Samuel Rudd, 1675. Research indicated these Rudds originated in Hertfordshire. Records in 29 parishes in London yielded 76 Rudd entries. In Berkshire, a short line of Rudds was headed by a William Rudd of Childray who recorded his will in 1546 listing four sons and two daughters. Another Robert Rudd made his will in 1558, listing five sons and a daughter. A small colony of Rudds resided in Warwickshire, some 60 miles northwest of London, including the famed Coventry and Stratford-Upon-Avon areas. An Edward Rudd of Kyngton made his will in 1560. John Rudd of Idlicott left his estate to Maria Rudd in 1695.

Even though the William Rudd, Lord of Meath, 1066, Dublin, pedigree ended with one daughter, Judith of Higham Ferrers, England, who died childless in 1681, Rudds were flourishing through other Rudd family lines.

ANTHONY RUDD, BISHOP OF ST. DAVID'S CATHEDRAL, WALES

The remarkable career of an outstanding Yorkshire Rudd who served the Church in Wales in the era of Queen Elizabeth I needs to be studied as he provoked sensational Rudd history. Anthony Rudd was the eldest son of Leonard Rudd of Easby, northern Yorkshire. Leonard Rudd's Will is printed in detail in the Appendix as a commentary on the life and times. Anthony was born in 1548. He entered Trinity College at Cambridge University, receiving his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1566; his Masters degree in 1570, and his B.D. in 1577. He later became Dean of Gloucester Cathedral in 1584 for 10 years.

During this time he married Anne Dalton who was from the ancient family of Daltons of Lancashire. In 1594 Dr. Rudd became Bishop Rudd, head of St. Davids Cathedral near the southwest tip of Wales. We have described St. David's as the 1189 burial place of Prince Rees, Prince of South Wales, who was Sir John Rudd's father-in-law. Bishop Rudd moved with his wife and two sons to the Parish of Llangathen, some twelve miles from Carmarthen where he had purchased the Aberglasney estate in the vale of Towy. This property was nearly 45 miles from St. David's Cathedral where he must have spent much of his time. This was where he lived out his life. He was Bishop from 1595 until his death in 1614. Two significant incidents in his life are recorded in English and Church history.

As a leading bishop, Anthony was in line for serious consideration as religious head of the Church of England as the Archbishop of Canterbury Cathedral. On 28 March, 1596, Bishop Rudd endangered his prospects for such an appointment in a sermon he preached before Queen Elizabeth I during the observance of Lent. His text was the 12th verse of the 90th Psalm: "Teach us to number our days, that we may applie our hearts unto wisdome."

A quote from Aikin's Memoirs of the Court of Queen Elizabeth indicates the precarious position in which the Bishop was placing himself in raising the point of Queen Elizabeth's mortality: "The further Elizabeth descended into the vale of years the stronger were her efforts to make ostentation of a youthful gaiety of spirits and an unfailing alacrity in the pursuit of pleasure; though avarice, the vice of age, mingled strangely with these her juvenile affections. To remark to her the progress of time was to wound her in the tenderest part, and not even from her ghostly counsellers would she endure a topic so offensive as the mention of her age."

It was in such an atmosphere that Bishop Rudd delivered his sermon admonishing the Queen to remember her years. In those times it was the custom for the Queen to be enclosed apart from the congregation but close to the pulpit. "At the conclusion of the sermon the Queen, as the manner was, opened the window (of her enclosure) but she was so far from giving thanks or good countenance that she said plainly he should have kept his arithmetic to himself. 'But I see,' said she, 'the greatest clerks are not the wisest men.' and so went away for the time discontented." Recent British television documentaries entitled ELIZABETH R. depicted the Queen's walkout but Bishop Rudd was not credited in the film. This incident may explain why Bishop Anthony Rudd was not buried in 1614 at St. David's Cathedral but in the private Rudd vault in his local parish church at Llangathen near his Aberglasney home. (See Appendix for excerpts from the sermon.)

In 1980 Mari and I visited St. David's Cathedral on its lonely point of land above the sea. We also visited Aberglasney and Llangathen and talked with the current vicar, Reverend Edward Lewis. Earlier Rev. Lewis actually had begun preparing his Master's Degree thesis on Anthony Rudd, Bishop of St. David's. He had done quite a bit of research. He described Anthony Rudd as a sort of rebel who was "ahead of his time". Bishop Rudd did not approve of the ostentatious trappings and formality of the Church. He did not wish any ornate monuments in his memory. It was two years after his 1614 death that his wife directed the very handsome monument erected which is presently the Bishop Rudd family vault with full-sized recumbent effigies of Anthony and his wife, Anne Dalton, with replicas of their two sons kneeling at the head and two female figures at the foot. Vicar Lewis said the two females were figurative mourners rather than daughters. The Vicar pointed out evidence of the Bishop's desire to avoid public display. In effigy his hands are crossed, the left over the right, concealing his Bishop's ring.

The sermon itself was held out of print for seven years until after Queen Elizabeth's death in 1603. It was reprinted and published in 1604. Excerpts should be of some interest:

"A Sermon preached at Richmond before Queen Elizabeth of famous memory, upon the 28 of March 1596 By the Reverend Father in God, Anthony Rudd, Doctor of Divinity and Lord Bishop of St. David's. Printed for Thomas Man, 1603."

"To all that feare God. This sermon had much speech long ago, and the sight of it was greatly desired by many. But it hath been concealed these seven years and more by him that had the copy thereof. Howbeit, now at the last it is published upon hope that it may with as good meaning be construed by the reader as it was formerly uttered by the author."

A significant historical fact: While the Queen may have been unhappy with Bishop Anthony Rudd's 1596 sermon, he still obtained a Grant of Arms in 1597 which was totally different from earlier Rudd Coats of Arms: a chevron between three bells under his doctor's cappe; his crest shows an arm holding a scroll in deference to his position as a spiritual leader. The Grant of Arms was a matter of considerable importance to his family, and the ancient Rudd Coat of Arms was relinquished. The new grant of Arms is worded:

"To all persons Noble and Gentle to whome theis presents shall come Richard Lea alias Clarencieulx King of Armes of the Southe East and West pts of England from the Ryver of Trent, Southward, sendeth greeting in or. Lord God everlasting. Know yee That whereas annciently it hath byn a custm. and to this daye is contynued that all estates and degrees have byn and are distinguished eche from other by sondrye marks or signes called Armes, being outward demonstracons and remembraunces of inwarde worthynes of the Bearers, atchyved either by their valior in the field in tymes of warre or by theire vertuous endeavours in the comonwealthe in the tyme of peace.

"And forasmuch as Anthony Rudd, Doctr. of Dyvinitye and Bisshoppe of St. Davyds wthin her Mats. Principalitye of Wales is a man (for his Learning, godly life, and conversaconn) reputed a father of his countrye, and advannced to be one of her Mats. Lord Spirituall: I the said Clarencieulx could doe no lesse (being insantlye required by his Lp) then to appoint, invest and arme hym, wth suche a coat of Armes as I fynde to be convenient unto his degree and callinge, wthoute doing wronge or preiudice to others: That is to saye, Azure, a chevron between three Bells argent, under his Pillian or doctorall cappe sables. And the same to use, beare, shewe and sett forthe at all tymes, and in all places, by itself or ympayled with the armes of his See at his Lps. free Lybertye and pleasure according to the Law at Armes."

"And for that by custom no Spirituall man can carrye any healme or Creast over his Armes I am furder entreated by his Lp. for the future benefitt, and better notice of his issue and posteritye for evr. to annex and add, give, graunt, and assigne to them and evr.y of them, the aforesaid coat of Armes, only wth this difference, the chevron ermyn, together with this Creast of Cognisannce following, viz: oute of a wreathe of the coullors. On an Arme Azure a chevron ermyn houlding a scrole in the hand propr. mantled of the first, dubled of the second, as in the margent more playnlie is discribed.

"And the same also to use, beare, shewe, and sett forthe in signett, sheild, ensigne, coat Armor. or otherwise with theyr due differences, withoute Lett or molestation of any pson or psons whatsoevr. In witness whereof I that said Clarencieulx have hereunto sett my hand and Seale of Office, wth the Seale of myyne Armes. Dated the daye of in the XXXIXth yeare of the reigne of Or. Soveraigne Ladye Elizabeth, by the Grace of God, Queen of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith etc. Ano 1597. "Quo magis, eo minus."

This Bishop Anthony Rudd Coat of Arms we most commonly find in connection with the Rudd name. It was granted during the period when Arms were actively regulated and recorded by the College of Arms. The earlier Rudd Coat of Arms predate the Heraldic College and are not officially recorded.

Bishop Anthony Rudd left two sons, Anthony Jr. and Rice (Richard). Sir Rice Rudd was created a Baronet by King Charles I on 8 Dec., 1628. A Baronet is ranked below a Baron and above a Knight. The bearer does not belong to nobility but the title is hereditary and was carried for four Rudd generations but ceased with the Fourth Baronet, Sir John Rudd, Bar't., born c.1704, due to lack of male heirs. As a youth of 16, John contracted a marriage "with an unworthy person" whom he eventually divorced in 1730. He remarried but produced no surviving male heir. His story is a tragic misadventure as recounted in RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY.

"Sir John Rudd on or about the 7th October, 1720, being then little more than 16 years old was by the wicked contrivance of ill-disposed persons married to one Lettice Vaughn.....a mean person and of bad fame without the knowledge of the said Dame Beatrice his mother or any other of his relations; that the said Lettice has for several years since the said marriage lived in adultery with one John Balckham alias Smith and hath brought forth spurious issue for which she hath been prosecuted in the Consistory Court of the Lord Bishop of London, which cause was appealed from a grievance to the Court of Arches of his Grace the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. Sir John obtained a sentence of Divorce, or separation from Bed and Board against the said Lettice. The marriage was duly annulled and dissolved and Sir John was allowed to marry again. Children born after 25th March, 1721, of the body of Lettice, wife of Sir John, were declared bastard. The said Lettice was excluded from all right and title of dower out of any manors and lands of Sir John Rudd of the Carmarthen Rudd family in Southern Wales."

HERALDRY AND RUDD COAT OF ARMS

HERALDRY IN ENGLAND

At least in part, heraldry or armory grew out of the need for identification of Knights in battle in full armor with visors closed. At first there were no laws and no rules. Individual Knights undoubtedly selected their own insignia with which they adorned their shields. At a time when only clerks could write, a personal seal duplicating a coat of arms became very significant. A banner carrying the colors and design of the coat of arms flying from a Nobleman's castle indicated his presence. Since the use of such insignia was originally limited to mounted Knights who were in service to a Lord or a Sovereign, the control of the system and the granting of Arms became an early function of the ruling Monarch. The early Heralds who were assigned the responsibility of controlling the system, were part of the Royal Family. Heraldry is the resulting systematic use of hereditary symbols called charges in developing and designing the Coat of Arms. At first they were individual but soon certain combinations became associated with particular families. A very elaborate set of rules developed for control of the designations. Since this was the language of chivalry, many of the descriptive terms used are in French.

The first British coat of arms date back to the time of the Norman invasion of England in 1066 by William the Conqueror. The famous French Bayeux Tapestry, a 120-foot linen strip picturing 72 scenes of the Norman invasion embroidered in eight colors, shows no designs on the shields of Knights. This tapestry was said to be done by the wife of William the Conqueror for her brother Odo who was Bishop of Bayeux in Northern France. The first actual English record of an official insignia is an enamel of Henry I arming his son-in-law, the Count of Anjou, with a shield of golden lions at the time of his knighting in 1127. The Earl of Hertford, Gilbert de Clare, uncle of Strongbow of Irish fame, showed three chevrons on his shield by 1138. and these became the trademark of his descendants. At the time of the Third Crusade, Richard Coeur de Leon bore three golden lions "passant" (walking and looking to the right) on his shield which was the beginning of Royal Arms of England. In 1484 Richard III formalized the system by establishing the College of Arms headed by the Duke of Norfolk who is the hereditary Earl Marshall in England responsible for all ceremonial affairs.

He was assigned a group of thirteen assistants: three Kings of Arms (Garter, Clarenceau, and Norroy); six Heralds from different geographic areas (Windsor, Somerset, York, Lancaster, Chester, and Richmond); and four Pursuivants (junior heralds). This body was charged with control of the system in two ways: visitation or actual tours of inspection by the Heralds and/or establishment of a Court of Chivalry to settle disputes. Henry VIII (1491-1547) issued the first commission which sent out the Heralds on inspection tours one county at a time. The Herald or Deputy assigned to a county would stay at the home of the chief nobleman in the area and issue a proclamation to one and all to come in and register their arms and have their legality reviewed. The end result was approval of an existing coat of arms and the development of a pedigree or a disclaimer that a given coat of arms was being used illegally. A visitation to Northamptonshire in 1623 approved Rudd Pedigree, Chart 1. The visitations continued for 160 years, 1529 to 1686. The inspection procedure was discontinued when James II left the throne in 1688 and has never been resumed. The Court of Chivalry still exists but is inactive. Long after the days of armor, coats of arms had become as much honored as titles and considered a symbol of gentility. A grant of Arms from the Sovereign or his Commissioners, the King of Arms, was a patent of admission into the rank of minor nobility. Originally a coat of arms was approved for or assigned to an individual. It was inheritable but only by the eldest son, the heir. Later the inheritance was extended to all sons with special markings for each. A daughter could inherit a coat of arms only if there were no male heirs, in which case her husband could share her coat of arms with his own by dividing the shield in half. His arms were displayed on the right and hers on the left. If he did not have arms in his own right he could not display the inherited coat of arms of his wife. Positions on a shield are taken from the position of the bearer; the dexter (right) appears on the sinister (left) to viewers. It was a "man's world" and ladies, with the possible exception of Joan of Arc, were not carrying arms into battle.

HERALDRY IN IRELAND

Until 1943, the Office of Arms in Dublin Castle was a branch of the College of Arms in London. The Ulster King of Arms and his Deputy Ulsters operating out of this office had wide powers of search and entry. They could enter any castle, church, or house and deface, burn, or pull down any representation of illegal arms. April 1, 1943, Mr. Eamon de Valera, Prime Minister of the Free State of Ireland, authorized the creation of the Office of Chief Herald. Renowned scholar Dr. Edward MacLysaght was appointed as the first Chief Herald. The office includes all the old rights, powers, and privileges of the Ulster King of Arms. As a result, the Chief Herald claims heraldic authority over all persons of Irish descent irrespective of their country of domicile. The only persons who enjoy an automatic and legal right to bear arms are those who have obtained a grant from the Chief Herald or who descend in a proven and unbroken male line from an ancestor who had a legal coat of arms.

The resulting coats of arms can be divided into three categories:

Major Nobility; persons with titles of honor; Knights and above.

Minor Nobility; persons ranked as Esquire or Gentleman, in Ireland, the outward manifestation of gentility. Heraldically, a gentleman must be an armiger descended from a family which had enjoyed arms for at least three generations.

Burger Arms: do not convey gentry status; in effect are similar to familial "trademarks". This is the coat of arms today's families generally aspire to. Too often such coats of arms are used without authorization (illegally), issued to someone previously with the same family surname but with no common ancestor. In Ireland the legal use of coats of arms as family trademarks was further enhanced by Dr. MacLysaght in 1957. He stated the English rules of heraldry did not necessarily apply to findings of the Chief Herald of Ireland. He contended that all persons descended from a common ancestor, a sept, or Irish clan, could display a family coat of arms without any impropriety. Such Burger arms could never be used in the personal sense as legal proof of birth or a personal form of feudal property which pertains to armigers alone.

RUDD COATS OF ARMS

RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY (on page 3) lists 10 different coats of arms borne by various Rudd family branches apparently on record in BURKE'S GENERAL ARMOURY. The oldest and most widely used is the ancient arms of the Rudds of Yorkshire as authenticated in the pedigree of the Rudds of Northamptonshire made during the Herald's Visitation of 1623. "Azure, a lion rampant or; a canton of the second" (a blue shield with a golden lion rearing on the hind legs, with a small square in the upper right corner which also contains a rearing golden lion). The Crest, which is also part of the coat of arms, is "A lion rampant or, holding an escutcheon (shield) azure, charged with a canton or." These date from 1076 when William Rudd was Lord of Meath in Ireland. This is earlier than the first shield insignias noted in England. These three generations of Rudd Lords of Meath were undoubtedly Irish Barons owning and protecting an area under the general jurisdiction of the King of Dublin who was Danish. If there was any granting of arms at that time, it would have been done through the Danish hierarchy. When the existing Herald's College records were searched, there was no entry of these arms as they existed long before the Herald's College was created. However, they are authentic and are shown in the 1623 Heraldic Visitation records as reproduced in Chart 1. The source of the insignia may never be known but the lion was used as a regal symbol in many royal and titled coats of arms in England, Wales, and Denmark.

Many variations of this basic insignia resulted from marriages with wives holding heraldic rights. Chart 1 shows the first variations when John Rudd, Lord of Meath, married Avilla, heir of Rockfield of Monmouth. The Rudd arms are on the dexter side of the shield (on the bearer's right). Avilla's coat of arms is on the sinister side; (on the bearer's left) according to rules. This is called impaling.

In the next generation John and Avilla's son Robert Rudd's arms are impaled with the chevrons of Richard Fitzgilbert, Earl of Clare, which were then assumed with his marriage to Jane, daughter of the Earl. Sir John Rudd, son of Robert and Jane, then impaled his Arms with those of his wife, Tanglwist, a coat of arms very similar except for the bordure and no canton. The last coat of arms illustrated in Chart 1 shows the Rudd crest; a lion of gold, rampant, holding a blue shield carrying a gold canton in the upper dexter corner that is not visible in the small sketch. This coat of arms also demonstrated quartering; when the man's Arms are in the first and fourth quarters and the woman's Arms are in the second and third: thus additional Arms are added by submission of the shield. (or indicates gold)

The coat of arms granted to Bishop Anthony Rudd by Queen Elizabeth in 1597 was completely different from the traditional Rudd coats of arms, although he was a Yorkshire Rudd: a blue shield carrying an ermine chevron between three silver bells; the crest an arm holding a scroll.

Another coat of arms of interest is that of Rev. Eric Rudd, Vicar of Thorn and Appleby, Lincolnshire, in 1773. His father's and his arms were combinations of earlier grantings. The traditional Yorkshire arms with a lion rampant were quartered with his mother's, the Sutherland arms. The crest he used was Bishop Anthony Rudd's arm holding a scroll. A further addition was the first noted use of a motto on Rudd arms: "Pro rege et grege" (For King and Country) above the arms; under the shield: "In cruce salus" (In The Cross Salvation). A motto is not considered as part of an official coat of arms. It can be changed without a formal granting. There were other Rudd coats of arms but these are the major examples.

A FAMILY COAT OF ARMS FOR CURRENT RUDD DESCENDANTS

The 1957 proviso by the Chief Herald of the Republic of Ireland encourages granting of modern coats of arms to cover families with a common ancestor, and to be used as family trademarks in general. The recently granted Rudd Coat of Arms appears as a frontispiece in this volume. The approval by Mr. Donal Begley, as Chief Herald of Ireland, recognizes his heraldic authority over all persons of Irish descent regardless of their country of domicile. The use of such a trademark is a link with history; to our ancestral heritage. In no way is it a reflection on our citizenship in our respective countries. Since there is no official policy on the use of heraldic Arms in most countries, it makes the matter of heraldic etiquette more important. The very proper use of one's Arms and respect for the Arms of others is a matter of manners. Etiquette is a matter of social practice, not legal restraint. The formal rules developed in use of a coat of arms are many. Suffice to say, a degree of respect should be shown in the use of arms. When used on articles, quality is a major factor; valued and cherished family articles are considered appropriate. Use of arms as decorative motifs on plaques, rings, good stationary, and paintings is perfectly acceptable.

The actual approved Rudd coat of arms for all descendants of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood

Rudd is a composite of several arms borne by and granted to Rudd ancestors. The azure shield is in part retained along with the lion rampant of the old Yorkshire Rudds. The chevrons of the Earl of Clare, the crest with arm erect holding a scroll from Bishop Anthony Rudd, and the motto from Reverend Eric Rudd, Vicar of Thorn, are all taken in part from existing coats of arms. The more recent symbolism added includes the fleur-de-lis for our French Huguenot connections and the shamrock, or trefoil, for our Irish roots. The nine red and white stripes represent the nine Rudd family branches descending from Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd. The red, white, and blue colors are for our Canadian, English, American, and Southern Hemisphere connections. In its entirety, the new Rudd coat of arms includes many facets of Rudd family history and it is a very proper trademark for the Gordon Arthur Rudd descendants. (See Appendix for a copy of the Document of Entitlement and a review of the blazoning of the Rudd Patent of Arms.)

HISTORY: ENGLISH VS. IRISH, 1100-1850

Perhaps most of our Rudd family members are not too familiar with Irish history of the Middle Ages and the interaction with the English. Some background material will give perspective, understanding, and appreciation of our Irish origins. With our apologies to the scholars, we offer a sketch of Irish-English history.

An historic 1171 invasion of Ireland was led by Richard Fitzgilbert de Clare, Earl of Pembroke, called Strongbow, and the Norman Welsh knights during the reign of Henry II. John, Henry's youngest son, later King John, was proclaimed Lord of Ireland in 1185.

The Normans carved out kingdoms; settling and fortifying. The Irish fought back effectively as they began to develop some armor whose earlier use had been considered unmanly. The Irish brought in their own mercenaries from the north of Scotland, the gall-oglach (gallaoglass), the famous Norse Gaelic fighting men. The Irish Chief O'More of County Leix was said to have leveled eight of the Norman castles in one day in Ireland.

The Statute of Kilkenny, passed by the English in 1367, made it high treason for Norman-Anglo-Gaels and English to adopt Irish dress, speak the Irish language, practice Irish culture and their customs, and to intermarry with the Irish. All this had little real effect outside (beyond) The Pale. (To grow a mustache warranted the death penalty.)

Actually by 1400 the Irish Chiefs were back in control. Most Normans had been ousted or absorbed by intermarriage with the native Irish. It was said the Norman descendants were more Irish than the natives. English control was largely limited to Dublin and The Pale, a palisaded district about 20 miles wide and 30 miles long around Dublin city. Dublin Castle was first built in the early 1200s on the site of the fortress of Haskulf the Dane and was the center of English power and intrigue. It was a fortress, a Parliament House, a Council Chamber, and a prison. It was the heart of English rule in Ireland. For most of the next 200 years the English were too preoccupied to put together and adopt an organized plan for the conquest of Ireland beyond The Pale. Among other distractions, the second worldwide bubonic plague epidemic wiped out one-third of the population, particularly in urban areas. (In 1348-49 in Ireland.) The 100 Year War with France followed by the 30 year War of the Roses, an internal civil war among the English Barons loyal to King Henry VI and the group loyal to York, kept the British occupied with their own affairs.

In 1536 Henry VIII declared himself head of both the English Church and State declaring the Roman Catholic religion null and void in Britain. This allowed him to divorce his Queen, Spanish Catherine of Aragon, to marry Anne Boleyn of Kilkenny Castle, in Ireland, who became the mother of Queen Elizabeth I.

A concentrated effort was initiated to destroy Irish resistance. The Penal Laws which outlawed "all things Irish" were restored. Unpaid mercenary soldiers who had to live off the land turned to plundering to maintain themselves when they were sent into the countryside to enforce the laws. Ministers followed with a bible in one hand and a sword in the other to assure converts to the new church. Irish monasteries, centers of learning, and churches were destroyed. Henry VIII's first Manifesto was issued to drive out the native Irish and begin plantations of Protestant settlers.

The first plantations were established under "Bloody Mary", Queen of Scots, the Catholic daughter of Catherine of Aragon and Henry VIII. She ruled England from 1553 to 1558. Kings and Queens Counties originated at this time in Ireland. Under the direction of the Earl of Sussex, in 1557, the Queen's Deputies confiscated the lands of the O'Mores of County Leix and the lands of the O'Connors of County Offaly as enemies of the Crown. The lands escheated (reverted) to the State when there were no heirs. When the Crown declared the Chiefs outlawed, all the lands of the clan were forfeited. The Crown distributed the confiscated lands to English "undertakers" who were generally friends of the Crown, absentee landlords, and those who had made financial contribution to the project which included the promise of a payoff in lands. These undertakers in turn hired agents to recruit Protestant settlers as "planters" who would swear allegiance to the Crown, farm the small plots, and pay rent on a regular basis. In this first instance of forced settlement, the remnants of the clan families who had been driven from the land were allowed to live in the boglands, "in the fern", if they renounced all things Irish and accepted English rule and religion.

The ousted Irish fought back. The O'Mores of then County Leix, now County Queens, harassed the planters, burned their crops and their homes, killed their livestock, and ravaged their villages. Chief Ruari O'More led six years of successful guerilla warfare before he was killed. The O'More stronghold was finally demolished by Cromwell's Colonel Houston in 1652. The original plantation of Queens County was considered a failure but later attempts were more successful. However, this was the pattern that was generally followed throughout Ireland for the next 100 years.

Queen Elizabeth I, the daughter of Henry VIII and Anne Boleyn, ruled England 1553-1603. The conquest and plantation of Ireland continued. Her commands were simple: Ireland was to be brought under the Queen's complete authority. Each Chief's clan and territory was to admit and accept English law. The Protestant religion was to be firmly established.

There were three major rebellions during her long reign. In 1567 Shane O'Neil and the Ulster rebellion ended with his lands under forfeit and his head stuck on a pole "thrust horizontally" on display from the northwest gateway of Dublin Castle. In 1569 an Act of Attainder was made law which permitted plantations in the areas of Munster, Leinster, and Ulster. In 1583 the Munster rebellion ended in the defeat of the Earl of Desmond and the Geraldines and the confiscation of 300,000 acres by the Crown. A syndicate headed by Sir

Walter Rawleigh planted this area with Scot and English settlers. This plantation also failed eventually. In 1593 Hugh O'Neil, Earl of Tyrone, began the long Ulster rebellion which lasted for years but ended with the defeat by Mountjoy in 1601 and the "Flight of the Earls" to Europe. Four million acres of their lands were declared forfeit to the Crown and the undertakers took control. In this instance land was then rented to both Irish and English; however the Irish paid double rents.

The reign of Charles I, 1625 to 1649, was a period of relative quiet except for the continuing turmoil from the brutally forced displacement of native Irish by English planters from millions of acres of Irish land. In 1641 the Ulster uprising not only drove the planters from all of Ulster, except Derry, but also sparked a general uprising throughout Ireland that looked like the British might be ousted completely. The oppressive and cruel Cromwell era was the result. Before Cromwell, the Irish Catholics had finally reached a status allowing them to hold land and enter the professions, and exercise other elementary rights. The Puritan Cromwell's bloody excursion eliminated all progress. In 1649 he landed at Dublin with 17,000 of the flower of the Puritan Army. They were psalm-singing, bible-reading soldiers of God, as fanatical as any earlier crusade against the Infidel. The avowed purpose was to eliminate the idol-worshipping "Canaanites", in this case "all things Irish" and Catholic.

Cromwell housed his horses in the chancel of St. Peter's Cathedral in Dublin. His army attacked and overran Drogheda's garrison of 3,000 Irishmen north of Dublin. It was recorded that only 30 escaped and an unknown number of non-combatants were also butchered. Another 2,000 were massacred in the takeover of Wexford south of Dublin. Between 1649 and 1653 the Cromwellians devastated Ireland and swept the remnants of native population to the remote West. By decree there could be no Irish east of the Shannon River after 1 May, 1654. If one could show he had not been a rebel, it was possible to obtain some replacement land in Connaught but an additional 4 mile wide belt of choice land on the west bank of the Shannon was reserved for Protestants. The payoff to Cromwell's soldiers and supporters of the invasion was in Irish land. The result was a major change in land allotment and distribution. Many of the laboring class never did vacate but stayed and worked for the new landowners.

Under Charles II, 1660 to 1685, hundreds of families were again restored to their old estates, but the effects were nominal. In 1641 it had been estimated that three-fifths of the land in Ireland was in possession of the Irish-Gaelic population. After the "Restoration" this had been reduced to one-fifth of the land, mostly in Connaught.

King James II, 1685 to 1688, the Catholic king, gave new hope to the Gaelic-Irish. He suspended the Penal Laws against Catholics and Dissenters. These were members of any church other than the established Church of Ireland. He replaced Puritans with Irish in the English Army. The apprehensive English government invited Dutch William of Orange into England to rescue the English royal monarchy from King James. James fled to Ireland where his own support resulted in the takeover of all of Ulster except Derry. A patriotic Parliament was set up in Dublin. It passed 35 acts including freedom of religion and free schools. It did not last. William of Orange landed forces at Carrickfergus near Belfast Harbor. His 36,000 disciplined troops were mainly Danish, English, Dutch, and French Huguenot mercenaries. They had the firepower of artillery and the first machine guns of sorts. King James was supported by 26,000 poorly equipped, disorganized, and assorted miscellaneous groups. They were defeated at the Battle of the Boyne in 1690 although segments of the Irish Army fought with guerrilla tactics for more than another year. Limerick was the last stronghold. They finally capitulated to the William of Orange forces, but with terms.

The Irish were promised the right of citizenship and religious freedom. The organized militia were given the choice of joining William's forces or the French military. Almost 14,000 voted to go to France; only 1046 voted to join William's army. While the troops were allowed to move out, the remainder of the Limerick Agreement was never kept.

The Act for Securing of the Government Against Papists was passed by the English Parliament in 1693. It strengthened all the Penal Laws and added a few new regulations, such as: no Catholic could live closer to a town than five miles. After 1693, if a child turned Protestant he automatically would inherit the family property. Catholics were required to pay near double for support of the militia. They were allowed no schools, no property, and no intermarriage. After 1693, to follow Gaelic customs and remain openly Catholic was tantamount to courting complete ruin. With the quality for endurance and unquenchable humor and cleverness, the survivors became adept at subterfuge, feigning compliance with a deferential charm. More than Irish Catholics were affected by English restriction. The British had control of Irish trade and it became completely oppressive in the 17th and 18th Centuries. Dating back to the Poyning's Act of 1445 in England, the Irish Parliament itself was completely controlled by the British, as only 64 of the 300 members were from any Irish county. The other 236 were from boroughs controlled by peers and wealthy English commoners. Some boroughs counted as few as six voters. One third of them were placemen and pensioners in direct pay of the English Government.

In 1660, the English Parliament ruined the Irish woolen industry by prohibiting the exports of woolen goods to any country except England where heavy duties made such shipments prohibitive. Much earlier Ireland had been forbidden to export cattle to England. Elizabeth I had ruled against the export of sheep thus stifling the woolen industry. In 1697 an Act was introduced to prohibit Ireland from exporting any woolen products anywhere. The Anglo-Irish were the manufacturers and traders. In 1705, export of Irish linen was restricted; then export of hemp in sail cloth was also, and a 25% duty was placed on Irish cotton. King George I forbade the English to wear any cotton manufactured outside the soil of England. When the export of all meat products was cut and controlled by English law, the Irish built up a dairy industry and began exporting butter and cheese. Again England retaliated with a prohibition amendment to the law against export of meat. The silk industry was killed by heavy export duties on Irish silk and free import of British products.

The tobacco industry was stifled by an English law stating any person found in possession of Irish-grown tobacco should suffer a heavy penalty. The export of Irish glass was forbidden during the reign of King George II and only English glass could be imported into Ireland. All this resulted in organized opposition, not by the Gaelic-Irish, but by the Anglo-English in Ireland. The Irish Volunteers were 100,000 strong by 1780 and their presence broke open at least the English trade restrictions against the woolen industry. The well-known Napper Tandy had his Artillery Corps mustered in front of the Parliament House in Dublin with his guns trained on the front door as the vote was taken on Free Trade in Ireland. In 1782, the subordination of the Irish Parliament to the English Privy Council was declared at an end and thus some degree of legislative independence was gained in Ireland. Another Irish revolution failed in 1791. The United Irishmen, an organization of Catholics and Dissenters, who were chiefly Presbyterians in Belfast, was organized first in Belfast with a branch in Dublin under leadership of Theobold Wolf Tone. He was a barrister but also an experienced Adjutant General in the French army. At least Tone felt there could be no solution to the Irish problem except by complete independence. By 1796 there were 500,000 United Irishmen, but they were not united. At this time the Orange Order organized, 21 September, 1795, in County Armagh. The original Orange oath contained a clause: "to use my utmost exertions to exterminate all the Catholics of the Kingdom of Ireland". This was later repudiated but the chief reason for the Orange Order's existence was as originally stated to send all Catholics out of Armagh "to Hell or Connaught". The Orange Order extended rapidly to the Counties Derry, Down, Antrim, and Tyrone, all near Armagh in the North.

Concurrently, the United Irishmen organized on a military basis which culminated in the Uprising of 1798. Like most other Irish uprisings, instead of acting in unison there were multiple small and scattered disorganized uprisings in Counties Kildare, Meath, Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford, all in the south. The French fleet failed to support the rebels and were supposedly bought out by the English. The Ulster Dissenters were disarmed in the summer of 1797. Father Joe Murphy led a Catholic group in the County of Wexford which captured Camolin, Ferns, Enniscorthy, and Wexford before being defeated at Vinegar Hill. This is also Rudd family territory as well as Mari's Waters and Stacy areas who escaped to Belfast in 1796. After the uprising fell apart, a belated French ship with Tone aboard was surrounded and blown out of the water of Loch Swilly. The French were taken as prisoners of war. Tone was condemned to the gallows as a traitor. He took his life to avoid the indignity of public hanging.

A manipulated election in 1801 eliminated the Irish Parliament; the Act of Union decreed Ireland and England were one country under English Parliament control. 1808 saw the rise of Daniel O'Connell, head of the Catholic Committee and a very successful, eloquent, barrister. With intense popularity, in 1828 he was able to win the so-called 40 shilling votes and became the first Irish Catholic elected to the English Parliament. He was from County Claire. When he refused to take the oath against Catholics he was refused his seat, went home and was re-elected. O'Connell took his seat in 1829 when the Catholic emancipation and repeal of all Penal Law became realities. In 1840 he was the first Catholic elected Nationalist Lord Mayor of Dublin.

THE POTATO FAMINE

The blighting and failure of the potato crops in 1845, 1846, and 1847 was the catastrophe in Irish history which relates directly to the migration of Gordon Rudd's descendants to North America. The Irish diet had become dependent on the potato which had been introduced in the 1600s. Irish families found they could exist on small plots growing potatoes with a cow or goat for their dairy products. Under the English-imposed Inheritance Laws the Irish landowner had been forced to divide his land among all his sons. The result was that plots had become smaller with each generation. Those Irish who were able to rent land had no land rights and if they were unable to pay their "rack" rent, they were thrown out by land agents operating for absentee landlords. As the rot and blight worsened, dispossessed Irish renters were struggling to survive. The English continued shipping the corn harvest directly to England, providing none for the starving Irish.

Queen Victoria expressed her deep regret for the Irish-Anglo landlords and agents, but not for the Irish poor. She expressed her support of a strict Coercion Bill to control the situation. One feature of the bill called for 14 years "transportation" for anyone found out of his home after sunset or before the dawn. Any relief money could not be used for any useful work. From the relief money finally provided in 1847, no destitute farmer could benefit from the windfall until he had first given up all but one-quarter acre of his farm to the Landlord. The three years of famine were devastating the tenant farmers and working classes. In 1847, over 500,000 people died of famine and plague. A more fortunate 250,000 emigrated from Ireland. Within five years, a million people left Ireland. Irish population was down by 50% in 1900.

The time of famine is the great dividing line and turning point in modern Irish history. In spite of historical hardships, the pre-famine Ireland had been a country of early marriages, and large families, Irish native language, and a happy-go-lucky, come what may philosophy. After the famine late marriages, smaller families, English-speaking, and a somewhat more grim and tough outlook among the survivors become the norm. Most of us of Irish backgrounds are descended from famine emigrants who left the old sod, Ireland, with the hope of a better life and little else.

LIFE IN 17TH CENTURY IRELAND

Very little has been included here about how the ordinary people lived in the 1600's in Ireland. Dr. Edward MacLysaght, the first Chief Herald of Ireland, authored a study: Irish Life in the 17th Century. Before we conjecture as to when the first Rudds made a return to Ireland, a brief look at actual living conditions in the Irish countryside and in the early villages is in order. The mid 1600s was a time of transition from medieval practices and thinking to the beginnings of a modern Ireland. It was a time of soothsayers and mysticism which began to give way to a scientific more factual approach. However, the belief in fairies and little ones (Leprechauns) was near the level of belief in a Deity. It was a time of harsh penalties, not just in Ireland but in all areas of recorded history. To our present thinking, it was very inhumane and degrading for common people. Torture was an accepted practice in enforcing the law. Burning alive was not unknown. Hanging was not always enough. The sentence might call for the initial torture and partial hanging, then drawing and quartering and public display of the head on a pike or pole.

The Irish countryside had been heavily wooded; however by the end of the 1600s the forests had generally disappeared. These had been systematically felled for the manufacture of charcoal to fire the iron smelters and furnaces for iron export to England. The woods were one of the few cash crops the Cromwellian soldiers could convert easily during the period when they were not sure how long they would retain their Irish lands. There were still wolves in the open country. In 1710 the last wolf was reportedly killed in County Cork. Dublin was always the principal city, an estimated 60,000 in 1706. In 1652, Boate listed the first seven towns as Dublin, 60,000 Galway, 6000; Waterford, 6000; Limerick, 11000; Cork 25,000; Derry 2,484 and Kilkenny, 7000. Also Drogheda and Bandon were listed but Belfast was apparently not large enough. Ireland's total population was nearly 1,500,000 in 1652. Most people lived in the countryside. There were two distinct rural classes: the landowner with the large house or castle and his own retainers and tenants and the peasantry who were the working people and the servants. Conditions were anything but comfortable for them. The poor lived in very marginal temporary quarters. It was said these could be put up in a day; generally one room with no windows, no chimney, an open door, a packed dirt floor, and always full of smoke. In the late 1600s some pictures show poor country people living in thatched cottages, most with chimneys at that time. The well-built and comfortable houses began to appear in Ireland between 1650 and 1675. There were fortified castles in many areas with walls up to 60 feet high and five feet thick at the base. A typical castle would contain a large kitchen, a scullery, and pantry on the ground floor, the only place available to servants. Above the ground floor on the first floor was the dining room with sitting rooms on the second floor up, and perhaps bedrooms on the top floor, the third up, or in an adjoining building. Furniture was made inside the castle since the openings were too narrow to bring in most pieces. No bathrooms existed and generally no running water unless a stream or well was available. Even prominent people did not take full baths more than a few times a year. We read of famous people fighting body lice in their hair and wigs. In 1677, a castle inventory mentions only a bathing tub stored in a back room with broken furniture.

The relative discomfort of a cold castle in a generally cool area meant few hours were spent inside. The gentry were great sportsmen and spent much of their time hunting, riding to the hounds, shooting, and drinking. Drunkenness was not then frowned upon as a serious problem. They were inveterate gamblers betting on horse races, bull baiting, cock fighting and possibly some hurling matches. Cromwell put a stop to all such activities on Sundays. At all levels Irish were very congenial and very hospitable people. As a result there was heavy drinking at any hour. The gentry and their tenants did have some respect for tradition and the aristocratic system. All enjoyed music, story telling and much dancing. Very few of the pre-plantation Irish-English-Norman gentry ever stooped to working for a living. In the 1600s when their lands were confiscated, many members of the old clans took to the woods and lived by their wits in the fern and on the good will of friends. Eventually these became organized bands of highwaymen; the Irish Rapparees and Tories.

Away from the coasts and navigable rivers there was little public transportation. In many places, roads were little more than trails and impassable by coach or carriage after heavy rains. The chief transportation was by horseback even for the ladies who all rode "pillion" behind the man. The children were perched in the front of the rider. Produce was carried to fairs or dragged on sleds. In the early 1800s a crude national system of road repair was established under which landlords and tenants supplied horses and vehicles for road repair for six days a year and laborers gave six days work. Earlier each parish did its own road work. A tax was imposed for the repair of bridges as early as 1634.

There were few or no public accommodations for the traveler. Almost any traveler of means was welcomed at the big house by the gentry. The peddlers and itinerants often stayed with the local peasantry. Most anywhere one stopped, whiskey, milk, and potatoes, and a boxey bread made from potato flour were offered. It has been said the early Irish were more fond of drinking than eating. Early writers praised the Irish whiskey if not the food. The collective Irish, even the gentry, were not accustomed to regular meals. Breakfast was not considered a meal but maybe did call for a morning draft. The main meal was at noon with a 7 p.m. supper. Eating utensils were minimal. One account by Reverend Otway in 1698 reveals he "frequently had to eat his dinner minus a knife and to drink from a wooden noggin, there being no cup in the house." Historically, use of the fork came from Italy and into England during the reign of James I, 1603 to 1625, and much later into Ireland. Dr. MacLysaght quotes from an 1841 description of sleeping arrangements among the working class which is colorful, but perhaps not typical.

Families were large and the cabins of the poor were minimal with one room usually. "The floor was thickly strewn with fresh rushes, and stripping themselves entirely naked, the whole family lie down at once together, covering themselves with blankets if they have them and, if not, with their day clothing; but they lie down decently and in order; the eldest daughter next to the wall the furthest from the door, then all the sisters according to their ages. Next lie the mother, father and sons in succession, and then the strangers, whether the traveling peddler, tailor, or the beggar. Thus the strangers are kept aloof from the female part of the family; and if there is an apparent community, there is great propriety of conduct."

The gangs of Rapparees or Tories who worked the most commonly traveled routes added to the physical problems of the travelers. In some cases they collected monies for the use of passes or the bridges and were strong enough to inflict dire punishment on any informer, which ranged from burning houses to cropping ears. A report from County Clare in 1685 names a group of 28 horsemen and 20 footmen working that area. This was also the age when sea travel was made more hazardous by Algerian pirates who sold any captives taken into slavery in North Africa as late as 1687.

There was no official coinage in Ireland in the 1600s. Notes were issued by banker-goldsmiths and tokens by traders. These were used for local circulation only in the larger towns. In 1675 the first bank was Hoare's in Cork. There was no mint in Ireland until James II, 1685-1688, established two; one in Dublin and one in Limerick. This coinage added to the confusion of the many foreign coins in circulation. Countryside people did not use any money. The peasantry were quite self-sufficient using barter. They made their own clothes with wool from their own sheep or with the hemp from their flax. Their foot coverings were made from hides of their own cattle. They fed their families from the potato patch and the milk products from their cow or goat. The people worked long hours. There was no transportation and no money to spend. Very few ever traveled more than a few miles from home. In many cases the only outside purchases were salt, tobacco, or snuff, which were supplied by the peddlers who were also the sources of any news, as there were no newspapers outside of Dublin. To brighten their existence they brewed "poteen" white lightning from potatoes, and also the whiskey from their corn.

Potatoes were a relatively new crop in Ireland as one source states: 1644 was the earliest mention of potatoes in an Irish poem. Dr. Salamon stated potatoes were the ordinary food of the people as early as 1630. It took a very small plot of potatoes to feed a family and they could be left in the ground until needed, not subject to commandeering or destruction by a military garrison.

Agriculture was primitive. The countryside was mainly open space with few fences except temporary white thorn enclosures around a patch of corn. The primary effort was raising livestock. In general the small black Kerry cattle were rotated between various grazing areas which employed many herdsmen. In many cases, the families moved to the grazing grounds in summer. Living "in the ferns" was a common way of life. The horses were tough Garrans, small hardy horses common to Ireland and Scotland. A swing plow was used for cultivation and was often pulled by the horses tail, even after laws were passed to stop the cruel practice. Seed was broadcast by hand. Grass was cut for livestock with a scythe, corn with a sickle, and threshing of grain was done with a flail and bellows to disperse the chaff. Not until the early 1800s was much scientific agriculture practiced. Life in the countryside changed very slowly.

Urban life in the towns along the coast showed much more rapid growth and progress. During the reign of Charles II, 1660-1685, there was a period of relative peace. There were two distinct classes in Ireland. The native Irish, which now included the Normans and old English, were largely Catholic and spoke Gaelic. This included the working classes and the remnants of the old Irish families, particularly in Counties Clare and Connaught. The Protestant Anglo-Irish were the major landowners in the areas of plantations. The city merchants were mainly English and had the control of the town governments. The English tried to emphasize these differences to keep the Protestant English in control and the Irish as "hewers of wood; and drawers of water". Dublin was an English city insofar as its institutions and leading citizens. However, there were also many Irish merchants. By 1667 there were numerous taverns and ale houses but very few inns where the traveler might stay. The streets were poorly paved, narrow, and restricted with many temporary shopping stalls and deadends. A note dated June, 1669: "The streets are much pestered with hucksters setting under bulks and stalls in the streets whereby the streets are made so narrow that coaches or carts cannot well pass or turn."

At night the entire city was in darkness. In 1687 a resolution was passed requiring lanterns and candles to be hung from selected houses every night in the winter season from 5 to 10 p.m. The great bell of Christ Church was rung at 4 a.m. to start the day and at 9 p.m. when the ordinary citizens should be retiring. There was a system of scavenging which was farmed out to a private contractor who in turn did as little as absolutely necessary. Improvements were made. The slaughter houses and the fish markets were confined to specific areas, but the smell of the River Liffey marked it as the most convenient place for the disposal of any kind of objectionable rubbish.

There was no regular police system. When they could be found, the military performed some police duties. The Newgate gaol (the jail) in Dublin was as notorious as similar jails in London. The prisoner was at the mercy of the head jailer and his extorting assistants. Begging, prostitution, and petty thievery were also common with the many poor fighting to survive. The houses were still not numbered. It was the custom to distinguish houses by objects such as the barber pole for the blood-letter, scissors for the tailor, and similar symbols for the trades or family names. Supposedly most common people could not read. Doctors kept no offices but made house calls, treating no more than one patient each day due to distances and on-foot or horseback transportation available. Any surgery was done by barbers who did much more than trim hair and beards. There was no hospital in Dublin until the Royal Hospital at Kilmainham in 1684. In spite of the shortcomings of the amenities in Dublin, there were increasing advantages to urban life in the latter part of the 1600s. Book shops and publishing houses opened and coffee houses were open as social centers, the beginning of modern clubs where the men met for conversation and refreshment. Horse cars and sedan chairs were available within the city. There was at least one beautiful bowling green. Book sellers became numerous at this time. Many printers were turning out pamphlets on a variety of subjects. In 1662 the Dublin Philosophical Society was formed. The Smock Alley Theatre opened and played to full houses. In 1692 the College of Physicians obtained a new charter to assure qualified doctors. By the late 1600s practically every trade had its organized guild governed by strict rules and protected by royal charter. All the tradesmen had to be freemen which required an initial fee for some definite privileges, including freedom of the city and the right to own property, along with some definite responsibilities.

Trinity College, established by Queen Elizabeth I in 1591, was under the direction of Cambridge University in England. The 1601 money gift from the English Army in Ireland established the large library. The Army also purchased Archbishop Usher's 10,000 book library in 1657 for the college. The famous collection of Irish manuscripts includes the Book of Kells which is opened to a different page daily within its glass case for public viewing. We were privileged to view the Book of Kells when Mari and I visited Trinity College during our three month research tour, as our 1980 home base was in Clondalken, a Dublin suburb. We researched the official records and libraries in Dublin daily.

In 1662, the Act to Encourage Protestant Strangers to Settle in Ireland was passed. The French Huguenots were among the many who immigrated. They emigrated from France in large numbers after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1692. The Edict had protected the religious freedoms of protestants in France. Many Huguenots became foremost merchants, manufacturers, and bankers in Ireland.

Urban life was changing rapidly for the better by 1700. The new National Library of Ireland was opened in 1731 in Dublin. Change in country living was much slower. Rudd ancestors were generally farmers of small plots of land in outlying rural areas, less affected by the urban pace.

THE RUDDS RETURN TO IRELAND

There is no record of Rudd carryover from the days of the Viking Rudds in Ireland in the 11th and 12th Centuries. There is good evidence Rudds were back in Ireland by 1600. Early modern records show Rudds in a relatively restricted area in the south east and south central Ireland. The name was not common. In the SURNAMES OF IRELAND by Dr. Edward MacLysaght, the Rudd name is listed as "an English name which came to Ireland in the first half of the 17th Century, and since been closely identified with County Wexford".

We offer six possible explanations of when the first Rudds returned to Ireland:

1. There may have been a Rudd survivor from those first large plantations that formed Kings and Queens Counties in 1557.

2. There were Rudds in Wexford County early. In RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY's chapter "Rudds of Ireland", it is proposed the first Rudds were soldiers of fortune from Yorkshire in the time of Queen Elizabeth, 1558 to 1603. Sir Henry Wallop, the Earl of Portsmouth, was appointed her Vice Treasurer and Treasurer for the War in Ireland in 1580. He commenced to acquire an estate in County Wexford as early as 1582 comprised of partly confiscated lands granted to him by Queen Elizabeth and partly lands purchased from the poet, Spencer, who at that time was Secretary to the Lord Deputy who was Elizabeth's representative in Ireland. Supposedly among Wallop's followers were William and Anthony Rudd who were two brothers from Yorkshire, England. Apparently they served Wallop well. In dividing his estate, Sir Henry Wallop is said to have assigned the townland of Clone, near Ferns, County Wexford to the Rudd brothers as tenants in perpetuity for their services: "So long as a Wallop owns the estate there must always be a Rudd at Clone". Actually, there are no detailed records of the Wexford Rudds for the first 100 years. The 1582 date may be too early for the first Rudd settlement. There was an early plantation in Wexford. In 1611 and 1612 the British government confiscated 68,000 acres from 57 ancient landowners. Twenty-one families were allowed to retain a small part of their original holdings. The balance was divided among British undertakers. This may be when the Rudds moved into Clone townland. Definitely, there were Rudds in Wexford County very early. They definitely account for some of the Rudd families who later settled in a belt across central Ireland.

3. A third possible source of early Rudds were two industrial plantations which were established in the early 1600s. One was in the Castlecomer area of Kilkenny County and a second was reported in Kings and Queens Counties. The Castlecomer History Society published a book in 1984: "Castlecomer Connections" by Tom Ling. This includes the story of the early exploitation of the forest lands in Kilkenny area. In 1637 the Brennans brought in 600 Yorkshiremen from England, a self-contained unit, to perform hunting, farming, housing, mining, manufacturing, and church promotion while clearing the forested lands, to make the charcoal and in turn the bar iron for shipment to England. An iron works was at Mountrath, half way between Boris in Ossory and Portlaoise in Queens County. Support plantations were set up in adjoining areas. Sir Thomas Ridgeway, Lord Londonderry, planted English settlers in the woods of Ballinakill to the north of Castlecomer. The castle was built to protect the Protestant workers from the native Irish. In the 1641 rebellion led by the O'Mores, the Butlers, the Briens, and the Casells against all the plantations, the settlements in the Ideogh area of Castlecomer were eliminated. Since the planters were from the north of England, there could have been Rudds among them.

4. We have talked with Rudds who thought their first Irish forebear was an adventurer in Cromwell's Army of 1649 who may have been paid off in confiscated lands. In RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY there is a very emphatic disclaimer of this possibility: "Some have thought that the Rudds came to Ireland in the train of the usurper Cromwell but I am glad to say there is no confirmation of any such deplorable lapse from the family loyalty as the name is not to be found in the Muster Rolls of the Cromwellian Army."

5. There were other plantations of Protestant settlers in the central area of Ireland which could have accounted for the first forebear of the Gordon Rudd line. John Thompson, 5.16, told me in 1973 he had heard it said that early Rudds were part of the plantation of the Duke of Buckingham, George Villiers, during the reign of Charles II, 1660 to 1685. Villiers Manor was in the Borris in Ossory area within a few miles of Gordon Rudd's home in Rathsarn parish.

6. Another possibility: A Rudd forebear could have entered into Ireland as a hired mercenary with any of several invading armies. The Battle of the Boyne, near Dublin in 1690, has been mentioned by some as a source of an early Rudd. The date is late. We did not find any record of the William of Orange Army being disbanded in Ireland. William's army was well-organized and well-equipped but also composed largely of mercenaries; Danish, English, Dutch, and French Huguenots which was the custom in those days. Most of the actual fighting was done by professional soldiers. A Rudd from England or from Denmark could have been among their ranks.

When did the Rudds return to Ireland? The earliest ones, as far as records are concerned, were in County Wexford in southeast Ireland. By 1700 other early Rudds were localized in the Roscrea and Templemore areas of County Tipperary, in the Rathdowney and Abbeyleix areas of County Laois (Queens County), and in Kilkenny. There is some evidence the Roscrea/Templemore Rudds were off-shoots of the Wexford Rudds. The Gordon Rudd forebear could also have been related to the Roscrea branch and the Templemore branch but there is no known proof. It is very possible he came from a second source such as the Duke of Buckingham plantation in the 1660s or one of the earlier industrial plantations made up of Yorkshiremen. There is no indication he was a professional soldier. We will indulge in further conjectures on the sources of early Rudds in Ireland as early Rudd families are reviewed.

IRISH GEOGRAPHY

We have referred to the four provinces of Ireland: Ulster in the north which includes the six counties of Northern Ireland, in the United Kingdom; and three counties which are part of Eire, the Republic of Ireland: Leinster in the east which includes the County and City of Dublin, County Laois (Queens County), and County Wexford; Connaught in the west which extends from County Galway to County Sligo; and Munster in the southwest, extending from County Tipperary to Counties Kerry and Cork. There are 32 counties in Ireland, many with towns of the same names: Dublin, Kilkenny, Limerick, and Cork. We are particularly interested in the Counties of Wexford, Kilkenny, Laois, and Tipperary. These are the chief areas where early Rudds were settled. Three hundred and twenty-five baronies are superimposed over the counties. These are divisions of antiquity based on holdings of early Irish families and clans. They were used by the English for 19th Century land valuations, and have been retained as civil divisions. They generally can be ignored in Rudd family research efforts.

The two types of parishes, civil and religious, can become very confusing. In most instances, the Catholic church parishes are larger and may contain two or three civil parishes. For example, the civil parishes of Rathdowney, Donaghmore, and Rathsaran are contained in the Catholic parish of Rathdowney. It is the civil parishes which we will address in locating Rudd families. Parishes are in turn divided into townlands of roughly 350 acres, a little over half a square mile. These are the divisions that are used as an address if one lives outside of town. If lands held extend over townland lines, both townlands may be included in addresses. In the absence of rural house numbers or mailbox numbers, homes are often given distinctive names which also become part of an individual address. A typical rural address could include the name of the house, the townland where located, the closest post office, the county involved, and finally the country.

The following summaries of Irish Rudd families, their earlier members along with some current descendants, represent some 15 weekend research tours in 1980 reviewing parish records and the cemetery inscriptions in Rathdowney, Templemore, Roscrae, Ferns, and Enniscorthy among others. Weekdays were spent in the record offices: the Genealogical Office in Dublin Castle; the Public Record Office in Dublin's Four Courts; the Registry of Deeds Office on Henrietta Street; The Registrar Records in the Custom House along Dublin's River Liffey; and the National Library on Kildare Street, Dublin.

There are very few Irish records extant before 1750. Most of the later parish records were lost in the 1922 fire at the Four Courts. These records had been sent into the court house for safe-keeping from the rural parishes just prior to the fire. The surviving records are those which were turned in late or held back because of fear of loss. We contacted most of the few Rudd descendants residing in Ireland in 1980.

WEXFORD RUDDS

The earliest Rudds in Ireland of record were in Wexford County on the southeast coast. Such records were very sketchy until the 1700s. In 1630 Thomas Rudd was mentioned in a Chancery bill on a sale of sheep. A census record of 1659 lists Anthony Rudd as "Titulado" of Wexford townlands near Clonegal, a title of authority. A Ferns, County Wexford, Marriage Index includes a 1682 marriage of Anthony Rudd and Ann White or Whitty. A chancery bill of 1690 shows Anthony Rudd and Ann Rudd defendants against a suit brought by Edward Masterson to recover rents on his Ferns area townlands properties which Masterson had owned from 1634 to 1641. The property had been confiscated during the Cromwellian campaign and was now being restored. Anthony Rudd and others were still pretending title. In 1696 there was another marriage entry in the Ferns Marriage Index: Anthony Rudd and Elizabeth Silby.

The first will on record was that of James Rudd, a County Wexford farmer, dated 13 June, 1734. Records show Richard Rudd of Clone married Susannah early in the 1700s. An Indenture of Lease dated 21 April, 1738, was made between the Earl of Portsmouth and the then widow Susanna assigning her interest in the lands of Clone to her son, Richard.

There were at least eight generations of Rudds descended from Richard Rudd of Clone and many continued to live in the Clone area. It was no doubt his son, Richard, who married Elizabeth Hawkins and who stayed on at Clone and in 1740 built the Rudd Clone house which still stands on the old farm in 1980s. It was reported to be the only house in the area which was not burned during "the Troubles of 1798". Richard was living there alone as his wife and grandchildren had fled. His four sons were involved in the fighting, supposedly on the side of the Crown. Richard was on good terms with both sides and this saved the Rudd Clone house. Richard's four sons Thomas, Richard, John, and Anthony survived the battles but Richard and Anthony both died shortly as a consequence of injuries.

Family Chart #2, Rudd of Clone, County Wexford, comes from the RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY. It is a family tree of the Rudd line through Richard. We will use it as reference for several parts of Rudd history and family connections among 1980 Rudd family descendants.

Note 1: There was a marriage of some significance among Richard's sons. The third son, John, who was knighted by the Duke of Rutland, married Elizabeth Minchin. The Minchins were listed among the Landed Gentry of England. The family included Members of Parliament and at least one Royal connection. The Rudds were proud of this connection, perhaps more so than the Minchins. The Minchin name is still used, not among the Gordon Rudds but among the Templemore Rudds who descend from Minchin Rudd of Templemore.

Note 2: We visited the David Sutherland Rudd family in 1980. The family lived on the old Minchin estate at Busherstown House, Moneygall, in County Offaly. The castle was confiscated from O'Carrol during the Parliamentary (Cromwellian) Wars and granted to Captain Charles Minchin. In 1980, David, a Wexford Rudd descendant, and his wife, Prudence, own the estate. We shared a delightful, farm fresh, lunch with them and their six children and a bevy of friends, in their cafe-size country kitchen at a large and heavily laden table. Fresh strawberries were a special treat. We missed two teenaged daughters. The Rudds operate a pony ranch, teach traditional jumping and hunting, and ride to the hounds with a local hunt club. They also maintain a large piggery. David is an eighth generation descendant of the Richard Rudd of Clone. David's father, Dr. Eric Thomas Sutherland Rudd, was a Surgeon Rear Admiral in the British Royal Navy. After his retirement, he served as the Attendant Surgeon to the British Royal Family when they vacationed, at times on the royal yacht Britannia. Family Summary #3 is an extension of the original Rudd of Clone chart which lists Dr. Rudd.

Note 3: We met the Ruary Rudd family in County Kerry on the Irish west coast. He is also an eighth generation descendant of Richard of Clone, County Wexford. Ruary and David Sutherland Rudd, are third cousins. In 1980 Ruary was Commissioner of Roads in County Kerry where road surfaces change daily due to the boggy spring lands under the roadbed, so this could be a lifetime job. Ruary and his wife, Dorothy Hobgin Rudd, have four young daughters; Claire, Barbara, Amy, and Rosemary and lived in Waterville on the Ring of Kerry when we visited in 1980. He grew up and had most of his early schooling in Kenya, Africa, where his father, Burkitt Rudd, was a Trial Judge in the British Colonial Service. Ruary attended prep school and took his civil engineering degree in England. Family Summary #4 extends the Rudd of Clone Chart to include the Ruary Rudd family.

Note 4: In the sheep pasture across the road from the Rudd Clone House, near Ferns, is a small stonewalled cemetery surrounding the ruins of the original Clone Church of Ireland. In the Memorials to the Dead the area is designated as the "Clone Old Churchyard, County Wexford". Several Rudds are buried there. The graves are set at random among the deep, stinging, 2 feet high nettles. Inscribed on a large, flat, stone marker: "Beneath this stone are intered (sic) the remains of the late Richard Rudd of Yorkville who departed this life March the 19th, 1844, aged 60 years . Also Thomas Rudd of Clone who died August 5th, 1854, aged 56 years, and his wife Elizabeth died March 15, 1885 aged 76 years and their children Susan Dora died March 31, 1866 aged 16, Lucy died Sept. 8, 1869 aged 18 years, Lancelot died Sept. 27, 1877 aged 33 years. All are intered here." Richard of Yorkville was apparently the unmarried son of Sir John Rudd and Elizabeth Minchin Rudd. The tombstone differs a few years from the Rudd of Clone family chart.

Note 5: Thomas Rudd of Clone was his cousin and undoubtedly it was Thomas's family who were the last Rudds to live in Clone House. In 1854 the Earl of Portsmouth raised the rent to an impossible amount which broke the pledge of the original Earl of Portsmouth (Wallop) to keep a Rudd in Clone as long as a Wallop owned the estate. Thomas Rudd had been married twice. Hester was the only child by his first marriage in 1820 to Mary Lett. In 1827 he married Elizabeth Pierson. Of their 12 children, only 10 are listed on the Rudd of Clone family chart, and these are not listed in chronological birth order. Of the three children buried in the family plot, only Lancelot, #10, is included on the chart. Susan Dora, b. 1850; and Lucy, b. 1851; are not included although the dates fit the pattern.

Note 6: Child #11, Sarah Katherine, married Pierce Lett of Tomsallagh. They produced two sons and five daughters. Their eldest son, William Lett, married his first cousin, Susan Dora, b. 1869, fourth daughter of his mother's eldest brother, Thomas Rudd of Clonhasten. William Lett bought back the Rudd Clone House in 1902 for 1300 pounds. He and Susan Dora restored the house to livable condition, and in 1905 occupied the estate. The Letts had no children; hence left the property to their nephew, Pierce Walter Lett, grandson of the original Pierce Lett of Tomsallagh, at the 1958 death of William. Later, Pierce sold the Clone House to Tom and Betty Breen.

The Clone House has been resurfaced on the exterior and modernized inside. The Breens have restored it to its present fine condition. It is furnished with rare Dublin antiques and elegant mirrors. The walls are about two feet thick. It appears the house has settled or the surrounding ground has been built up through the years as the ground floor window sills are near the exterior ground level.

The natural rough fieldstone construction of the outbuildings plainly show the original gun slots in the exterior roadside walls which were used for defense. The Breens operate the 270 acre farm as a year-round livestock ranch with 650 sheep and 150 cattle on the place in 1980. With the help of her daughters, Mrs. Breen opens the house to guests during the summer months. Mari and I spent two weekends in the Clone House with the Breen family as we explored the locality for records and descendants.

THE RUDD-LETT CONNECTIONS

The Rudds and Letts have intermarried for several generations at various levels in County Wexford. A Lett Rudd is listed in Ferns Cathedral records; he died 28 April, 1785. There are also much earlier references to Rudd-Lett connections. In 1576 in England, a Westmoreland Robert Rudd mentions his god-daughter in his will: a daughter of Matthew Lett. The Letts were originally Latvian, near the Baltic Sea. Three Lett brothers came to England before the Norman Conquest of 1066. Letts are listed in The Doomsday Book, a survey of the lands of England in 1086. Pierce Lett, b. 1922, who owned the Rudd Clone House, has a Rudd grandmother, a Rudd aunt, and a Rudd great grandfather. Pierce is an only child and he and his wife, Margaret, have three children: Heather, 1964; Pierce, 1965; and William, 1968. In 1980, when we called to contact Pierce in Tomsallagh, he and his daughter were showing their horses at the Royal Dublin Horse Show. We had obtained tickets when we arrived in Dublin in early June for the date in August of the Aga Kahn Cup Steeplechase international team competitions. After the very grand and colorful opening ceremony and various parades including bagpipers, the first event of the day was presentation of the First Place Blue Ribbon for the Finest Young Horse in Ireland. Pierce Lett was presented with the prize. He paraded his elegant horse around the entire ring in solitary splendor, tipping his bowler hat proudly as the crowd cheered them. We were lucky to photograph Pierce and his blue ribbon winner close up in the excitement of his triumph.

For many years the Letts have operated a brewery in County Wexford which George Lett and his wife, Phoebe, currently own. We were invited to tea with the George William Lett family in Enniscorthy, south of Ferns, at the Brewery Mansion House. They have a fine Lett Family book which includes an 1820 marriage between Mari's Stacey and Lett families. It includes some Rudd-Lett entries also. At the time of our 1980 meeting the Letts were completing negotiations with Adolph Coors, Golden, Colorado to market Lett's "George Killian" beer. Many may have become familiar with Bill Lett's friendly, red-bearded, face in national advertising for the red ale in the tradition of Enniscorthy's Master Brewers since 1864.

Family Summary #5 on Rudd-Lett Connections is an extension of the original Rudd of Clone chart and should clarify many details. The information on the Thomas Rudd of Clonhasten family came chiefly from the grave markers in the Moyne Cemetery in Enniscorthy. The Pierce Lett family records are from the New Clone Cemetery at Solsboro Church, St. Paul's Church of Ireland.

The Rudd of Clone family chart deals only with the descendants of Richard Rudd and Susanna. Richard had at least two brothers, John and Samuel, and probably several sisters who are not listed. John Rudd of Clone, who died in 1760, had two known sons; George and William who are entered on the Rudd of Clone family chart. William, the younger, lived in the Arklow area of County Wicklow. He married twice and may have had a large family. We know only of a son, William, born in 1777, from the second marriage to Miss Sarah Manning in 1776. The son, William, left home to join the Royal Artillery in Woolwich, England, in 1801. His chief claim to fame, other than starting a new Rudd line and court martial for holding religious services in the barracks, was giving new testaments to the troops. A Methodist booklet Memories of Sergeant Rudd gives him credit for the Methodist Bible Society's practice of including a new testament in soldier's kits from that time forward. An April, 1988, story in the Belfast Telegraph commemorated the 150th year old "Soldiers' and Airmen's Scripture Readers Association" founded by an Irishman, Sergeant William Rudd of the Royal Artillery: "It started with Rudd from Arklow, a gunner in the ranks and a Methodist in his personal life. He put a notice in the guardroom offering the loan of a bible to any one who was interested." However, most soldiers could not read so the first scripture readers volunteered to read and explain the scriptures. There is a Ruddstreet Close in Woolwich named for the soldier lay-preacher. William also married twice. His eldest son by the second marriage, William Joseph Rudd, b. 1820, married his cousin, Hester Rudd, b. 1824, the only daughter of Thomas Rudd of Clone and Mary Lett Rudd. Their son, Charles Rudd, b.1857, entered the Royal Navy. He retired as an Engineer Rear Admiral in 1911. The Rudd of Woolwich Family Chart #6 is herein reproduced from Records of the Rudd Family.

George Rudd, brother of William, was the eldest son of John Rudd of Clone and appears on both the Rudd of Clone chart and the Rudd of Woolwich chart; however there is no mention of any descendants. This is a common situation in research of older family records as family lines recorded tend to follow the firstborn heirs who stay with the homeplace as their inheritance and then leave the title and the property to their eldest son to hold in the family.

In 1980 we visited a second farm house a few miles from the Clone House which could have belonged to Rudds. The owners, Joshua and Rachel Levingstone, lived there. Joshua, a very cheerful man, thought the house had originally belonged to George Rudd as his own father had bought it from Rudd descendants. It was a very colorful and typical Irish country cottage of stone walls and a thatched roof. The very large walk-in open fireplace held an iron crane which supported cooking pots over the peat fire which smoldered and smoked. The hearth, with inset benches built into each side of the firepit, was deep enough to sit in to keep warm as the peat fire on the grate furnished both heat and light. The entire setting, with the open sleeping loft above one end of the living room, simple areas for cooking and meals, and rough country furnishings were a vivid sampling of the country way of life. The bountiful dooryard gardens thrived near the plain farm kitchen. Here we felt the innate, infectious, Irish humor and spontaneous good will many people never experience.

ANTHONY RUDDS OF CLONE

George Rudd did have a family. In current extensive research to place his forebear, Anthony Rudd of Clone, D.S. (Bill) Rudd of London, Ontario, Canada, concluded his Anthony was the son of Martha Redmond and George Rudd, grandson of John Rudd of Clone. Anthony was born c. 1771 in Clone Townland. He was christened, probably, in the Clone parish church. The ruins are across the country lane from the Rudd Clone House on the farm meadows. The Parish Church records show his children were all christened there also. Only the Marriage Index Record survives which gives 1801 as the marriage date to Mary Shaw. Anthony and Mary produced seven children, all born in Clone. They emigrated from Ireland to Canada West in the early 1820's in an eleven week trip, arriving in Leeds County circa 1822. They may have spent time in Quebec City on the journey. The family settled on the east half of Lot 8 on the 7th Concession of Yonge Township, close to the village now called Athens, about 25 miles north of Brockville and the St. Lawrence River.

Anthony Rudd's family was part of the large Protestant Irish emigration from Ireland to Leeds and Grenville Counties after the Napoleonic Wars, 1800-1814. Following the American Revolution, 1776, the British had directed United Empire Loyalists to the empty lands along the north shore of the St. Lawrence River in the 1780's. After 1815 most of the balance of Leeds County was settled by Protestant Irish of English descent mainly from the south of Ireland. As the United Empire Loyalists had organized townships by 1800, the early assessment rolls show Anthony Rudd and his family struggling to clear the land.

At various times the assessment rolls showed: "5 acres land cleared"; then "10 acres land cleared". Lot 8 was part of the "Clergy Reserves" which were lands which had been given to the Church of England, the established church in the Colonies. Records in Ontario Provincial Archives, Toronto, include Anthony's rental payments after he took over the lease in the 1820's. In the 1840's when the concept of clergy reserves was abolished, Anthony's son William bought the farm. It was one of William's daughters who still owned the farm in the late 1940's when it was sold to the County for taxes due. By 1980 the land was reforested as a conservation area on a lease to the Province of Ontario.

In the research in the Ontario Archives and other local records, D'Alton Stafford (Bill) Rudd has found records of many Rudds other than Anthony Rudd descendants; however only one other Irish Rudd family was recorded; they were the descendants of Gordon Rudd of Rathsarn parish. Depending on missing links, this may indicate we all could be distant cousins.

With minor variations, designations of Anthony Rudd descendants have been coded with the same system used throughout this book for Gordon Rudds. The seven children of Anthony Rudd of Clone and Mary Shaw Rudd are designated as: 10A1 Martha; 10A2 Ann; 10A3 Eliza; 10A4 George; 10A5 John; 10A6 William; and 10A7 James. The A indicates the Anthony Rudds; the 10 identifies these are "Other Rudds", not of the 9 branches descending from Gordon Arthur Rudd of Rathsarn parish, Ireland.

A number of the first decimal place indicates a grandchild of Anthony Rudd. The second decimal place codes Anthony's great grandchildren. For example: Bill Rudd is 10A7.721 as he is a great great grandson of Anthony and Mary Rudd, descending from their seventh child.

10A1 Martha; b. 7 September, 1802; Clone area, Ireland.

10A2 Ann; b. 10 February, 1805; Clone area.

10A3 Eliza; b. 2 January 1808; Clone area.

10A4 George; b. 6 April, 1810, Clone area; m. twice: (1) m. 1833 Jane Bradley, 6 children; (2) m. 1857 Hannah Graham, 2 children. George was a very successful farmer in Lansdowne

D.S. Bill Rudd was unable to find records of Anthony Rudds' 3 daughters beyond their births. The girls probably died in the Canadian wilderness, as mortality was high. In the early days there were itinerant ministers only, and no churches to record burials. Also there is no record of Anthony's death. It is assumed that he died by 1835 as a letter from his wife, Mary, to son John makes no mention of Anthony. There are only incomplete records of the early marriages.

Anthony Rudd may have been the second Clone Rudd in Upper Canada. There exists a Land Petition dated 7 July, 1819, to the Lt. Gov. of Upper Canada Province by a George Rudd from South Gower Township, Grenville County. It is attested to by three other Irish settlers to certify George served in the British Army in the Rebellion in Ireland, probably the 1798 Wexford Uprising, and "behaved himself as a loyal subject during the war." The will of a John Rudd in Wexford, assumed to be Anthony's older brother, refers to a brother, George who had returned from America in poor health. No further trace of this George Rudd was found in Canadian or Irish records.

In Canadian research, Bill did find two other sets of Clone Rudds in Canada with descendants in the Alberta and British Columbia provinces. These were two sons of Rev. Thomas Rudd, Frederick Richard and Hubert Edwin Rudd, both born in County Meath, Ireland, presumably when their father was in charge of a parish there; Note 7 on Clone Rudd chart. Both emigrated to Canada where they joined the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, later the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Staff Sergeant Frederick Rudd joined on 25 April, 1884, at Regina, Sask; died 6 Feb., 1937, at Fort Saskatchewan near Edmonton, Alberta, of the influenza after two periods of service. Corporal Herbert Rudd (as Hubert on Chart) joined the Force 30 May, 1891, at Regina. After a severe bout with typhoid fever in the Yukon, he died 2 Feb., 1941. Buried at New Westminster, B.C., Canada.

OTHER CLONE RUDDS

Following is a partial summary of the two families Coded C1 and C2, Other Clone Rudds, to distinguish them from other Wexford Rudds:

C1 Rudd, Frederick Richard; b. 1867, County Meath, Ireland; emigrated to Canada; joined Northwest Mounted Police, 1884; 1896 m. Frances Travers Fields: 1 ch., Frederick. Fred Sr. d. 1937; Frances d. 1942.

C1.1 Rudd, Frederick Albert; b. 1897; M.A., L.L.B.; 1930 m. (1) Annie Lillian Proctor: 2 ch., Kenneth and Doreen. Annie d. 1972. 1975 m. (2) Bernice Kronquest.

C1.11 Rudd, Kenneth Frederick; b. 1931; 1959 m. Jacqueline Michelle Guise; 2 ch., Debra and Gordon.

C1.111 Rudd, Debra Michelle, b. 1960.

C1.112 Rudd, Gordon Kenneth; b. 1963.

C1.12 Rudd, Doreen Anne; b. 1938; 1962 m. Michael Jon Holub: 3 ch., David, Wendy, and Patricia.

C1.121 Holub, David Michael; b. 1963.

C1.122 Holub, Wendy Ellen; b. 1965.

C1.123 Holub, Patricia Anne; b. 1970.

C2 Rudd, Herbert Edwin; b. ca. 1869, County Meath, Ireland; emigrated to Canada; joined Royal Northwest Mounted Police, 1891; 1902 m. Lyall Bonnycastle: 4 ch., Terrence, Sheila, Hope, Charles. Herbert d. 1940.

C2.11 Rudd, Richard Carl Edwin; b. 1937; 1960 m. Dorothy Smith: 2 ch., Leigh Allison, 1962; and Catherine Marie, 1964.

C2.12 Rudd, Onalee; b. 1938.

C2.2 Rudd, Sheila Sarah Frances; b. ca. 1906; m. (1) Louis Fox: 1 ch., Lewis Bonnie Fox, 1928; m. (2) George Hassell.

C2.3 Rudd, Hope Lyall; b. 1909; m. (1) Leonard Feltham: 1 ch., Karry Leonard Bonnycastle Feltham; b, 1939; m. (2) Leslie Inglis.

C2.4 Rudd, Charles Richard John; b. 1918; m. Mona McNamara: 2 ch., Robin, 1947; Roanne, 1950.

It is certain other Rudd lines from County Wexford, Ireland, have been obscured by the Primogenitor Rule of Inheritance of the family properties by the firstborn. Rudds were recorded in the Roscrea, Rathdowney (Rathsarn), and Templemore areas by 1800, and later in Abbeyleix, Kilkenny, and Donaghmore. All these families were located in a narrow strip of land 64 miles long from County Wexford to County Tipperary. Our research has not determined whether they all originated from the early Wexford settlements. That possibility will be reviewed in later chapters exploring the Templemore, Roscrea, and Rathdowney Rudds.

DUBLIN RUDDS

A Rudd family in Dublin in the early 1700s was a definite exception. They were in no way related to the Wexford Rudds. A Benjamin Rudd disappeared from his Cumberland home in Northern England when he was 12 or so and resurfaced in Dublin, Ireland, where an aunt lived. He apparently stayed in Dublin and had a successful career as a carpenter and builder. He married and raised a family. The records of 1722 show the issuance of his "Freedom of the City of Dublin", a certificate which was issued only after meeting certain required qualifications and payment of a fee.

Benjamin married three times. Only the first marriage produced children with his wife, Mary Reed. She bore six sons and one daughter. Listed as a carpenter, Benjamin left a will dated 17 Jan., 1754. Benjamin had done well. He left at least a house and property to each of his six sons plus support for his third wife, Sarah. He bequeathed only 20 pounds to his daughter, Mary, as he had already paid 500 pounds as her marriage portion to John Hutton.

Two of the sons were listed as booksellers; one was a pattern maker. His son, Stephen, the fourth son, was the only son to produce heirs: one son Pemberton, b. 1767, by his first marriage; a daughter, Sarah, b. 1777; and a second son, Stephen, b. 1780, by his second marriage. Pemberton took his law degree at Dublin University, 1787. He became a very successful barrister. He never married. Records of the Rudd Family paraphrases Pemberton's 1811 letter to a relative in England at a time when he was the only male survivor of the family: "The name of Rudd is by no means common in Ireland. In fact his own is the only instance of the name in the Almanack or Directory of Dublin where he has the honour to practice as a Barrister." Apparently his half-brother, Stephen, was dead, as he left his property to his half-sister, Sarah. She had married Henry, 15th Baron Teynham, as his second wife. She was widowed in 1842 and at her 1855 death they advertised for next of kin. Thus Lady Teynham ended the short line of the Dublin Rudds which lasted only three generations.

EARLIEST RUDDS IN ROSCREA RECORDS

The Parish records of St. Cronan's Church of Ireland in Roscrea, offer some of the earliest recorded Rudd items. Roscrea is in County Tipperary, 10 miles north of Templemore and Rathdowney. At least three Rudd families were recorded in some form before 1750 in St. Cronan records. John Rudd, Sr., was buried there in 1806 at age 70 indicating his 1736 birthdate. Two marriages are recorded for John : The first to Mary Steadwell, 1753, and the second to Sarah, 1772. Sarah Rudd's death is recorded in 1820 at age 81 indicating a birthdate of 1739. Among others, they had a son, Toppin Rudd, born 1774, who died 1806, at age 32. A Toppin Rudd, Sr., perhaps a younger brother of John Rudd, was buried 1811 at age 72, indicating a birthdate of 1739. No record was found of his marriage nor a wife's name. Toppin Rudd, Jr., was married twice: five children by his first wife; six children by his second wife.

A third family of historic significance: William Rudd of Rathdowney married Rachel Wall on October 12, 1763, at St. Cronan's Church of Ireland in Roscrea; a marriage of major importance. William Rudd and Rachel Wall were the parents of Gordon Arthur Rudd whose family is the subject of Part II of this publication.

William Rudd's birthdate was between 1735 and 1740, a contemporary with John and Toppin Rudd who may have been William's brothers. At a time earlier than Richard Rudd of Clone, they or their forebears could have migrated the 65 miles from County Wexford to County Tipperary.

TEMPLEMORE RUDDS, COUNTY TIPPERARY

Records of the Templemore Rudd line began with the recorded birth of Minchin Rudd at Roscrea and his baptism in 1809. There is no listing of his parents. There were two John Rudd, Jrs., in the records, presumably sons of John Sr. and Toppin Sr., and it appears either could have been Minchin Rudd's father. There may have been another Rudd-Minchin marriage in Roscrea area; or this Minchin could have been related to the John Rudd-Elizabeth Minchin family in Enniscorthy. Another possibility: John or Toppin Rudd may have named one of their sons "Minchin" in recognition of the Rudd-Minchin alliance in County Wexford. At least one descendant of the Minchin Rudds of Templemore said the Rathdowney Rudds were their cousins.

In October, 1801, the first baptism recorded at the new St. Mary's Church of Templemore named a Thomas Rudd. The children of both Toppin Rudd, Jr., and Minchin Rudd were all baptized there. Toppin and Minchin were married there and Minchin's death is recorded in the church records. Minchin Rudd is also listed as witness in 1832 to the marriage of Frances Rudd and John Fitt.

Minchin Rudd was a miller in the Templemore area. At one time he owned at least two mills: one on Francis Street in Templemore; and a second mill at Loughmore, seven miles south of Templemore. One early reference lists Minchin Rudd as "miller-grocer-draper", which would indicate he also operated a general store. His own death certificate listed him as a farmer. He married Hannah Guest, b. 1814, on 22 May, 1833. In 17 years they produced 14 children. Toppin Rudd had married Mary Guest, Hannah's older sister, ten years earlier.

To keep these 14 families clearly documented, a code system was used indicating "T" for Templemore Rudds. Minchin Rudd, the clan patriarch, was coded T-1. The 14 children were coded I to XIV after the decimal point. Succeeding generations were coded with two or more digits after the decimal point. This code will correspond well by generation to the coding used for the Gordon Arthur Rudd family in Part II of this publication. Family Summary #8 covers these families.

T1 Rudd, Minchin, b. 1809, Templemore; parents not identified in records. May 22, 1833, m. Hannah Guest of Templemore: 14 children; Ann Jane, William James, Letitia, Louisa, Henry, George, Arthur, Robert, Alfred Richard, Sarah Elizabeth, Emily May, George Arthur, Emily Mary, and Hannah Deborah. Three died in childhood. The others scattered in many directions. Several emigrated to Australia and New Zealand. Apparently their father, Minchin Rudd, was difficult to work with as none of his sons remained in the area to take over any part of the businesses. It was his fourth child, Louisa, who was present at the time of his death at his home in Craigue, near Templemore, on 26 November, 1884. His wife, Hannah died in 1877 at age 63.

T1.1 Rudd, Anne Jane, b. 4 May, 1834, Templemore. In St. Mary's Church of Ireland, "in accordance with the ceremonies of the United Church of England and Ireland", on October 22, 1856, m. William Leake Clarke, b. 1827. William Clarke was a lecturer at Dublin University. His father, Francis Leake Clarke, was an architect. Information on family or circumstances is lacking, but Anne emigrated without William to Melbourne area, Australia, 1865 with a younger brother, George Arthur Rudd, and a younger sister, Emily Mary.

Tl.2 Rudd, William James, b. 24 June, 1835, Templemore. William married and emigrated to the South Island of New Zealand near Dunedin shortly after Anne, George and Emily left Templemore. William and his wife lived out their lives in Dunedin where at least four children were born: George, May, Eileen, and Minchin.

Tl.21 Rudd, George; 1953 death reported.

Tl.22 Rudd, May; m. Turnbull.

Tl.23 Rudd, Eileen; m. Thacker.

Tl.24 Rudd, Minchin; m.; died 1950; 3 children: Laurie, Max, and Lindel.

Tl.3 Rudd, Letitia; b. 24 January, 1837. Letitia's name appears in church records to 1859.

Tl.4 Rudd, Louisa b. circa 1839; m. Samuel Rudd, grocer, 23 June, 1864, Wesleyan Methodist Church, St. Thomas Parish, Dublin. Samuel, a cousin, b. 1823, was son of John Rudd, a Templemore grocer. Some notations indicate Samuel was from Cloughjordan.

The marriage certificate lists him as a grocer, but Sam was also reported to be a mill owner. A grandson, Charles Minchin Rudd, in Durbin, South Africa, told us in 1983: "the mill was known as Rudd's Folly". Samuel's death certificate lists him as a shop keeper. It appears Louisa and Samuel lived in or near Templemore although the children after Arthur Minchin are listed under Thurles records. Thurles is nine miles south of Templemore and may have been the county seat at that time. Christening records of the 13 children are all at the Roscrea Methodist Church which was twelve miles north of Templemore. Church records indicate the Rudds were very active Methodists over a 30 year period. The new Roscrea Methodist Church opened 1850 and Templemore Rudds attended there.

Louisa and Samuel produced 13 children: George Wesley, John, Emily, Arthur Minchin, William Henry, Eleanor Louise, Charles Albert, Frederick Louis, Caroline Edith, Robert Samuel, Ethel Sarah, Florence Mary, and Caroline Ethel Sarah. Four of the last five children died in the diphtheria epidemic in 1879. Samuel died at age 76, December 30, 1899. Louisa lived 13 years longer until January 16, 1912, at age 72. The joint tombstone is in Templemore churchyard. Family Summary #9 covers this family.

Tl.41 Rudd, George Wesley, eldest son of Louisa and Samuel Rudd; b. 23 March, 1865, Templemore. George went to Dublin at 14 as an apprentice in the old Bewley Grocery. He was paid 10 pounds for his first year plus keep. He developed rheumatic fever, thought to be caused in part by his living conditions. At the time of his retirement he was manager of a grocery chain, Levert & Frye. On 2 January, 1901, m. Mary Ellen Mee, b. 6 June, 1875. They had 4 children: Audrey; twins George and Wesley; and Dudley Minchin. George Sr. died 27 June, 1955. Mary Ellen died 28 January, 1937.

Tl.411 Rudd, Audrey, b. 20 May, 1901; only daughter of George and Mary Ellen Rudd. On 4 Sept. 1934, in Skerries, near Dublin, m. Dr. John McCurdy, b. 1901 in Bushmills. Two children, John Robertson and Mary. John Sr. died 28 January, 1962, in Huddersfield. Mari and I shared a pleasant summer afternoon with Audrey in 1980 at her seaside home in Skerries. Audrey died in the 1980s.

Tl.4111 McCurdy, John Robertson b. 27 March, 1935, Huddersfield. John, an M.D., practiced in Malahide, north of Dublin. On 18 February, 1967, m. Pauline Michael of Malahide, b 1935. Three children; twins, Helen Elizabeth and John Dudley, b. 5 April, 1968 and Caroline Rosa, b. 17 April, 1971.

Tl.4112 McCurdy, Mary, b. 2 April, 1937 in Huddersfield. July 4, 1958, m. Geoffrey Earle Cox, b. Canberra, Australia. Family moved to Australia in 1964. Geoffrey was a chemist, supervisor of a Sidney plant in 1980. 3 children: Sally Ann, 1963; Allison Jane, 1965; and Charles Earle, 1968.

Tl.412 Rudd, George, a twin, b. 20 Dec. 1904 in Dublin. In St. Mary's Church, Donneybrook, m. Patricia Lambe, b. 1904. Family lived in Sussex, England. 1 child: David Amos Rudd, b. 4 December 1943; last reported in Egham, Surrey. Patricia died 5 September, 1976.

Tl.413 Rudd, Wesley; a twin, b. 20 Dec. 1904 in Dublin. Married Brigit in London in 1957. 2 children: Ann, 1957; and Jane, 1966. Wesley died Nov., 1967. Brigit living in London, 1980.

Tl.414 Rudd, Dudley Minchin, b. 1909; single, died 13 Jan. 1975.

Tl.42 Rudd, John second of Louisa and Samuel Rudd; b. 2 March, 1866. A jeweler in Templemore 40 years. (At least two of his clocks I have seen were in good working order: in 1973 in Phelan's Bar, Donaghmore; and in Eddie Thompson's home, Code 5.164, Rathsaran Parish, 1980). John never married. He died 3 July, 1944.

Tl.43 Rudd, Deborah Emily, eldest daughter of Louisa and Samuel, b. 7 July, 1867; m. William James Harkness of Templemore in 1897. William was in the postal service. In his later years he was Templemore postmaster. 4 children: William Samuel, Florence (Renee), Lilian, and Jack. William died, 1928; Emily in 1947; both buried in Templemore, County Tipperary.

Tl.431 Harkness, William Frederick Samuel, b. 1900, Templemore. Samuel was a banker. In 1930 m. Rita Barrett; 2 children: John and David. Samuel died 1963; Rita died 1976.

Tl.4311 Harkness, John Howard, b. April, 1935; John taught history in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, area. He married Beth Hogan. In 1986, John and Beth joined us at Rudd Roundup II in Burlington, Ontario, near Niagara Falls, while they were living in Willowdale, Ontario. No children.

Tl.4312 Harkness, David William, b. Oct., 1937. In 1964 married Hilary Land; 3 children: Emma 1967, Lucy 1969, and Patrick 1974. In 1983 David was Professor of History, Queens University, Belfast.

Tl.432 Harkness, Florence Louise (Renee) b. 1901, Templemore. Renee was a teacher; unmarried; died, 1942.

Tl.433 Harkness, Ethel Lilian, b. 1902, Templemore; 1928 m. Albert Ernest Nelson, Minister of Religion, b. 1898. Ernest was a wartime chaplain in Germany during World War II. He and Lilian had 2 children; William, b. 1931; and Patricia, b. 1935. Ernest died, 1970. Lilian lived in Bangor, County Down, United Kingdom, til her death 23 September, 1984. Lilian wrote that the Rudds in Rathsaran were her cousins with whom she played as a child as she did with the Abbey Mill Rudds of Roscrae, also her cousins. She also wrote of some good Minchin friends in the Nenagh area who always claimed to be related to the Rudds.

Tl.4331 Nelson, William Rudd, b. 1931; a teacher and lecturer in arts and crafts in Bahamas. In 1978, m. Ruth Roberts in Nassau. William adopted Gabriel and Sophia, Ruth's two children by a previous marriage. In 1986, Nelsons lived in Lake Hill, New York, where Bill was teaching.

public in name only. They were really private schools.) Founded in 1902, the Clayfield (Brisbane) school has become Brisbane Boys College under auspices of Presbyterian & Methodist School Assn. It is a Greater Public School but is actually private. While in Australia, Queen Elizabeth II personally conferred the honor of O.B.E. (Order of the British Empire) on Arthur Rudd for his contribution to Queensland education. The school erected a large memorial sculpture in his honor and dedicated it in 1985. Arthur died 26 October, 1962, in his 90th year. Isabella died 28 April, 1964.

ROSCREA RUDDS, COUNTY TIPPERARY

There were three principal Rudd family lines in Roscrea area probably all related in some way. Two of these families were headed by William Rudds. Both Williams died the same year 1888. This raised some confusion among their descendants. Both tombstones are in the same St. Cronan Church of Ireland churchyard in Roscrea.

To identify these three Roscrea Rudd families properly, three Roscrea prefixes were used: R1 for Roscrea miller, William Rudd; R2 for Roscrea leather merchant, William Henry Rudd; and R3 for the Roscrea painter, Thomas Rudd. Persons with the same number of digits in the code will generally be contemporaries.

R1 William Rudd of Abbey Mills and wife Rosanna had one son, William John Rudd, who married Ellen Sophia Lowe and produced four children. Lillian Nelson, T1.433, recalled playing in her childhood with these Abbey Mills cousins of the Minchin Rudds.

R2 William Henry Rudd was a leather merchant with a shop on Main Street, Roscrea. He married Mary of Parsonstown. Of their nine children, two were buried in the same plot and were memorialized on the same gravestone with their parents. Also a William, R2.1, the eldest child married Emma Saunders and raised five children, including sons Thomas and David before his early death at age 33. Two of David's children acknowledged that their grandfather was William, R2.1. However both considered William R1, of Abbey Mills, as their great grandfather.

The mistaken story told to me was this: "William of Abbey Mills had two sons and one was favored and educated as a doctor. The second son had to work from an early age ending up as a Dublin salesman for Silicoate Company." No doubt the story of the educations and ultimate professions was correct; however, the two were not brothers and both were named William. William Rudd of Abbey Mills had only one son, William John Rudd, R1.1.

R3 Thomas Rudd married Esther Abbott. Thomas was a painter. With 11 children, he headed the third large Roscrea Rudd family.

WILLIAM RUDD - ROSCREA MILLER

R1 Rudd, William; b. 19 August, 1820; owner of Abbey Mills in Roscrea until the mill was sold in 1860. One possible origin for William would be the first family of Toppin Rudd, Jr. Toppin m. Jane Burgess outside the Roscrea area. They produced 4 daughters and 1 son, William, born 1820/21 which is a correct year for the William of Abbey Mills. William married Rosanna 1863. William John Rudd was their only recorded child. William Sr. died 25 March, 1888, as recorded on his tombstone. Rosanna died 1899 at 75.

R1.1 Rudd, William John; b. 18 April, 1864, m. circa 1890 to Ellen Sophia Lowe (Nellie), b. 1869. Four children: Olive, William, Samuel, and Hazel. Some said William John R1.1, was educated as a doctor. If so, he may have practiced in Roscrea as he and Nellie lived there over an extended period; raised a family there; and were very active in the Roscrea Methodist Church. They must have retired to Dublin as both deaths are recorded there: William John, 1921; and Ellen Sophia, 1943.

R1.11 Rudd, Olive Muriel; b. 5 Apr., 1895 in Roscrea; Dublin 1925; m. Smith, a Limerick farmer; two sons. Olive moved back to Dublin after being widowed.

R1.12 Rudd, William John; b. 5 May, 1896, Roscrea; joined the Royal Dublin Fusiliers and died in World War I Battle of Ancres, 13 November, 1916. A plaque in his memory is in the Roscrea Methodist Church: "Eldest and dearly loved son of William J. and Nellie S. Rudd, Abbey Mills, Roscrea".

R1.13 Rudd, Samuel Lowe; b. 21 April, 1900, Roscrea. On 2 February, 1926, in Dublin, m. Alice Mabel Cook of Clontarf. He was a motor agent; later in insurance business, Cork. One son, listed as William J.N. in 1927 birth records. Samuel died 1963, Cork; Mabel survived 1973.

R1.131 Rudd, William John Niall; b. 1927, Dublin; college professor out of Trinity College; married; some family.

R1.14 Rudd, Hazel Irene; b. 14 June, 1905, Roscrea; single.

WILLIAM HENRY RUDD - ROSCREA LEATHER MERCHANT

R2 Rudd, William Henry; b. 30 September, 1827, Roscrea. His pioneer parents; William Rudd of Corbally and Anne Egar, Roscrea. m. 16 October, 1824, St. Cronan's church, Roscrea. His grandparents may have been James Rudd and Catherine Barber who had a son William b. 1 December, 1797. This is one of the earliest entries in St. Cronan records. This date would be right for William Henry's father as his death was reported as 11 April, 1828, at 30; just 6 months after son William Henry's birth. In 1857 William Henry married Mary of Parsonstown, b. 1829. In next 18 years, they produced 10 children: William, Matilda, Anna Mary, Edward Minchin, Robert Francis, John Talbot, Henry, Frances Hannah, Sara Egar, and Alfred Joseph. Review these names. Some were common names among the children of Gordon Arthur Rudd and Alicia Wellwood Rudd of Part II of this publication. William Henry's status in the leather shop was recorded with each child's birth. He began as "clerk & shopman", listed as "shop owner" by fifth child; designated "leather store, Main St.," by seventh child. All birth records at St. Cronan's Church, Roscrea, and on the family tombstone. William Henry died 21 November, 1888; Mary died 14 February, 1907. Family Summary #10 covers this family.

R2.1 Rudd, William; b. 2 August, 1858, Roscrea; worked "Silicoate Company", Dublin. In 1879 m. Emma Saunders; five children before William's early death at 33 on 11 April, 1892: Thomas, Charlotte, Annie, David, and Harriett. Emma died in 1900 in Dublin North at 37, the only recorded Emma Rudd in the Records of Deaths. Her birthdate would have been 1863.

R2.11 Rudd, Thomas; b. 1880, Dublin; in 1909 m. Edith Maud Hill, b. 1884, Manchester, England; daughter of Henry Hill, hatter; granddaughter of Mr. Boles, Manchester photographer. Eight children: William, Thomas, Hugh, Henry, Edith Maud, Eunace, Dorothy, and John; all born Dublin. Edith died 1960 at 76; Thomas died 1969 at 89.

R2.111 Rudd, William; b. 15 August, 1910, Dublin; died at 8 days.

R2.112 Rudd, Thomas b. 19 December, 1912, Dublin; In 1952 m. Rosemary Saul; two children: Allen, 1953; and Vanessa, 1958; emigrated to Canada.

R2.113 Rudd, Hugh Alexander; b. 10 August, 1913, Dublin. In 1948 m. Tamela Loughlin; two children: Heather, 1950; and Jillian 1957. Family lived in Dublin, 1980.

R2.114 Rudd, Henry Charles; b. 3 December, 1916; died at 3 months.

R2.115 Rudd, Edith Maud; b. 20 October, 1919, Dublin. In 1951 m. John McCarthy Monohan; 3 children: Terence, 1952, Dublin; Angus, 1953; and Daniel, 1961, both born in Canada. Family lived in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, 1980.

R2.116 Rudd, Eunice Audrey; b. 21 March, 1922, Dublin. In 1947 m. John Henry Hodgens; 4 children: Ruth 1948; Jonathon, 1951; Michael, 1952; and Joanna, 1961.

R2.117 Rudd, Dorothy V.; b. 21 June, 1923, Dublin. In 1980 Dorothy lived in Dublin area.

R2.118 Rudd, John F.; b. 29 September, 1925, Dublin. In 1962 m. Marianne; 1 child: Teresa, 1964 before mother's 1967 death. John then married Ruth, c. 1969; 2 children: Sean, 1970; and Jennifer, 1973. In 1980 the family lived in Painted Post, New York.

R2.12 Rudd, Charlotte, second child of William and Emma Rudd, b. 1882, Dublin. No marriage record in Ireland.

R2.13 Rudd, Annie; b. 1884, Dublin.

R2.14 Rudd, David; b. 23 July 1840, Dublin; a sign writer. On 6 October, 1915, m. Sarah Jane Price; 7 children: William, Gladys, David, Nora, Patricia, Sarah, and Robert. Family lived in Dublin. David died 1947.

R2.141 Rudd, William Edward; b. 1916; m. Frances Howland, 1935; one adopted daughter.

R2.142 Rudd, Gladys; b. 1917; m. Lovering. He died 1978.

THOMAS RUDD - ROSCREA PAINTER

The third Roscrea Rudd family line is headed by Thomas Rudd, the painter, and Esther Abbott. Theirs is also an early pioneer family in Roscrea area. Thomas's parents were Thomas Rudd and Ann Acres, both of Roscrea. This family dates back to the 1780s. The birth of Thomas Jr. is recorded in the very early St. Cronan Parish records. Records of an earlier generation show a marriage of a Thomas Rudd and May Stephens in 1781. These could have been the grandparents of Thomas Rudd, the Roscrea painter. All the Thomas Rudd children are coded as R3 and were born in Roscrea.

R3 Rudd, Thomas; b. 3 October, 1805, Roscrea; m. Esther Abbott of Roscrea 22 January, 1830 in St. Cronan's Church of Ireland, Roscrea, County Tipperary, Ireland. Thomas a painter and Esther raised 11 children in the next 20 years. A Thomas Rudd is buried in Roscrea Cemetery; stone dated 1884.

R3.1 Rudd, William; b. 8 November, 1830; married 1870.

R3.2 Rudd, Thomas; b. 18 March, 1832.

R3.3 Rudd, James; b. 11 June, 1833; on 11 August, 1851, St. Cronan's Church, James Rudd, painter, m. Jane Chapman, Rosecrea; witnesses: Thomas Rudd, painter, and Richard Chapman, shoemaker.

R3.4 Rudd, Elizabeth; b. 8 December, 1834; married 1867.

R3.5 Rudd, Mary; b. 10 October, 1836.

R3.6 Rudd, Esther Victoria; b. 29 July, 1838.

R3.7 Rudd, Frances; b. 1 December, 1839.

R3.8 Rudd, John; b. 3 October, 1841; possible Donoughmore Rudd.

R3.9 Rudd, Sarah Jane; b. 27 September, 1842; married 1864.

R3.X Rudd, Marianne; b. 7 May, 1846.

R3.XI Rudd, George Abbott; b. 11 June, 1850.

OTHER IRISH RUDDS

During the 1800s there were other Rudd families in the central Irish counties; in Abbeyleix, in Donaghmore, and in the Kilkenny area. They may all have been offspring/offshoots of the families already discussed. A few are mentioned here briefly, but no attempt is made to code them.

1. Another Templemore Family: Richard Rudd was listed as a "stuff weaver" of Templemore who married Susan cir. 1800 and had up to four children. Some confusion was noted in the mother's name as lists show Susan, Susanna, and Sarah as married to Richard. The four children: Thomas, 24 October, 1801; Elizabeth, 17 March, 1805; Alice, 21 March, 1807; and Frances, 19 June, 1819. Alice married Private John Jackson, 66th Regiment, on 6 October, 1826, at the age of 19.

2. Abbeyleix Rudds: (two families) In 1983 we received a letter from Mrs. Ferris, Aukland, New Zealand, whose maiden name was Rudd. Her grandfather, William, had a birth certificate showing Queens County, Ireland, as birthplace. The family emigrated in 1873 to New Zealand, but two girls had been born in Abbeyleix. A further check identified William as a Wexford Rudd, the fifth son of Thomas Rudd of Clone. His name is entered on the bottom line of the Clone chart.

William Rudd was born 1841 in County Wexford, not Queens County. On 4 February, 1869, he married Fanny Revington of Kings County, Ireland, born 1852. They produced eight children: Elizabeth, 11 April, 1871; Catherine, 1 Jan., 1873; John James, 16 Mar., 1875; William, 13 Aug., 1877; Joseph, 24 July, 1879; Gordon, 24 Nov., Arthur, 11 Nov., 1884; and Thomas, 2 May, 1888. In 1873 they sailed on the "Queen of Nations" around South America through the Straits of Magellan to New Zealand. They purchased land in Paparatu, some 35 miles south of Aukland and started a mixed farm of sheep and cattle. William died there 21 August, 1905. Fanny died 11 May, 1914. Two of the eight children married. Catherine married Charles Roke and raised three boys and a girl. Three were still in Aukland area in 1983. Joseph married Sarah Greener in 1921 and they raised two girls and a boy. Mrs. Ferris was their only surviving child, at 57. She had a son Ferris, and two grandchildren. She gave no names or dates for any of her family and signed herself as "Nan".

The second Abbeyleix family was a John Rudd married, 1872, in Abbeyleix. No wife's name was recorded. This could be the Roscrea painter, John Rudd's eighth child, born 3 October, 1841. He would be of appropriate age, except the childrens' names do not fit the usual pattern: naming the eldest for grandparents. There are eleven Rudd births recorded: (the first four unnamed) male 1872, three females 1874, 1877, 1879; Alice, 1883; Rachel, 1886; Anna Maria, 1890; Mary Jane, 1895; John, 1897; Mary Jane, 1898; and Hannah, 1890. The first Mary Jane may have died, with the next girl baby given the same name.

3. Donaghmore Rudds: It appears a Rudd family moved into the area in 1860s when the first records of Donaghmore Rudds begin. There may have been a change in recording methods also. However, a family of eight Rudds is listed in Donaghmore with the first birth in 1873. The children: Robert, 1873; William, 1875; Arthur, 1877; Joseph, 1881; twins, Sarah Jane and Mary Anne, 1883; George, 1885; John, 1886. Sarah Jane died in 1883. On my excursion in 1973, solo, I visited Phelan's Bar in Donaghmore and saw the clock made by the Templemore jeweler, John Rudd, and talked with Mr. Phelan. I inquired about Rudds who once lived in the Donaghmore area. P.T. Phelan, the owner, said..."Yes, I've known Rudds here. Three of them were buried under a bush in front of that church on the hill in an unmarked plot: Bob, Bill, and Jack from over Ballybrophy way. They were big men: six-feet-four; almost giants, but apparently no families." NOTE: There was a Robert, a William and a John in the Rudd Donaghmore family described above who would be fifty to sixty years old in 1935 and well within Mr. Phelan's lifespan.

4. Drogheda Rudds: In Ireland in 1980 we attempted to contact all thirteen Rudds listed in the two Irish phone books. One name, Thomas J. Rudd, was in Drogheda just north of Dublin. After we returned to Southern California we heard from Thomas's mother, Mary Whelen Rudd (Mrs. Thos. Rudd), a lady of 78 years. These were Clonegal Rudds on the border between County Wexford and County Wicklow south of Dublin, probable offshoots of the Wexford Rudds; however we have not established the direct connection. Thomas's parents, Michael Rudd and Ellen Kelly, had six children born in Shelelagh, County Wicklow: Daniel 1892; Thomas 1894; Timothy 1895; Mary 1897, Catherine 1900; and Michael 1906.

Mary and husband Thomas married in Clonegal and moved to Drogheda in early 1930s where four of the five children were born: Eileen, b. 1928, m. Leach; at least one child, Marita; Mary, b. 1934; Thomas, b. 1935; Catherine, b. 1938; and Anne, b. 1942. Anne was married with four children. Son Thomas m. Plankett c. 1960: 4 ch., Gerald, 1963; Fiona, 1964; Jeffrey, 1968; and Gillian, 1978. In 1983 Marita Lynch called us from New York where she was working. Fiona Rudd wrote us in 1986 for employment information in the United States while she was working for a law firm as a secretary for a Drogheda barrister.

These were the principal Rudd families found in the Irish records along with Rathdowney Rudds explored in Part II. There were no more than eight basic families. Many factors indicate these families were interrelated. The families were generally large; however instead of spreading and increasing in number they tended to diminish and disappear in the mid 1800s. Little information exists on many of the children of the 1850s. Their names do not appear in the records of the local areas. Consider the heavy emigration during the potato famine of the 1850s and on through to the 1920s. Communication was very poor. Emigrating families often lost touch with each other. Individuals and family groups were often separated and names were lost from the sketchy records. Tracing lost family members was an undeveloped art. Records were not often accessible and literacy was a problem for some. Keen interest and longings faded into hopeless despair and memories of missing persons.

It was a period of climactic global upheaval and worldwide redistribution of great populations. Ireland is still home to Rudd families but they are greatly outnumbered on other continental expanses around the world.

CURRENT ENGLISH RUDDS

A young English girl touring the United States told me the Rudd name had become a common name in England. It is understandable considering the extended coverage of early Rudds in England in Records of the Rudd Family by Mary Amelia Rudd. They were found entering Lancashire from Wales; on into York; and into the northern counties of Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Northumberland and spreading south into central England and into the North London area. Making a fortnight Britrail tour around England in 1980 we found 108 Rudds listed in the London telephone directory in a country where many individuals do not always have a personal telephone. A recent computer listing revealed 219 Rudds with addresses in London. In Yorkshire area, very early Rudd country, we found 112

Rudds listed in York, Leeds, and Hull. In the Birmingham area northwest of London, we found 55 Rudds with addresses listed. Another 108 were listed in Manchester north of London and nearer Liverpool.

In 1980 20 Rudds were in the Oxford city directory, including a Norman Rudd. In the Welsh directories there were 17 more Rudds listed. In the south of England in Brighton there were 21 Rudds. Only a few Rudds were listed in Scotland; 3 were in Edinborough and 2 in Glasgow. A few more were listed in smaller towns.

We have not made an organized attempt to contact English Rudds, as Irish Rudds have held our attention. However, one of the 13 Rudds in the Irish telephone directories in 1980 was the family of an English cockney, Charles Thomas Rudd, from London. When we contacted his widow, Kathleen Storr Rudd, she invited us to visit her Shannon home. We took her to a nearby Shannon cultural display and evening banquet with feisty, colorful, Irish clogging and splendid balladeers who relished entertaining us with fine Irish traditional music. At Kathleen's kind invitation, we did share her hospitality, staying overnight there just over the knoll from the huge Shannon Airport. We viewed Shannon with two frisky boys on the grassy hill early the following morning before a fine breakfast with Kathleen and grandsons. Kathleen's husband was an electrical engineer, one of three men in charge of operation of a London underground railway used exclusively for transport of mail. He was personally decorated by Queen Elizabeth with the Imperial Service Award. Kathleen lived with their son, Glen Charles Rudd, who was employed at the Shannon Airport. There were five Rudd grandchildren: Mark Charles, 1966; Paul Andrew, 1968; Brian Glen, 1970; Dean Philip, 1974; and Annamarie Bernadette, 1978.

We have had a considerable exchange of correspondence with Phyllis Rudd of Exeter, County Devon. She made contact through the facilities of the York Family History Society after our 1980 inquiry there. York is in the heart of Rudd Yorkshire territory. Republishing the Records of the Rudd family by Mary Amelia Rudd, which has become a rare and scarce volume, is of primary interest to Phyllis. She had forwarded names and addresses of several more family history organizations in northern England for research. Her family were mainly mariners living for the past 200 years in the Port of Ilfacombe, a small seaside town on the north Devon coast.

OTHER AMERICAN RUDDS

There are two major lines which should be delineated: The Jonathan Rudds who settled in New England and the Captain John Rudd English line who settled in Virginia and South Carolina. Both of these are English lines, possibly distant cousins of the Irish Rudds.

Jonathan Rudd was the first recorded Rudd in North America. The date of his arrival is debatable as the earliest date reported is on 4 September, 1633, with Reverend Thomas Hooker; however other general accounts suggest 1636-1639. In 1640 he was in a Puritan colony in New Haven, Connecticut. Lt. Rudd was a leather sealer and assistant to Captain Mason in 1652 when he was left in charge of the fort.

His 1646 winter wedding has been widely chronicled and often romanticized. Records of the bride's name are obscure: her name is listed as Mary Metcalf in some records however it is not inscribed on the memorial plaque. On the wedding day a Connecticut magistrate scheduled for the marriage ceremony was unable to travel in the heavy snow storm. As boundaries were in dispute, the future governor of Connecticut, John Winthrop the younger, substituted, acting under authority of Massachusetts Bay Colony. He met the bridal couple at Sunkipaug Creek. Winthrop stood on the Massachusetts bank; the Saybrook couple stood on the Connecticut bank of the frozen stream. The snow fell as Winthrop's voice carried across the chilly space and they were married in the wilderness. The story has been memorialized in poetry, in a pageant, and in "movies". Sunkipaug Creek was renamed Brides Brook. In 1925 a commemorative plaque was unveiled there. The marriage ceremony has been reenacted by Rudd descendants several times through the years near East Lyme, New London, Connecticut.

Jonathan and Mary Rudd started a line with their four children, Mary, Patience, Jonathan, and Nathaniel, spreading though New England, Upper New York, Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and to the West. Jonathan died early in 1668 without a will. There were apparently three main lines from Jonathan's great-grandchildren: Increase Rudd (15 children), John Rudd, and Joseph Rudd. These are early Rudd Puritan names: Zebulon, Erasmus, Gideon, Bezaleel, Prosper, Hezekiah, Absolom, and Anson Rudd. They married women named Experience Wheeler, Abigail Hartshorn, Blandina Adriance, Gabrielle Martin, Violate Lucas, and Morial Fillmore.

There are many descendants from Jonathan Rudd and his wife. A Rudd family association whose 1979 president was Charlotte Blumthal in Mountain Home, Arkansas, issued a newsletter and held a family reunion at two year intervals. Margaret Rudd Ryan, 2.241, wrote to the 39 families who attended the 1976 reunion at Grantham, Pennsylvania, to locate any connections with Irish Rudds, without success. These families were English Rudds descended from early New England colonists. They resided from Maine through New York to Oklahoma, Arkansas, Michigan, Illinois, and Kansas. Our Editor, Mariam "Mari" Alberts Rudd, is a descendant from the original Jonathan Rudd family (documented by L.D.S. Church Archives) through Jonathan's son, Nathaniel who fathered 13; da. Mary Rudd, b. 3 Feb., 1695, married Ebenezer Wood 12 March, 1718. Through their eight children including daughter, Beulah Wood b. 1871, the 12 generation pedigree interweaves through the founding English families of the Rev. Brewster, Higleys, Haskings, Hagens, Holcombs, Riggs, Millens, Stedmans, Rogers, Fairbanks, Drakes, Knights, and Twitchells. Research is rewarded by volumes on Colonial (Mayflower and Massachusetts Bay Colony) and western gold rush histories.

There were also early Rudd settlers in the South. Captain John Rudd of England settled in Henrico County, Virginia, in 1670s. He is recorded as transporting tobacco to England for a Wm. Byrd in 1677, and on record in Henrico County as a witness of deeds for Samuel Turk and Abel Beauchamp in 1678. He was married in Virginia and sired a son, John, who patented 312 acres in the Henrico County 20 August, 1741. John married Avis, raised six children all mentioned in John's will, which was recorded in Henrico (renamed Chesterfield) County Will Book, Volume 1. The town of Chesterfield is south of Richmond. At least two extensive lines of Rudds developed. Grandsons John and James raised families in Virginia. Grandson Joseph followed Captain John Rudd to South Carolina. The Captain established a large plantation on the Saluda River at Chappells, South Carolina. A brief exploration will explain some of the extensive Rudd population in the south. The six children of John Rudd and Avis are coded Vl to V6 to indicate Virginia clans. These are grandchildren of Captain John Rudd of Henrico (Chesterfield) County, Virginia.

Vl John Rudd II, c. 1680-1744, m. Avis, Henrico County; raised six children: John III, William, Thomas, Joseph, James, and Rebeccah. We list only families of John Joseph, and James.

The extent of Southern Rudds may change some concepts that the chief enclaves of North American Rudds are not just a few Irish Rudd scions and the 1633 New England English Rudds descended from Jonathan Rudd of Connecticut. Close to half the Rudds in the United States are in the South.

New England Colonial English Rudds of Connecticut: (1633) Quoting from Records of the Rudd Family: (a male descent):

The font rests on the backs of twelve life-size oxen which face all points of the compass. A replica is in the Latter Day Saint Visitors Center, Salt Lake City, Utah, in full size. It is also duplicated in gold in each Mormon Temple throughout the world.

PROLIFERATION OF RUDDS

Rudds have populated areas in United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and United Kingdom as well as Ireland. With availability of 1980s Rudd family listings from telephone directories, public records, and data banks we have a fairly clear measure of where Rudds are located (but not of Rudd daughters who married). In the computerized listings of North American family names appearing on the 1980s market, about 45% of the Rudds listed are in the southern U.S.A. Four of five states with most numerous Rudd addresses are: Texas, #1; Florida, #3; North Carolina, #4; and Kentucky, #5. Only #2 California challenges the southern majority. In 1981 Beatrice Bailey, Inc., listed 4167 Rudd addresses in the U.S.A.

In 1984 Halberts, Inc., listed 4335. In 1987 American Genealogies, Inc. by Elizabeth Ross, listed 4305 Rudds. A 1988 Halberts, Inc. list included Canada, Australia, and the U.S.A. totaling 4454 Rudds. The lists are incomplete, as neither the 1984 nor 1988 Halberts books list a Norman N. Rudd, although my name is on the mailing lists as a purchaser of both of these volumes. The 1988 edition includes only 2 of the 5 Rudds in my immediate family.

This may be an exception, but we feel there are many more Rudds than those listed. However, these publications are of interest as they indicate Rudd populations. These are NOT family records, but computer compilations of general directories and information from similar lists of publicly recorded names and addresses. Most of the Rudds listed are not closely related to the Irish Gordon Arthur Rudd family of Rathsarn parish, Ireland. The greater majority are of English origins with a few German and Scandinavian derivations. Some statistics are of sufficient interest to summarize.

The latest Halberts publication in 1990 lists 2906 Rudd households in their Great Britain registry, 710 households in Australia, 97 in New Zealand and still only 13 in Ireland.

Charles "Minchin" Rudd, Code Tl.452, Durbin, reports 95 Rudds in the South Africa directories.

Rudd families are proliferating and growing in the world today with varied religions, races, and cultures; so the Rudds you see in the news are probably not your immediate cousins. Most Rudds seldom make the news, but colorful Rudds do get publicity, like the following:

There are families of black Rudds coming from the plantations in the south where Joseph Rudd, for example, left each of his children a family slave in his will. A black Rudd widow died in Toronto in 1900, D.S. "Bill" Rudd reports, listed in the city directory as a seamstress, 119 University Avenue. Toronto was terminus of the "Underground Railroad" for slaves escaping the agricultural South before and during the U.S. Civil War, in 1860s.

The First Methodist Church in Peel County, Ontario, Canada, was built by ex-slaves who made their way to freedom. Many may remember Delaney Rudd, All American black basketball player from Wake Forest, Illinois. There are Asiatic Rudds in the U.S.A. and overseas as American service men were on military duty in many areas of Asia. Mary Yoshida Rudd, of Japan, married Thomas F. Rudd and presently lives in San Diego, California. Margaret Ryan, 2.241, reports some Polish Rudds: Mark Rudd, a leader of STUDENTS FOR A DEMOCRATIC SOCIETY,(S.D.S.) was actually Mark Rudinski. A Millie Rudinski of San Diego advertises as a professional pet sitter. Of Russian origins, Lucie Rudd, New York City, reports her family changed their name from Rudkowsky to Rudd in 1924.

Many Irish Rudds were Wesleyan Methodists in the early 1800s; by the 1980s religion is a conglomorate among the Rudds; Baptists, Catholics, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Mormons, Quakers, Seventh Day Adventists, the Church of Ireland and England, and the Union Church of Canada. There were Quaker Rudds in the 1680s in England where some were persecuted and followed William Penn when he colonized Pennsylvania before 1700. The Puritan Jonathan Rudds settled in Connecticut in 1630s. Many of the Mormon (Latter Day Saint Church) Rudds are in the western USA particularly in Utah, Idaho, and Colorado. In Salt Lake City World Headquarters in Utah, the Mormon Genealogical Library and Archives house two large volumes of Rudd family charts which list parents, children, and grandparents by names, dates, and places. Many of these families were from England, recruited in 1840s - 50s by Brigham Young's missionaries, from the industrial areas of Liverpool and Manchester. They migrated to Utah during the years of growth and settlement of the west.

Early American history had a good share of Rudds. One reference lists seven Rudds serving as Revolutionary War soldiers. Pvt. John Rudd enlisted 13 Jan., 1776; he was reported as a deserter one month later. Ten Rudds applied for pensions. At least nine Rudds fought the British in the War of 1812 as that number applied for pensions. There were also Canadian and English Rudds in the British forces in 1812. Rudds who applied for Union pensions numbered 121 in 1860-70 after the American Civil War. There are 40 southern Rudds listed in the Confederate card file in the Virginia State Archives in Richmond.

Rudds regularly make news, some with distinction and others with less than honorable mention. Michael Steven Rudd was married on roller skates in El Cajon. Jaime Rudd, a native of San Ysidro on the California-Mexico border, was killed in an auto accident. Both cities are in San Diego County, California.

Lucien Rudd, Odessa Texas, was eager to circulate the Rudd Times, but we received only three issues. Joe Rudd, an Anchorage attorney and his wife, Lisa, an Alaska State Representative were killed in an aircraft accident. Oris Rudd was Oregon Malheur County Extension Agent. In 1980 Jim Rudd was Assistant Athletic Director, Oregon State University, Corvallis; my Alma Mater (Class of 1934). Clarence Rudd, San Diego, is one of America's ten leading importers of Australian opals. Robert E. Rudd is with Atlantic Chemicals. Sergeant Mary Rudd, Werner Robins Air Force Base, Georgia, is looking for her Rudd relatives in the south. Terry Rudd rides steeplechase jumpers in Upperville, Virginia. Joseph Rudd was a Director of the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, 1868, who promised $1000 to the first church built in Danville, Iowa, if the town would rename itself Rudd. They accepted the offer, but Joseph reneged and never paid. This record is found in Rudd, Iowa, where "Rudd" may mean "mud".

Billie Jack Rudd, a dentist of Lubbock, Texas, was given much credit for the former successes of the Abilene Eagles under Chuck Moser, then student trainer. Ricky Rudd is regular auto racing news. Carl Rudd's Blue Creek, Ohio, claim to fame is 20 acres of Christmas display with 80,000 lights and 150 life-size figures. Dr. Emanuel Rudd is a rheumatologist at Cornell University Medical College.

Randolph Jackson Rudd is former resident operator of Murrietta Hot Springs Resort, San Diego County. He was in hot water for practicing medicine without proper license. Virginia Rudd was a retired teacher in Barstow, California.

Six Rudds were in Who's Who in 1980: George F. Rudd, farmer, of Parker, Idaho, a Mormon bishop; Paul Ryan Rudd, actor, of Boston and New York; Hughes Day Rudd of Waco, Texas, was an ABC and CBS newscaster; Dale Frederick Rudd, chemical engineer, Madison, Wisc.; Robert Wm. Rudd, educator, Lexington, Kentucky; and Eldon Rudd, congressman, Phoenix, Arizona.

An Irving Rudd is a flight publicist from Brooklyn, N.Y., who has said he did not graduate from high school but was acquitted. Many other Rudds are in the news: Dr. Russell Rudd, Fulton, Kentucky, still practices medicine at 90; Charles Douglas Rudd, Houston, Texas, was a training specialist with the U.S. (N.A.S.A.) National Aeronautics and Space Administration; Franklyn W. Rudd a tobacco auctioneer of Palatha, Florida, was found chained to a tree by a man he had accused of burglary.

Dr. Peter Rudd of Stanford University, Palo Alto, California, was granted a permanent injunction against the Veteran's Administration banning their loyalty oath as a condition of employment. Herbert and Anna Rudd were China missionaries in early 1900s. Lowe and Cornell Rudd, Moose, Wyoming, operate the Teton Trail Rides in Grand Teton National Park. Robin Rudd, was a staff photographer for the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News. Two of our English "cousins"; John R. Rudd London, England, promotes a world-renowned label: Berry Bros. & Rudd which appears worldwide on bottles of Cutty Sark scotch. Tony Rudd is Director of Engineering and designer of racing cars for Lotus.

Most Rudds will be listed in the news as statistics; at birth, marriage, and death; however many of life's small achievements are the stuff which comprises our daily total package of caring, loving, and sharing the joy of living with those we care about.

Rudds have a common bond...sharing the same familiar name. The Rudd descendants enumerated, regardless of current family name changes by marriage through the generations, share Rudd ancestors. In Part I of this book we have attempted to tell the story and history of the Rudds and their many descendants, though briefly.

Each one of you will continue to make a unique contribution to the Rudd history by daily choices and involvements. We give you a wish and a blessing from antiquity: "Ojala'!"

PART II

The Gordon Arthur Rudd and Alicia Wellwood Rudd Family

INTRODUCTION

Part II covers the history of the Irish Rudd family of Gordon Arthur Rudd and Alicia Wellwood Rudd. Gordon and Alicia produced nine children born between 1809 and 1831 in the townland of Graigavalla, Rathsarn parish, near the town of Rathdowney, Queens County, Ireland. All nine children married and raised families.

Six grandchildren of Gordon and Alicia were still alive in 1988 when most of the senior family descendants were the great grandchildren. Many of these had great grandchildren of their own who were six generations removed from Gordon and Alicia. With few exceptions, descendants of all nine families and their spouses are included in the coverage.

Your author's curiosity and inquiries began in 1926 with a Marlette, Michigan, newsclipping of a remarkable family group: two brothers and two sisters; surviving children of William and Anne McLean Rudd who emigrated from Dublin, Ireland, in 1849. Their combined ages totaled 347, to average nearly 87 years.

A 1929 letter from my grandfather, Gordon W. Rudd, Code 1.6, to my father, Robert Henry Rudd, 1.64, stated: (his) "Grandfather, the original Gordon, lived in Queens County, Ireland, 1-1/2 miles from Rathdowney and about the same distance from Donaghmore. Gordon Sr. had six boys and three girls, seven of whom emigrated to America during and after the potato famine, 1847-48."

I knew very little of the Rudd family, so I began to pick up information casually from my father and my Aunt Cora, 1.65, my father's younger sister. She was a Canadian homesteader, rancher, and family coordinator of the Gordon W. Rudds, 1.6s. Aunt Cora kept in touch with the nieces and nephews. Farm families lived in widely separated, isolated, areas of Canada and northern U.S.A.

As I recall, the first contact with another Rudd family branch was in a 1929 chemistry class at Oregon State College. The young lady seated with the Rs wrote "Charlotte Rudd" on her notebook. Her father, Charles Rudd, 6.3, was my Grandfather Gordon's 1st cousin. They had lost contact many years earlier.

In 1956 I wrote my first Christmas newsletter to cover what I knew of the Rudds. Aunt Cora circulated it to several other Rudd families I did not yet know. In review, there was a surprising lack of information in that first letter. The names of Gordon and Alicia Rudd's nine children and several spouses were listed, but no chronology. It chiefly concerned Family 1 with a bit of Family 6 data. Some initial "facts" later proved incorrect.

My 1st cousin, a second Charles Rudd, (1.611, of Denver, Colorado, son of William, 1.61, my father's eldest brother) saw my letter. He corrected and updated it regarding his family. I met Charles and brother, Henry, 1.612, in Vista, California, in late 1960s. We exchanged much good information. Charles was very supportive up to his 1985 death at age 93.

Charlotte Rudd's sister, Miriam, 6.35, advertised in Moosejaw, Manitoba seeking information on her father, Charles, the first Canadian Pacific Railroad agent there. A clipping was sent to Alice and Norris Rudd, 7.71, who were wintering in Arizona. On their return to Riverhurst, Saskatchewan they visited Miriam in San Diego in 1967 and I met them. This was my first contact with Family 7. Through Miriam we contacted Family 6 in Ireland. Mari and I met Jimmy and Muriel Rudd McLean, 6.83, in Carrickfergus, a suburb north of Belfast, U.K., in 1980. We also met Muriel's niece Hazel, 6.821, and husband Derrik Butler and three daughters in Holywood, near Belfast. Hazel and Derrik attended Rudd Roundup I, Jackson, Wyoming, Aug., 1983, and Hazel became a Rudd Family Council member.

Alice and Norris Rudd and Norris's brother, Robert Francis Rudd, 7.72, and wife Rose of White Rock, (Vancouver) British Columbia, visited their scattered cousins in Canada for years. Through Norris we contacted Margaret Ryan, 2.231, of Weston, Connecticut, and Sarah Wall, 2.223, of Liverpool, New York, who have contributed much Family 2 information.

To clarify the GORDON ARTHUR RUDD nine family branches, we use CODING. The branches are chronological: 1 to 9. Grandchildren are in the first decimal place: 1.6, for example. They are 1st cousins across family lines and have common grandparents. Their children are great grandchildren and are coded in the second decimal place: i.e. 1.64; 2nd cousins with common great grandparents. Their children are great-great-grandchildren and are coded in the third decimal place: 1.642; which is my personal code indicating a 3rd cousin of all four digit persons in families 2 to 9, all with common great-great-grandparents. My 1.642 code now extends to six decimal places (7 digits total). My great-granddaughter, Susan Rudd Cooper, 1.642111, is a 6th cousin of other 7 digit persons. We have dedicated this publication to Susan.

In several cases in families with more than nine children, we use Roman numerals (1.62X). Adopted children are coded as natural children; step children are listed by name and birth.

In 1976 we had our first contacts with Beulah White Reade, 1.352, Marlette, Michigan; Theobel White Cargill, 1.351; and Irene Graham Ruggles, widow of Bruce Ruggles, 1.332, who responded to the 1956 Rudd Christmas letter and a 1970 letter.

Helen Wilson Hoidel, 1.742, my double 2nd cousin, provided Leona Wilson Flynn's, 1.771, address. They contributed much good Wilson information.

In 1979 Robert Gordon Rudd, 7.156, handed our first Rudd Family Research Association letter to D.S. "Bill" Rudd, London, Ontario. Bill's Rudds have roots in County Wexford, Ireland, and are included in this publication. We both are researching relationships to clarify connections, which are very probable.

Bill sent us Kenneth Bird's inquiry from Burlington, Ontario; our first contact with Family 3. Ken Bird, 3.2123, and Helen Stobbs Beable, 3.311, attended Rudd Roundup I, Jackson, Wyoming, 1983. These relationships grew richly: Ken Bird accepted chairmanship of Rudd Roundup II, August, 1986, and Helen assisted, as did many others, in Burlington near Niagara Falls. We shared a very special experience: full Canadian colors, customs, foods, music, hospitality, bagpiper, banquets, seminars, golf, and Niagara Falls excursions. Over 170 international cousins attended.

In 1982 Beulah White Rudd, 1.352, connected us with Josephine Hixson Frary, 4.411, great granddaughter of John Rudd, and source for Emma Rudd Rumballs, 4.4, details. Florence Rudd Jackson, 7.72, sent an inquiry to an Evans in Minnesota, Manitoba, which was forwarded to Amy Lumsden, 4.131, Mervyn Evans family. Amy sent us Evans names, dates, and addresses.

In January, 1983, we met Fran and Jack Jenkins, 4.122, of Cranbrook, British Columbia, at their winter desert home in Palm Springs, California. Happily an Evans delegation attended Rudd Roundup I, August, 1983, wearing "For Evans Sake" T shirts and met 170 international cousins there including cousins from South Africa, Ireland (U.K.), Canada, and U.S.A. In 1984 J. Alan Evans, 4.143, Ottawa, Ontario, volunteered as resource for Frank Evans, 4.14, clan. We really became involved together when Alan participated fully in 1986 Rudd Roundup II pleasures and responsibilities in Burlington.

The saga of Family 5 is one of discovery and expansion of contacts in Ireland and Australia. I drove alone across Ireland in 1973 from Shannon Airport to Dublin, inexperienced with left hand lanes. I searched for Rathdowney mentioned in Grandad Gordon's 1926 letter, hoping to find traces of Gordon Arthur Rudds. In Donaghmore pub, owner P.T. Phelan directed me to Robert John Thompson, "an authority on Rudds" he said. Robert "Jack" Thompson, 5.16, was my first contact in Family 5, one of the largest of the nine Rudd family lines we are researching. He was the grandson of Alicia Rudd Larke, Code 5, fifth child of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd.

Through Jack we contacted family members and learned much of their Rudd history. From a family of seven brothers and sisters, three of Jack's sisters married Stanleys, Carters, and Walkers. Since 1982, thanks to Joe Stanley, 5.151, Templemore, information was filed for 10 Stanley offspring. In 1980s through Vera Connor Carter, wife of William Carter, 5.185, the seven Carter families were included. The Walkers, 5.12, and William Thompsons, 5.17, were Australian immigrants. By mail in 1985 through Hilda Thompson, 5.1642, "Jack" Thompson's granddaughter, we reached Australian cousins, Elsie Walker Woollams, 5.121, Sydney area; and Elsie Thompson Stuart, 5.173, Melbourne area. Elsie Woollams and niece Elizabeth "Maie" Sherwood, 5.1262, joined us at Niagara Rudd Roundup II, August, 1986, and enjoyed a rousing round of travel and visits with far-flung Canadian and U.S. cousins.

Initial relations with Family 7 were through Norris Rudd, 7.71, in 1967. August 2, 1981, my 70th birthday, we met a major part of Family 7. The weekend campout group included 48 direct Rudd descendants. Muriel Rudd Anthony, 7.153, and Mary Troup Ryan, 7.172, organized the Rudd Gathering in Elora, Ontario, in Peel Township. Robert Francis Rudd, Code 7, located there in 1857.

The family of Gordon Arthur Rudd II, Code 8, was widely scattered. In 1920s at 8 or 9 I recall moving into the U.S. from Canada with my family. We used to visit the Edna Rudd Marshall family, 8.11, in Spokane, Washington. Fifty years later I was in contact with Edna's two daughters, Ethel Marshall Robertson, 8.111, and Georgia Marshall May, 8.112. Earlier Margaret Haney Phoenix, 8.211, San Francisco, had responded to my 1956 Rudd Christmas letter. She was among the first to ask if I planned a follow-up. Through an address from Helen Wilson Hoidel I reached Ruth Broad Stewart, 8.222, Westminster, California, near Los Angeles. Ruth has been very supportive.

The first contact with Susan Rudd Weaver's family, 8.6, in Sarnia, Ontario, is a special example of how family records grow. Muriel Rudd McLean, 6.83, Carrickfergus, (Belfast), U.K., sent a note written by one of her uncles in 1920 responding to an information request: "I recently had a visit from a young lady named Mrs. William Boyd, 449 Wellington St., Sarnia, Ontario, who described herself as the granddaughter of my Uncle Gordon. Her mother was Mrs. William Weaver." (Gordon was Code 8. Mrs. Boyd was Nellie Weaver Boyd, 8.63.) Fifty years later I wrote this address and gained the initial Weaver response and much information from Myrtle Weaver Burgess, 8.66. Myrtle helped make contact with Ann Dorward Hancock, 8.341, our early source on Alice Rudd Dorward's family, Code 8.3.

Until 1980s we had only a single name in Eliza Rudd Armstrong's Family 9. In 1983 in White Rock, British Columbia, Robert Francis "Frank" Rudd, 7.73, gave me the Russell Shaneman, 9.111, address. Russell responded saying he had not heard of Rudds until recently. He gave family information including name of his sister-in-law, Betty Johnson Shaneman, 9.112. On this visit with Frank and Rose after our Canadian "roots" tour following Rudd Roundup I in Wyoming, Frank and I visited Olyve Rooke Stevens, 9.52, living in a Vancouver rest home. She loaned us a copy of her family history and provided the address of Phyllis Armstrong Murphy, 9.43, Vacaville, California. Phyllis provided first information on John Armstrongs, 9.4. Frank and I also visited George Windsor "Buster" Rooke, 9.512, in nearby Surrey, B.C. Subsequently we learned the Mary Jane Armstrong-James Rooke family story.

Two added examples demonstrate family record growth. We knew only Susan Rudd's second marriage surname was Johnson in Argos, Indiana. A call to Marshall County Historical Society, Plymouth, Indiana, resulted in adding Susan Rudd Blodgett Johnson, 1.5, and her five children to the records. A second instance involved Rudds in Fargo, North Dakota. Beatrice Bagley's current Book of Rudds showed six Rudds in the state. All six were contacted. One was William Eugene Rudd, 1.3112, descendant of William Arthur Rudd, 1.31, Marlette, Michigan. Thus, nuggets of truth emerge.

There have been other significant first encounters outside the Gordon Rudd lineage. With South African addresses from Dublin cousins, we sent a 1980 Rudd Family Research newsletter to Peg and Minchin Rudd, in Durbin, South Africa. They joined us and nearly 200 international Rudd cousins at Rudd Roundup I, 1983, in Jackson, Wyoming, and toured and visited around U.S. and Canada.

Cliff and Silvia Rudd Bennett, Brisbane, Australia, loaned us a copy of RECORDS OF THE RUDD FAMILY in 1974 which we held for nearly ten years. Mari and I visited Audrey Rudd McCurdy in 1980 for tea in her seaside home in Skerries, north of Dublin, Ireland. We were corresponding with Lilian Harkness Nelson, of Bangor, Belfast area, United Kingdom, in late 1980. Both of these ladies gave us extensive data on Templemore Rudds in Ireland.

All this is a partial explanation of one man's family history research and efforts to collect family records. It takes much time and patience with a combination of keen interest in people, inquisitiveness, perseverance, sense of adventure, delight in meeting "long lost" relations and fitting together a maze of a human relations puzzle over an extended period of time. All this is directly motivated by people and their responses and the mutual sense of sharing a complex history. The delight and the satisfaction in warm personal relationships is enduring. The hope of providing generations to come with sound background for the justified pride in their "roots" is the true reward.

SPECIAL ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Recognition is due members of my immediate family as major participants in this research and publishing project. Son Michael, 1.6423, has done extensive work photocopying some 1200 photos for reproduction. We are selecting several hundred photos for the final book production.

Patricia McCormick is our consultant on word processing and formatting of the text for presentation to the publisher.

My wife, Mariam Alberts Rudd ("Mari"), deserves some special commendation. Credited as Editor of this mass of information, she has been much more. Mari is a creative "idea" person. Her writing talents, extensive communications and executive and secretarial skills, shared research and travels, and strong moral support have become an integral part of founding Rudd Family Research Association and bringing this project to life.

All of you deserve our heartfelt thanks for your generosity, patience, participation, and trust. You all have trusted us with your precious and rare family photos and family records for long periods. Each person has made a unique gift of self. The many contributors are far too numerous to mention individually.

QUEENS COUNTY, IRELAND

Before discussing Irish Rudd family history, a clarification of the geography and land divisions is needed. Queens County was created by decree of Henry VIII of England in 1541 when he proclaimed himself King of Ireland. It was actually established by the Earl of Sussex in 1557, acting as the Deputy of Queen Mary I, Catholic daughter of Henry.

Comprised of old County Laois (Leix) and parts of County Ossory and County Offaly. Queens County along with Kings County (Offaly) were the first attempts to replace native Irish with English Protestant settlers in English plantations. The Crown declared the land forfeit and it was seized from the native Irish O'Mores. The usurpation was contested in running battles by O'Mores for the next century. In the 1641 uprising against plantations, the English settlements were nearly eliminated.

Queens County is one of 32 Irish counties roughly 35 miles east to west and 25 miles north to south, approximating 664 square miles. It includes 9 baronies, 624 townlands, 15 villages, and 11 towns. In 1791 the population was nearly 80,000. It was the most heavily populated area outside of Dublin. In 1791 there were 15,048 homes or 41 houses per square mile. There were 50 Protestant parishes, which were also civil parishes, and 27 Catholic parishes. These Catholic parishes generally included two or three civil parishes. The Roman Catholic parish of Rathdowney includes the civil parishes of Rathsarn, Rathdowney, and Donaghmore which are within one of the Barony of Upper Ossory's three districts, the district of Clondonough. This local area is where Rudds lived, perhaps as part of a Protestant plantation.

In COOKE'S 1801 SURVEY OF LAOIS AND OFFALY the names of Queens and Kings Counties had already reverted to Laois (Leix) and Offaly. Rathdowney had a tannery yard and some incidental industries. Rev. Carey had a good school. There was some manufacture of coarse clothing, but only for the peasantry; none was for sale. There were two corn mills. Both English and Gaelic Irish was spoken. "Until proper schools are established, they must remain in the same barbarous ignorance that still prevails." the report stated.

A further description of the three parishes in 1837 is in TOPOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF IRELAND by Samuel Lewis, Vol. II, p. 508. "Rathdowney: a post town and parish 56-1/4 miles S.W. of Dublin on the road to Templemore; 6654 inhabitants, 1214 in town, 211 homes of indifferent build, neglected appearance, streets ill-paved, few indications of prosperity, a brewery and boulting mill; 13,406 statute acres; church built in 1815, tithes 750 pounds. There is also a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists."

"Donaghmore: a parish 2 miles NW by N from Rathdowney on road from Borris in Ossory to Kilkenny; 1211 inhabitants; 383 in the village; 3226 statute acres; about 70 houses in village; corn mills, bacon stores, large starch manufacturing; tithes 154 pounds; glebe 193 acres; church rebuilt 1821."

"Rathsaran (Rathsarn): a parish in the Barony of Upper Ossory, Queens County, and Province of Leinster; 2-3/4 miles west of Rathdowney on the road from Dublin to Thurles, containing 868 inhabitants; bounded on the west by the county of Tipperary; 2065 statute acres; rectory and vicarage, Diocese of Ossory; tithes 130 pounds; glebe 114 acres, Glebe house erected with a gift of 250 pounds, loan of 55 pounds in 1820 from the late Board of First Fruits. The church was built in 1797 with the aid of a gift of 500 pounds from the same Board."

Rathsarn parish in Co Laois

Glebe land is that set aside for support of the Church of Ireland. Tithes are monies collected from all renters and land owners for church support. The Gordon Rudd family's home parish was Rathsarn civil parish. The name comes from Saran's Rath, a fortified dwelling of an ancient Irish Chief. It is obviously a small Protestant plantation (where people were moved in or planted), but no information on its origins could be found. As early as 1640, two square miles, 1202 acres, had been divided into seven townlands with the balance of the parish designated as hunting preserves. By 1826 the preserves had been replaced with five more townlands. In 1841 there was a population of 965 in 155 homes, an average of 6 persons per home. In an 1834 church census there were 152 Protestants and 723 Catholics. There were no Methodists listed, although there was early Methodist activity with some Rudds involved. It was generally a farming area, but plots were very small. There were 155 families living in a three square mile area. By 1891 heavy emigration reduced the population to 378.

EARLY RUDD HOLDINGS

Much of the land was owned by the Fitzpatrick family including most of the townland of Graigavalla where the Rudd home was. Queens County had been taken from the Irish O'More's when the first plantations were established in 1557. It may have been that Fitzpatricks came in as undertaker-developers and either bought or were granted large blocks of land for service to the Crown. One notation in the Q.E.I Edicts reported Geoffrey Fitzpatrick, son of Brian, First Lord Baron of Upper Ossory, in rebellion in 1578 and pardoned by Queen Elizabeth I in 1584. His two sons were pardoned in 1602. However, Fitzpatrick lands were seized in 1613 and John Fitzpatrick forfeited certain lands in 1653.

Gordon Arthur Rudd was a tenant farmer on land held from the Right Honorable John W. Fitzpatrick in the townland of Graigavalla in 1826. We found no record of lands held by his parents William and Rachel Wall Rudd. Graigavalla was the southernmost townland in the parish abutting County Tipperary. It consisted of 303 acres, nearly half a section, all Fitzpatrick land except the house of William Creagh. The first record of Rudd holdings we have are the Tithe Books of 1826 which show Gordon Rudd holding 19 acres and 2 roods; "tithe payable as 1 pound, 10 shillings, 7-1/2 pence". His eldest son, William, held 1 rood and 10 perches of glebe land with a tithe of 1 shilling 1-3/4 pence. These two were the only Rudd holdings recorded in the parish and in the Barony of Clandonough.

The TITHE APPLOTMENT BOOKS were published for each county in Ireland between 1825 and 1840. They were listings of all townland properties and their required annual payment in support of the Church of Ireland. They resulted from the Title Composition Acts of 1823. THE GRIFFITHS VALUATION of parish lands was made between 1848 and 1864. This was based on the Poor Law Act of 1838 which established Poor Law Unions in each area. A Poor House was set up in a nearby market town. Each Union covered a radius of nearly ten miles. To support the program, all property was evaluated and proportional taxes levied. The RATHSARAN TITHE BOOK was dated 1826. GRIFFITHS VALUATION OF RATHSARAN PARISH was dated 1850. These are excellent records of landholdings during these periods.

There were four Rudd entries in 1850 GRIFFITH'S VALUATION OF RATHSARAN PARISH:

1. Gordon Rudd held 34 acres, 11 perches, of land from the Fitzpatricks including "a house, offices (offices are outbuildings), and land valued at 24 pounds, 5 shillings".
2. William Rudd is recorded as holding a glebe land plot of 1 rood, 15 perches, "a house, offices, and garden, valued at 15 shillings". (Glebe land is land set aside to support church) Actually by 1850 William and family had already landed in New York.
3. Joseph Rudd, second son, held two holdings: 20 acres, 3 roods, 2 perches of glebe land valued at 18 pounds including "house and offices".
4. Joseph Rudd (same second son) recorded as holder of: "a herd's house and 16 acres, 2 roods, 8 perches, from Robert Perry in the townland of Kyleamullaun valued at 8 pounds, 15 shillings".

Note: Early Irish land measurements: a rood is a quarter of an acre; a perch is a square rod. A rod is 5-1/2 yards or 16-1/2 feet in length; about 30 square yards or 270 square feet in a square rod.

In the Townland Index we have indicated the holdings of the Rudds and some close associates and inlaws. In the following text we will refer to townlands in terms of addresses and locations of the holdings of Rudds, etc., during the first half of the 19th Century. See the map of Rathsarn parish for reference.

GORDON ARTHUR RUDD

The patriarch of this family was born in Rathdowney area in 1777, son of William Rudd and Rachel Wall, who were married in Saint Cronan's Church of Ireland in Roscrea, 12 October, 1763. This confirms the 1973 information from John "Jack" Robert Thompson on my first visit to Ireland. Jack was a grandson of Alicia Rudd, the second eldest daughter of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd. Jack said the Rudds had lived in the Rathdowney area for a long time. Gordon and his father, William, no doubt were born there. This reaches back to the 1730s when earliest records were available. John Rudd was born 1736 and Toppin Rudd was born in 1739 in Roscrea area 12 miles from Rathdowney. These are probably cousins as they are the only other Rudds on record for this period and area. They may be extensions of Wexford Rudds or from another Rudd who survived the earlier plantations in Queens County. In this part of the 1700s John, Richard, and Samuel Rudd were starting the known Rudd lines in County Wexford. Sir John Rudd of Enniscorthy, County Wexford, married Elizabeth Minchin in 1760s. Minchin Rudd was born in Templemore, County Tipperary, in 1809. This could indicate a Wexford County connection for Minchin and possibly other Rudds in Roscrea/Rathdowney area. We do not know the origins nor the connections of Gordon Arthur Rudd's father, William Rudd, but John and Toppin Rudd, Roscrea, may have been his cousins or his brothers.

THE WALL FAMILY CONNECTION

The Rachel Wall and William Rudd marriage was only the first of several Wall-Rudd unions. Joseph Rudd, grandson, married Mary Wall, 1842; Mary Ann Rudd, great great granddaughter of Rachel and William, married a cousin, William Wall, in 1912. THE WALL FAMILY IN IRELAND 1170-1970 by Hubert Galwey is a current reference. Walls were of Anglo-Norman stock, one of the first knightly families to occupy Irish lands after the 1170 invasion of Ireland by England's Earl of Pembroke, Richard Fitzgilbert de Clare, known as "Strongbow". Actually, William Wall was among the "chiefest commanders" of the group who first invaded Ireland in advance of "Strongbow". King Henry II knighted William and honored him with Letters Patent (gift deeds) to several territories in Ireland. Walls first settled in County Carlow, but by 1300 had spread south and west to nine Irish counties. The name Wall had gone through several transitions: originally French-Norman "de Valle", then "de Vale" then "Vale", and to "Wale" in the 16th Century (1500s), and finally changed to "Wall" around 1650. As Walls were a Catholic family, through many generations theirs is a history of many land confiscations, transplants to County Clare and Connaught, inquisitions, pardons, and restorations of lands and estates.

The Walls in Rathdowney area were not the more famous Wall families but were of minor branches settling in northern county Kilkenny, and Counties Tipperary, Cork, and Limerick. The first record of a Rathdowney Wall was in 1723. It was the will of Joseph Wall of Rabean in Parish of Donaghmore. In 1766 Patrick Wall was a resident of Killesmeestia, part of Borris in Ossory. Michael Wall was baptized in 1790 in Rathdowney parish. We have no record of Rachel Wall, wife of Gordon Rudd, nor of Mary Wall, wife of Gordon's grandson, Joseph Rudd; however we do know the origin of Joseph Wall. His son, William Joseph Wall married Mary Anne Rudd in 1912. This connection will be discussed in Family 2 segment.

THE WELLWOODS

Gordon Arthur Rudd was married "by license" to Alicia Wellwood on 3 July, 1809, in Rathsarn Church of Ireland where he was church warden. A marriage was legal in two ways: either by buying a license or by publication of the banns at the local church for three successive Sundays. Gordon's sister, Mary Rudd married Alicia's brother, Robert Wellwood, who died in 1867. Available records gave no indication Gordon had more than one sister.

Alicia Wellwood came from a family of 15 children in Freshford, County Kilkenny, about 15 miles from Rathdowney. Joseph Wellwood, her father, was born in 1758, married 8 January, 1784, by Reverend Oliver Flood to Alice (Alicia) Chambers, born 1766. Presumably the marriage took place in Freshford where they lived most of their lives and raised 15 children. Joseph and Alice and seven of the children are buried in the old Freshford Cemetery. There is a single upright stone carrying the following inscription:

> "Here are deposited the remains of Daniel Wellwood, son to Joseph Wellwood of Freshford who died 15 Aug. 1828, aged 17, also his brothers Daniel, John, and Francis, his sisters Mary, Rebecca, and Ann, also said Joseph Wellwood died Dec. 29, 1828, aged 70. Alice Wellwood alias Chambers wife to said Joseph Wellwood of Freshford died June 3rd 1832, aged 65".

Fifteen Wellwood children are listed herein as several are involved in the Rudd history:

1. Anna Wellwood, I, b. 27 March, 1785; died early; Freshford.
2. Robt. Wellwood b. 8 Dec., 1786; m. Mary Rudd; He died 1867.
3. Alicia Wellwood b. 17 March, 1789; m. Gordon Rudd; d. 8 Aug. 1882, at 93; buried at Rathsaran church.
4. Mary Rebecca Wellwood, b. 10 May, 1791, buried in Freshford.
5. William Wellwood, b. 26 Dec., 1792, d. 1 Nov., 1889, at 96; buried in Belfast.
6. Daniel William,I b. 26 Oct., 1793; died early; buried Freshford.
7. Joseph Wellwood I, b. 17 Jan., 1795; buried Whitby, Ont., Canada.
8. John Wellwood, b. 8 June, 1797; died early; buried Freshford.
9. Rebecca Wellwood, b. 3 May, 1798; still born; buried Freshford.
10. Anna Wellwood II, b. 6 May, 1799; m. Samuel Gray (?); buried Canada.
11. Joseph Chambers Wellwood b. 22 Dec., 1801; m.?; accidental death, 4 Dec., 1861, Whitby, Ont., Canada.
12. Elizabeth b. 12 Jan, 1804; m. Wm.Thompson 8 Dec., 1831; d.7 July, 1886; buried Caledonia, Ontario.
13. Deborah b. 6 Jan., 1806; m. John Holmes 1833; d. Oct., 1908 at 102; buried Holmesville, Ontario, Canada.
14. Francis Wellwood, b. 13 Aug., 1809; died early; buried Freshford.
15. Daniel Wellwood, b. 12 Jan., 1811; accidental death 15 Aug., 1828; buried in Freshford.

1- Relating to Family 3: Information copied from Family Bible of Ida Bird Beatty, daughter of Mary Ann Gray and William Bird. Ida was granddaughter of Jane Rudd and Matthew Gray. "Auntie Holmes' name was (Deborah) Wellwood. She was Mother's (Mary Ann Gray), Aunt Alice's, and Aunt Lizzie's great aunt. Aunt Holmes was a sister of their Grandmother Gray's". This would be the wife of Samuel Gray, the parents of Matthew. There were two Anna Wellwoods. One is buried in the Freshford family plot. Anna II is the only Wellwood girl not otherwise accounted for. We will explore this further in Family 3 discussion.

2- Elizabeth Wellwood Thompson and William Thompson migrated to Canada about 1832/33 settling near Caledonia, Ontario, and produced nine children: William, Joseph, John, Robert, Elizabeth, Edwin, Daniel, Alice, and Sarah. There is indication William was born in Ireland 1 January, 1833 before moving to Canada.

3- Deborah Wellwood Holmes and John Holmes migrated to Canada immediately after their wedding, early 1833; were in a family party of 13: 2 Holmes brothers and 2 Holmes sisters with their new spouses, 3 single Holmes brothers and their parents.

Land had been purchased the previous year in the name of John Holmes in Goderich Township, Huron Tract. John and Deborah Wellwood Holmes had ten children; including Jane (Leach), Elizabeth (McKenzie), William, John, Deborah, and Mary (Howell).

GORDON AND ALICIA WELLWOOD RUDD

Our earliest record of Gordon Rudd comes from the Vestry Books of Rathsarn church where he was listed as church warden in 1808. This is very early in the history of this church. There had been churches on this site dating to at least 1414 when Keranus O'Helne was listed as rector. Catholic churches had been destroyed in the 1600s. There had been no church building there for 150 years. Fragments of the old Catholic church were removed as early as 1797. The new Church of Ireland was built partly on the old site and partly over graves to the south. A grant of 450 pounds from the Board of the First Fruits helped finance the building. In 1973 John Thompson, 5.16, told me: "The Pratts and the Rudds may have built the church, but it was the Thompsons that kept it going." It must have taken several years to complete. Francis Green Desport was listed as the first rector in 1805. The earliest Vestry Book was dated 1806. The church was the site of much Rudd history. Gordon Rudd was listed again as a warden in 1829; as an overseer in 1840; and a final term as a warden in 1845. All of the sons except Gordon Jr. were in the church records in various capacities. In 1849 Gordon Jr. emigrated at 20 to New York. The baptismal dates for the entire family were found in the Rathsaran church records. The earlier Rudds were buried in the churchyard in the Rudd plot with no stones; however it was enclosed by a wrought iron fence.

John Thompson and his son Eddie showed us through the Rathsaran Church. There are four family boxes in the balcony: Thompson and Rudd-Pratt, Talbot, and Wellwood. "JR" is carved on one of the pew arms, no doubt the work of the 3rd Joe Rudd, 2.21, who had a reputation to uphold. John Thompson went to school with Joe. The Rudds were not only very active in the Rathsaran Church of Ireland, but were also involved in the early Methodist movement. Reference is made to early Methodist "riders", who were itinerant preachers, stopping at the Rudd home. Mrs. Gordon Arthur Rudd (Alicia) was a member of the Methodist Society. At least two of her sons carried Methodist credentials when they emigrated from Ireland to Canada. Alicia's obituary at age 93 listed her as a good Methodist for 80 years.

Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd lived in the townland of Graigavalla all their lives. They raised a family of nine children, our direct Rudd forebears. In chronological order: William, Joseph, Jane, John, Alicia, George Welsdon, Robert Francis, Gordon Arthur II, and Eliza. These are the nine family lines we will investigate, explain, and follow through several generations to the present.

All nine children were born in the same house in Graigavalla. We had prospects of obtaining a photo of the Rudd family home ruins but without success. Its approximate location is noted on the sketch map of Rathsaran Parish. In a letter from my Grandfather Gordon Rudd to my father, Robert Henry Rudd, 1.64, he wrote that in earliest times they went to school in County Tipperary. They crossed a small stream to reach the schoolhouse which may have been the Nore River, which flows in from Tipperary and is the boundary for two miles between Counties Tipperary and Queens (Laois). COOK's SURVEY OF COUNTIES LAOIS AND OFFALY IN 1801 mentioned the one good private school run by a Reverend Carey; otherwise proper schools had not been established.

Gordon Rudd held land from the Fitzpatricks who were the Earls of Upper Ossory, very large land owners. In 1980 there was no record of such a registered lease in the Dublin Deed Office. It was probably a tenant relationship, possibly on shares. It is difficult to appreciate raising a family of 9 children on the shared income from 19 acres listed in the RATHSARAN TITHE BOOK OF 1826, OR FROM RUDD'S 34 ACRES LISTED IN Griffith'S VALUATION OF RATHSARAN PARISH IN 1850. Somehow they managed to survive.

In a letter to her son, Robert Francis Rudd, in Ontario, Canada, in 1858, after her husband Gordon's death, Alicia Wellwood Rudd lamented the fact "Gordon had the place in good shape and was making it work, but was now gone before he could profit from his hard work." Gordon Arthur Rudd died 19 January, 1858, with no will, intestate. Widow Alicia was granted the administration of the estate. The effects were valued under 200 pounds. A copy of one of Alicia's letters to son Robert in Canada is included in the Appendix. Alicia lived for another 24 years, perhaps with her two children who stayed in Ireland; Joseph Rudd, the second son, and Alicia Rudd Larke, the second daughter. Alicia's death certificate states she died of old age at 93 on 8 August, 1882. Her granddaughter, Alicia Thompson was listed as being present. Both Gordon and Alicia were buried at the Rathsaran Church of Ireland in the Rudd plot.

Family One

WILLIAM AND ANNE McLEAN RUDD

Code 1: Rudd, William; first born of Gordon and Alicia, in Rathsarn parish, in Queens (Laois) County, Ireland. He was born at home in the townland of Graigavalla 17 October, 1810. Records indicate he was baptized on his 1st birthday, 17 October, 1811. We know nothing of his schooling or how he earned a living in Ireland. At 16 he was listed in the RATHSARAN TITHE BOOK as holding 1 rood (1/4 acre) and 20 perches (1/2 a rood) of glebe (church) land, big enough for a cottage and a garden. A rood is 40 square rods or 1/4 acre; a perch is one square rod.

Three years later, nearly 19, he married Anne McCleane as recorded in the Ossory Diocese Marriage Records. In later records the last "e" of McCleane was dropped, and then the "C". They were married 3 March, 1829, by permission of the Curate of Rathdowney, Francis Lodge. It would be through Reverend Lodge that William held his plot of land. Anne was 5 years William's senior; however she did not admit the age difference in public records. Starting with the Ship's Manifest at the time of their emigration and the ensuing United States census records through the following years show Ann McLean Rudd the same age or a minimum of 1 year older than William. It was on Ann McLean Rudd's tombstone where her true age was recorded as 79 on 8 November, 1884. The family oral history says Anne was of Scottish origin; born in Ireland perhaps in Ulster; and she and Mary Scott Wilson came from the same town. The 1860 and 1870 census records in Michigan show both Anne and Mary as born in Ireland.

Grandfather Gordon Rudd (1.6) remembered his Granddad McCleane (Scot-Irish spelling) had married Mary Dann and sired 14 children: seven boys and seven girls. Only three of the boys reached maturity and at least four of the girls, one of whom was Anne. He also remembered the McCleane men were very large. Gordon Rudd's Granddad McCleane was 6 feet 2 inches, and a cousin was 6 feet 6 inches, and an uncle was 6 feet 4 inches. This may be where the occasional tall Rudd received some of his genes. There were also very tall Rudds. We have mentioned the large Rudds from Ballybrophy buried in the Donaghmore Church of Ireland churchyard. John "Jack" Thompson, 5.16, agreed many of the Rudds were unusually big men. He told the story of hitting a grave in the Rathsarn churchyard during construction of another exit. "There was no doubt a Rudd grave had been disturbed when a very large thigh bone was found," Jack Thompson said.

William and Anne McCleane Rudd produced nine children over the next 20 years, all born on the original church glebe holding assigned to William in 1826 records. In GRIFFITHS VALUATION OF RATHSARAN PARISH IN 1850 the property was actually listed as 5 perches smaller than in 1826. "William Rudd holding from the Reverend Francis Lodge; house, offices, (outbuildings) and garden, 1 rood and 15 perches valued at 15 shillings." This was not the value of the property but the annual tax assessment for support of the poor. The children in sequence were: Mary Anne, Alicia, Robert, Janie, Susan, Gordon, Eliza, William, and Catherine. We found no record of what William did to support the family. He was basically a farmer and may have worked for some large landowner.

By the time the 1850 GRIFFITH REPORT was published, William and Anne and William's youngest brother Gordon, Code 8, were aboard the British ship "Lady Milton"in late 1849 out of Dublin sailing to New York with their four older children and the baby. The other four children stayed in Rathsarn with relatives. They emigrated later, one by one, with other close family groups. The "Lady Milton" landed in New York 2 January, 1950. The Ship's Manifest showed 226 original passengers; three doctors as cabin passengers, and 222 steerage passengers, plus 10 infants and one death. The Rudds were listed as follows: "William Rudd 39, Annie 35, Mary 18, Elicia 15, Robert 13, Janie 11, Catherine infant, Gordon 20". Janie and Catherine caught the measles during the ocean voyage and died while in quarantine in Castle Garden, lower east side of Manhattan where immigrants were held before Ellis Island. Those left behind in 1849 in Ireland were: Susan 10, who stayed with her McCleane grandparents and emigrated at 14 or 15 in 1854; Gordon, 8, who stayed with the Robert Francis Rudds and emigrated with them in 1851; and Eliza, 6, who emigrated in 1853 at age 9. We have no records of the residences in Ireland nor with whom she or little William, age 3, sailed. He emigrated in 1856.

From New York the Rudds moved to Poughkeepsie, New York, area where William Sr. worked on the Hudson River Railroad for one and a half years. In fall, 1851, they moved into Canada West as a letter from Granddad Gordon Rudd, Code 1.6 wrote: "where Father (William) had a brother and sister". John Rudd, Code 4, and Jane Rudd, Code 3, had emigrated in 1847. John Rudd was on the Canadian shore of Lake Huron in the Huron Tract in the same area where the Holmes (Deborah Wellwood Holmes) had settled in 1833. Jane Rudd, Code 1.4, had married Matthew Gray. They were in the Caledonia, Ontario, Canada, the area near where the William Thompsons (Elizabeth Wellwood Thompson) were located. Ontario was still Canada West until 1865. We have no record of the Rudds next four years. Gordon Rudd, Code 8, who was with them, married Mary Ann Jones of New Brunswick, Canada and raised children in the Hamilton-Guelph area of Ontario, Canada. The William Rudds, Code 1, must have farmed in this same general area. In the spring, 1856, they made their final move travelling by ox team and wagon west into "The Thumb" of Michigan near Marlette with all their belongings and enough potted tree saplings to start a tree farm. This gave them homestead rights to an additional acreage. Remnants of the tree farm were still evident in 1980 as a Reserve. William laid claim to 320 acres of government land; half of Section 29, Marlette Township, Sanilac County, Michigan. This was virgin territory. A limited amount of government land had been opened to settlement under the Graduation Act. The first settlers from Ontario, Canada, came following the circulation of stories of tall timber and fertile soil "almost free for the asking". The first claim was registered in 1854. Several families took up claims in 1855. William Rudd and James Cargill were among the 1856 settlers. Cargills are still in Marlette in 1980s and intermarried with the Robert Rudd descendants, Code 1.351.

All the land available under the First Announcement was claimed by 1856. Marlette Township, Michigan, was created in 1856. The name was supposed to originate from a carved name "Marlatt" on a log wall of a shanty across from William Rudd's holdings where two brothers, whose mother's name was Marlatt, had started a mill and failed. William suggested the name as that of a neutral early resident. William was named Township Clerk when the first township officers were selected. At first there were no roads, no stores, no grist mill, no blacksmith shop, no schools. The land was apparently heavily forested in some areas and swampy, requiring drainage in others. At least two forest fires in 1871 and 1881

MARLETTE, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, JULY 1, 1926

A REMARKABLE FAMILY

This family group consists of two brothers and two sisters, whose combined ages total 347 years, or an average of nearly 87 years. They came with their parents from Dublin, Ireland, in 1849, and after several years in New York state and Ontario, the family moved to the Thumb of Michigan, near Marlette.

The lady at the left is Mrs. Susan Johnson, who lives at Argos, Ind., aged 87 years, a youthful looking woman, spry and alert and who attends actively to the duties of her own home. Her sister to the right is Mrs. Eliza Wilson of Marlette, who has raised a large family and now at the age of 83 takes care of her home and the management of a large farm, two miles south of town. The brother at the left is Gordon Rudd, who lives at Miller, S. D., a veteran of the Civil war, and hale and hearty at 85 years of age. The other brother is Robert Rudd, who has lived continuously for 70 years on the old homestead, one mile north of Marlette. He is 92 years of age, smart and active physically, keen of mind and proudly boasts that he cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1860, has never missed a presidential election since that time, walks every Sunday to his church in town and is credited with being in Sunday school every Sunday for the past 20 years.

burned thousands of acres and destroyed many early farms and killed livestock and burned crops. The first school was held in a private home in 1858. Miss Bell was the first teacher. The first church, shared by the Methodists and Baptists, was a three-sided log wall cabin with no roof. The pulpit was made of crotched, forked sticks and poles.

Later more land was opened to settling. The Robert Wilson land grant was taken up 11 April, 1859. The Gordon Rudds, Code 8, moved west from Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, area in 1864. Marlette was recognized as a village in 1865 and incorporated in 1881. The Rudd School District #2 was built about this time, located between the Robert Rudd, Code 1.3, and George Rudd, Code 8.1, farms. The first teacher was Anna Carpenter who was paid $120 for nine month's work. George Rudd, eldest son of Gordon, Code 8, contracted to furnish the stove wood at 68 cents a cord. A cord of wood is 4 ft. wide by 8 feet long by 4 ft. high. The first post office was located in the Gordon Rudd home. Gordon was the postmaster until the office was moved into the village in 1869 at his request when he moved to the Jeddo homestead.

The 1884 SANILAC COUNTY PORTRAIT in Michigan, included an article on the William Rudds. By this date there was 130 acres of tillable land on the Rudd property. William was listed as a Republican; active in the politics of the township, elected as clerk for three years, an elected supervisor for four years, and acting as justice of the peace for two years. William had declared his intent to become a United States citizen in 1856 but we found no record of when he received his final papers. Only five of the Rudd children, Mary Anne, 1.1, Robert 1.3, Susan 1.5, and Gordon 1.6, and Eliza 1.7, were listed as survivors in the 1884 Sanilac County records. Alicia 1.2, and William 1.8, were both deceased by 1884. William Rudd, Code 1, and wife Anne lived out their lives on the Marlette homestead. Anne died 8 November, 1884 at 79. William lived another seven years until 19 November, 1891, when he was 81. Anne and William were both buried in the Siple Cemetery two miles West of the "home place" in Marlette, Michigan.

William Rudd left a will, recorded 18 January, 1890. He willed the south half of the homestead to eldest son Robert, 1.3, and subsequently to his grandson, Robert Bruce Rudd, 1.36. William left the north half of the homestead to his grandsons William A. Rudd, 1.31, and George Rudd, 1.32. These were all sons of Robert. To William's other living children: Gordon Rudd, 1.6; Mary Anne Montgomery, 1.1; Susan Johnson, 1.5; and Eliza Wilson, 1.7; "for whom I have already well provided" he bequeathed one dollar each.

MARY ANNE RUDD AND SAMUEL MONTGOMERY

1.1 Rudd, Mary Anne, eldest child, born Rathsarn parish, Queens (Laois) County, Ireland, 7 February, 1830. Mary may not have left Ontario, Canada, with the family in 1856. By the Michigan, 1860 U.S. census Mary Anne was not listed as living at home. She was one of the surviving children listed in the 1884 SANILAC COUNTY REPORT. Her father included Mary Anne Rudd Montgomery as one of his surviving children in his 1891 will.

About this time there was heavy migration to the new territories of the Dakotas. Samuel Montgomery and family are included in the 1880 U.S. census records in South Dakota. Sam is listed as "Irish, married to an Irish wife named Mary some years older than himself; with two daughters, Martha A. and Mary J." In the 1880 U. S. census Mary Anne is listed as seven years older at 40 than Samuel at 33. If this were truly Mary Anne Rudd Montgomery, her age should have been listed as 48. Their two daughters were listed at ages four and one. By the 1900 U.S. census, Mary Anne was listed as born in 1841, 11 years after her 1830 birth. Sam's birth was listed as 1844. This census indicated they had been married 25 years which would place the wedding date in 1874 or 1875. Daughters are listed as: "Martha A., born June, 1876, 23 years old; and Mary J., born March, 1878, age 22". A difference of three years was indicated in the 1880 U.S. census, and "our" Mary Jane Rudd should have been 12 or 13 years senior to her husband, Samuel.

The 1900 U.S. census lists Sam Montgomery owning his farm in Star Township, Clay County, in the southeast corner of South Dakota, just east of Yankton. This was over 100 miles from the Orient, South Dakota Rudds; another world away in the 1880-1900s. Sam may have been a good Irish Catholic, raising the daughters as Catholics. This may have caused added estrangement between families, very strict in such affiliations in those times. This was the only Montgomery family found in the records which comes near the criteria of being the misplaced family of Mary Anne Rudd Montgomery. We found no Rudd records which include the two Montgomery daughters, Martha and Mary, who would have been 1st cousins of the Marlette, Michigan, and Miller, South Dakota Rudds. This lack does not preclude the suggested relationships. Here is a challenge for a research project to clarify and verify. Local church records may be the key.

ALICIA RUDD

1.2 Rudd, Alicia, born c. 1834 in Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland. In 1849, the "Lady Milton" Ship Manifest listed Alicia as "Elicia, 15 years". According to Grandfather Gordon Rudd, Code 1.6, she was also called Alice and Lisha. She married while the family was in Ontario, Canada in the mid-1850s. She did not move with them to Michigan, but moved with her husband, to Buffalo, New York. No family record lists her married name nor names of her children. Alicia is listed in the 1884 SANILAC COUNTY REPORT as one of four deceased Rudd children. This also begs further research to complete connections and Rudd story.

ROBERT AND ELIZA WHITE RUDD

1.3 Rudd, Robert, born 28 February, 1835, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland. He was age 14 when he and his parents emigrated on the "Lady Milton" from Dublin to New York. He was listed as 13 on the Ship's Manifest, which was in error. Robert was 21 in 1856 when the Rudds moved from Ontario to Sanilac County, Michigan, to locate on acreage one mile north of the future village of Marlette. He apparently worked on the home place with his father, William, until his marriage and continued as he raised his family. By the 1884 SANILAC REPORT there were 131 tillable acres on the home place. In 1864, during the Civil War, Robert married Eliza A. White; b. 3 July, 1844, in Bryanston, 10 miles north of London, Ontario. She was one of four children of William White and widow, Susanna Dann-Guest, William's second wife. (Her sister Mary Jane White married George Rudd, 8.1. They are the grandparents of the Marshalls in Spokane, Washington.) Robert was reported to have paid a man to take his place in the Union Army, a common option available then. Robert and Eliza had seven children; raised three sons and three daughters: William Arthur, George, Caroline, Ida, Susanna, and Robert Bruce Rudd. The unnamed infant who died was born between George and Caroline. Robert and Eliza lived out their lives on the home place. Eliza died 13 February, 1892. Robert died at Caroline's home at 93 in Kingston, Michigan, Saturday, 21 April, 1928. He had spent the last four winters with the Albert "Carrie" Ruggles family in Kingston. Eliza and Robert were buried in the family plot in the Siple Cemetery, Marlette, Michigan.

WILLIAM RUDD - DELLA COLWELL

1.31 Rudd, William Arthur, born 14 August, 1866, Marlette, Michigan. William worked as an Interior decorator in Fargo, North Dakota, and owned and operated a hardware store in nearby Gardner, North Dakota. On 6 August, 1900, he married Adella (Della) Celestine Colwell, born 27 March, 1877, in Bervie, Bruce County, Ontario, Canada. William and Della lived in Gardner where they produced four children: Robert, Ethel, Francis, and Arlo. Della was in poor health and died 27 March, 1911, leaving young children. The cause of death was stated as "pulmonary tuberculosis of several years duration". She was buried in the Gardner Cemetery. William apparently raised the surviving children. He died 24 March, 1937, at Ethel's in Chicago where he was under medical care, and was buried in the Rudd plot in Marlette, Michigan.

Robert Rudd - (1) Randi Skauge family (2) Esther Wilson

1.311 Rudd, Robert Arthur, son of William and Della, born 20 May, 1901, Gardner, North Dakota. He worked for the North Dakota State Highway Department and lived in Gardner and Fargo. He married twice. His first marriage was to Randi Margaret Skauge on 7 November, 1920. She was born 13 January, 1902 in Hendrum, Minnesota to Ellev Fredricksen Skauge and Ingeborg Halvorsdatter Gangaunet, Scandinavians. Robert and Randi raised four children: Robert, William, Irene, and Jean. They separated after 35 years. Robert's second marriage in 1956 was to Esther Paulsen Wilson, a widow, with three older children. Randi married Edward H. Johnson and was alive and well in 1988. Robert died 8 August, 1965, of cerebral hemorrhage and was buried in Fargo, North Dakota.

1.3111 Rudd, Robert Gordon, born 30 June, 1921, Hendrum, Minnesota. Robert served three years in the U.S. Army; worked 30 years as an optician, and sold cars for 10 years before retiring. On 23 November, 1946, at Sisseton, South Dakota, married Eleanor Lorraine Larson Burns, born 9 June, 1916, in Moorhead, Minnesota. Eleanor attended college two years. She was secretary and office manager for an insurance company. She had two sons by a former marriage, William and Timothy, whom Robert adopted. Robert and Eleanor raised three more children: Mary, Thomas, and Betty. Both Robert and Eleanor retired and lived in Moorhead, Minnesota, in 1988.

1.31111 Rudd, William Gary, born 3 June, 1937, Fargo, North Dakota. William served three years in the U. S. Navy. He later published a farm magazine in Flagstaff, Arizona. In 1962, he married Kathleen Keppel and they produced three children: Laurel, Joseph, and Patrick

Aaron, 2 July, 1968, a student at North Dakota State University in 1988. William and Kathleen divorced in early 1980s. He died at age 48, on 25 January, 1985.

1.311111 Laurel Patricia, born 13 April, 1963. She earned a degree in journalism from University of Minnesota and was a newspaper reporter in 1988.

1.311112 Joseph Jay, born 27 April, 1965; a graduate of Moorhead State College with a degree in communications.

1.31112 Rudd, Timothy Riley, born 10 June, 1940, Fargo, North Dakota. He served three years in the U.S. Army. After service he drove a cement truck. Timothy married Antionette Herminston of Halstad, Minnesota. They had a son Timothy David, born 23 April, 1970, in Moorhead before his father's death from a heart attack on 16 May, 1975.

1.31113 Rudd Mary Lynne, born 20 June, 1948, Fargo, North Dakota. On 4 November, 1968, in Moorhead, married Steven Anderson, born 9 July, 1948. The Andersons ran a dairy farm near Barnesville, Minnesota. In 1983 they were chosen Outstanding Farmers of the Year. They adopted two children: Alissa Diane, born 26 March, 1975, and Anthony Stephen, born 2 February, 1980.

1.31114 Rudd, Thomas Gordon, a twin, born 14 October, 1949, Fargo. Thomas served three years in the U.S. Army; two in Vietnam. He was awarded the Silver Star for bravery, but was also disabled. In 1988 he was majoring in computer science.

1.31115 Rudd, Betty Jean, a twin, born 14 October, 1949, Fargo. Betty suffered severe spinal meningitis at age two. She was very active and independent, although handicapped.

1.3112 Rudd, William Eugene, born 24 December, 1922, Fargo. On 13 February, 1945, in Moorhead, he married Doris Irene Jones, born 26 February, 1926, Gardner., N.D. Doris did clerical work after business college. Bill farmed for 25 years then owned and operated a bowling alley and lounge. Both Bill and Doris were retired and lived in Fargo. They had three daughters: Cheryl, Diane, and Barbara.

1.31121 Rudd, Cheryl Lee, born 8 September, 1945, Fargo. On 1 November, 1963, in Fargo she married Stuart James Douglas Nichol, born 21 April, 1944, in Fargo. Cheryl attended college and farmed with husband, working part time in farm management. Stuart was a full time farmer. They had three children: James, Jefferd, and Heather Allison, born 14 January, 1971, in Fargo. In 1988 the family lived in Wolverton, Minnesota.

1.311211 Nichol, James Douglas, born 21 August, 1964, Moorhead, Minnesota. In 1988 James was a graduate of Moorhead State.

1.311212 Nichol, William Jefferd, born 6 December, 1966, Fargo. In 1988 Jeff was in college earning his way with a back hoe and excavation contracts.

1.31122 Rudd, Diane Marie, born 21 February, 1949, Fargo. She had a degree in speech pathology and audiology. Diane travelled in Europe, worked as bank teller, speech pathologist, pharmacy assistant in Alaska, and in 1988 as speech therapist in Tempe, Arizona, schools while studying for her masters degree. On 22 August, 1969, in Fargo, she married Steven Ray Peterson, born 12 June, 1947, Whittier, California. Steven was a U.S.Air Force Captain, a maintenance officer for F-15 fighter squadron. He and Diane had three children: Alanna Nicole, born 6 March, 1980, in Glendale, Arizona, and twins: Michael Shane and Scott Bradley, born 20 March, 1983, in Anchorage, Alaska. Diane and Steven divorced 29 December, 1983. After several years in Alaska, Diane and the children were living in Tempe, Arizona, in 1988.

1.31123 Rudd, Barbara Catherine, born 21 June, 1952, Fargo. On 23 December, 1972, in Fargo, married Leonard Steve Schaff, born 1949. Steve owned and operated an electrical engineering business in Fargo. He and Barbara had a daughter, Jodi Lee, born 21 July, 1973. The family lived in North Fargo in 1988.

GEORGE G. RUDD

1.32 Rudd, George G., second child of Robert and Eliza White Rudd, born 2 December, 1868, Marlette, Michigan. George did not marry, but farmed near Marlette, including the south half of the original land grant which he inherited from his grandfather William, Code 1. In 1956 HISTORY OF MARLETTE VILLAGE, George was pictured as one of eight pioneers born in Marlette and living there all their lives. He was also listed as a long time member of the quartet in the Methodist Church choir. In later years, George spent winters in Florida and died in Marlette on 6 July, 1960.

CAROLINE RUDD - ALBERT RUGGLES

1.33 Rudd, Caroline (Carrie), born 30 March, 1872, Marlette, MI and grew up on the original land grant just north of town. On 25 December, 1896, in Marlette, married Albert John Ruggles, born 3 April, 1866, in Nova Scotia, Canada. Carrie and Albert farmed in Koylton Township, Tuscola County, MI, half mile east of Kingston. The farm had been enlarged and was still being worked in 1988 by grandsons. Carrie and Albert had five children: no name found for the eldest who died in infancy. They raised Norman, Bruce, Ruth, and Leta. Ruth remembers her mother as a homebody; gentle, and loving to work in garden with flowers. Her granddaughter, Barbara Ruggles Green, helped care for Carrie after her broken hip. Barbara remembers Carrie sewing rags for rugs and embroidering. Albert died of pneumonia 25 June, 1940. Carrie was anemic and in poor health while she was with Ruth's family during her final years until her death from heart trouble 10 December, 1956. Both Carrie and Albert were buried in Kingston Cemetery.

Norman Ruggles (1) Mary Bracken family (2) Evelyn Negus

Their two children were Jennifer and Neal, born before the 1979 separation. On 19 February, 1985, Margaret married Michael Smith. Both were club entertainers, he a guitarist and vocalist and Margaret a pianist and vocalist. They resided in Arlington, MA., in 1988.

1.36121 Shea, Jennifer Anne, born 1961, Sommerville, MA. Her Bachelor of Arts degree was in psychology from Southeast Massachusetts University. She was a recruiter for a national engineering firm and lived in Arlington in 1988.

1.36122 Shea, Neal Thomas, born 1963, Somerville, MA. While earning a college degree in law and justice at University of Massachusetts, Neal was in defense contract administration. He lived in Arlington in 1988.

1.3613 Rudd, Thomas George, born 1 March, 1936, Marlette, MI. On 16 December, 1961, in Detroit, Tom married Anna Sargent Davis, born 23 September, 1940, in Coronado, California. Anna's Bachelor of Science in nursing was from University of Michigan, 1962; her Master's degree in gerontological nursing was from University of Washington, 1983. Tom was a registered pharmacist with a medical doctor's degree in radiology from University of Michigan, 1963. He was staff radiologist for Group Health Cooperative of Puget Sound, Seattle area, Washington, 1988, and Anna was visiting nurse for Community Home Health Care and very active in political and social causes. Their three daughters were Elizabeth, Rebecca, and Sarah Estelle, 24 September, 1968. Sarah was a sophomore at University of Washington in 1988 and interested in fashion retailing and was employed part time in a clothing store in Seattle, where the family lived in 1988.

1.36131 Rudd, Elizabeth Cook, born 1 December, 1963, New Orleans, Louisiana. She was honored as a Phi Beta Kappa at University of Washington with a degree in psychology in August, 1983. She traveled in Germany. She studied for her doctorate in sociology at University of California, Berkeley, 1988, and was a teaching assistant. Elizabeth organized a collective bargaining unit to represent graduate workers.

1.36132 Rudd, Rebecca Ann, born 5 May, 1966, Seattle, WA. After freshman year at Wellesley College, MA, Rebecca eventually became a senior at University of Washington in urban geography. She had taught and been involved in national dinghy sailing competitions. Her crew was listed in Who's Who of National Collegiate Dinghy Racing in 1987.

JANE RUDD

1.4 Rudd, Jane, fourth child of William and Anne McLean Rudd, was born 1837/38, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland. Jane was listed as "Janie, 11 years old" on the Manifest of the British ship "Lady Milton" out of Dublin in 1849. She did not survive the sea voyage, but contracted measles, along with her baby sister, Katherine, during the trip and both died while held in quarantine in lower east side of Manhattan in January, 1950. No records were found as to their burials.

SUSAN RUDD (1) ALBERT BLODGETT (2) HENDERSON JOHNSON

1.5 Rudd, Susan, fifth child of William and Anne McLean Rudd, was born 23 January, 1839, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland. Susan was the eldest of four children remaining in Ireland. She stayed with her maternal grandparents, the MacCleanes, for over three years while her parents and siblings emigrated to New York, late 1849; then to Canada West, September, 1851. Susan joined the family in 1854 in the future province of Ontario. Susan was 17 in 1856 when the family moved to Michigan. The 1860 Michigan census listed her as 21, the eldest girl still living at home. On 14 July, 1864, in Marshall County, Indiana, she married Albert Blodgett, born 29 September, 1843, in Pennsylvania. We found no indications of whether Susan was working or visiting there, nearly 25 miles south of South Bend, in this fourth year of the Civil War. Susan and Albert apparently lived in Plymouth and had two children; Carrie and William. We found no record of Albert's occupation nor explanation of his sudden death on 2 January, 1869 after his 25th birthday. He was buried in Plymouth. The 1870 U.S. census listed Susan and "two small children in Center Township, Marshall County, Indiana, in a house free and clear; possessed of real estate valued at $2,000". On 12 December, 1871, in Marshall County, Susan Rudd Blodgett married Henderson Johnson, born 1826 in Pennsylvania. She and Henderson had three children: Fred, Anna, and Charles Johnson. The 1880 U.S. census listed Henderson as "cabinet maker, unemployed for four months" and listed the family as living in Argos, Indiana, some 12 miles south of Plymouth. As the 1890 U.S. census was burned, we have no further data until the 1900 census. In 1900 Susan was living in Argos with her two younger children, Charles, 22; and Anna, 25. No information was listed as to Henderson Johnson who would have been age 74. The 1900 U.S. census lists Susan as "living in a house owned by her and clear of debt". The following is information from a Marlette, MI., newspaper article dated 1 July, 1926, with a photo of the four surviving children of William and Anne McLean Rudd whose combined ages totaled 347 years and they averaged near age 87: "The lady at the left is Mrs. Susan Johnson who lives at Argos, Ind., aged 87 yrs., a youthful looking woman, spry and alert, and who attends actively to the duties of her own home." On 19 December, 1926, Susan died at North Sugar Street, Argos, Indiana, the home of her daughter, Mrs. Anna Kendall. Susan was buried in Oak Hill Cemetery, Plymouth, next to her first husband, Albert Blodgett. Four of her five children survived her.

1.51 Blodgett, Carrie, born 1866, Plymouth, IN., and moved to Argos with her mother and new stepfather, Henderson Johnson. On 14 November, 1888 Carrie married Eldon J. Hughes. She was listed as living in Chicago, IL., in 1926 when her mother died in Argos.

1.52 Blodgett, Williiam, born 1868, Plymouth, IN. The 1880 U.S. census listed him as a student of 12 in Argos, Indiana. We found no other record except he was deceased before mother.

1.53 Johnson, Fred, born 1872-73, Argos, IN. We found no data on Fred except he was in contact with his Uncle Gordon Rudd, Code 1.6, in early 1920s inquiring about the William Rudd family. My copy of an undated letter written by my Grandfather Gordon Rudd, 1.6, forwarded Fred Johnson a list of the nine children of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd with a similar listing of the nine children of William and Anne McLean Rudd, (McLean is 1849 U.S. Immigration spelling of McCleane) his maternal great grandparents. The PLYMOUTH DAILY PILOT obituary, 20 December, 1926, for Susan listed Fred's address as LaGrange, Illinois, some 12 miles west of Chicago. This requires additional research.

1.54 Johnson, Anna R, born December, 1874, Argos, Indiana. The 1900 U.S. census listed "Annie" as " living at home, single, working as a Housekeeper". There was an earlier entry by Anna in Ida Rudd Shuler's (Code 1.34) Memory Book which was apparently filled out before Ida's departure for California. It read: "Cousin Ida, Departed from this town Walnut, Ind., Feb. 10, 1899. Gone but not forgotten. Anna R. Johnson, Maple Ave." This was the first evidence we found that Argos, Indiana, cousins had some contact with Marlette Rudds. It was Anna's home in Argos where her mother, Susan, died. Anna was listed as Anna Kendall in the obituary, however we found no information on Mr. Kendall nor any indication of when or where Anna married.

1.55 Johnson, Charles, born July, 1877. At the time of the 1900 U.S. census he was listed as "living at home, occupied as a Shoe Laster". His mother, Susan's, 1926 obituary listed Charles as living in Chicago. Regrettably, her obituary was the last documentation we found on any of the Johnson family members.

GORDON AND MARY WILSON RUDD

1.6 Rudd, Gordon, the sixth child of William and Anne McLean Rudd, born 22 October, 1841, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland. He was the second eldest of the four children left with relatives in Ireland when Gordon's parents emigrated to New York in late fall, 1949; thence to Canada West, September, 1851. Gordon stayed with Robert Francis Rudd, Code 7, one of William's younger brothers. In 1851 Gordon's name appeared on the MANIFEST OF PASSENGERS of the British ship "Samuel" out of Dublin; David Morris, Master. The Manifest included: "Robert Rudd, 24, male laborer; Ann (Cobbe) Rudd, 20, female servant; William Rudd, 10 months, male infant; Gordon Rudd, 8, male child". (Gordon was age 10.) There were four cabin passengers; 189 steerage passengers, including 13 infants; 32 children 1 to 12; 119 age 13 to 30; 22 ages 31 to 49; 2 age 50; 1 age 53. Several of Anne Cobbe Rudd's relatives sailed on the "Samuel". In November, 1951, the Rudds and Cobbes apparently proceeded directly to Canada West, near the present Hamilton, Ontario, where a Cobbe aunt, Mrs. Stroud, already resided. Here is where Gordon Rudd was reunited with his family. Two months earlier, September, 1851, they had arrived from upper New York State.

Note: Some indecision arose as to Gordon's middle name. In later years he was known as G.W. Rudd. Some thought the W was for William. There is no middle name listed in the family bible nor in his Civil War records. A copy of his military record dated 3 June, 1874, listed Gordon's name as "Rudd, Gordon Walter", as a middle name was requested on the form, perhaps. We assume there was no official middle name and the W was used as a convenience or compliance with custom.

The location of the Rudd family home in Canada West for the next five years, 1851-56, is not clearly designated. Canada West became the Ontario Province in 1867 with the establishment of the Dominion of Canada. Gordon was 15 when they moved the family by ox team to Sanilac County, Michigan, and settled on 320 acres of land 2 miles north of the present site of Marlette.

When the U.S. Civil War began, Gordon walked 30 miles in the crisp cold, to Romeo, MI, to sign up with the Union (Northern) forces. He enlisted 22 October, 1861, for 3 years in Company G, 10th Michigan Infantry. They mustered 6 February, 1862, with 997 officers and enlisted men assigned to the Army of the Mississippi; then briefly to Army of the Ohio. November, 1862, they were placed in the Army of the Cumberland commanded by Major General Rosecrans where the regiment served for the duration.

The 10th Infantry participated in over 50 combat engagements in Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, North and South Carolina. One of Gordon's grandsons, Stuart Rudd, remembered his grandad telling him that he carried the flag in many battles; the flag was shot away several times, but he was never wounded. Seven officers were lost; 95 enlisted men were killed; two officers and 223 enlisted men were dead from disease and other causes. About two-thirds of the regiment, including Gordon Rudd, had reenlisted for the war's duration as veteran volunteers. The record shows a bounty of $400 was paid for this reenlistment in early 1864.

By mid-February, 1864, the regiment was authorized to take a veteran furlough; a 30 day leave. During this furlough, Gordon went home to Marlette, Michigan, to marry Mary Louise Wilson on 24 March, 1864. No records found indicated if he used a train or walked. On his return to the Service in the south he was promoted to sergeant. In an army of 60,000 he participated in the final Atlanta Campaign which lasted to the end of the war, 26 April, 1865. This campaign included marching 300 miles and the burning of Atlanta; and "marching through Georgia with Sherman to the sea" where his "scorched earth" was a new reality. Sherman said: "War is Hell!" and "total war" cut a swath of devastation miles wide and 80 miles long through the South. Without supply lines, the troops "lived off the land" demoralizing populations, destroying railroads, and decimating dedicated southern military personnnel and scarce resources. Both North and South suffered severe hardships, hunger, and disease. On 24 April the regiment was ordered to march north for one month from Savannagh, Georgia, to Washington, D.C. There they joined in the Grand Review of Western Armies. May 24, 1865, the armies were reviewed by President Abraham Lincoln. The regiment then returned to Louisville, Kentucky, where it was mustered out of federal service 19 July, 1865. The men were discharged at Jackson, Michigan, 1 August, 1865. Apparently most of these widely ranging battle maneuvers were executed on "shank's mare", army slang for "on foot", as the infantry enlistment must have forewarned those volunteers four years earlier. Thus was the Union preserved.

Grandpa Gordon served three years, nine months, and eight days. He began a private at 20 and was discharged a sergeant at 24. His enlistment papers described him as a farmer; black eyes, auburn hair, light complexion, five feet ten and a half inches tall.

Many remember Gordon as at least six feet tall; he may have continued to gain height after his 20th year. The pay was not the incentive for Gordon's voluntary years of hardships and illness. One muster roll listed "a month's advance pay of $13 and a clothing allowance of money or kind of $30.45".

Gordon Rudd's bride, Mary Louise Wilson, was born 18 March, 1844 near London, Canada West. The Wilsons had emigrated from Ireland about 1843. They moved into the Marlette area in late 1859. Mary was very thin and Gordon's sisters advised him she was too frail to cope with life as a homesteader's wife. This was thoroughly disproved by arrival of their eight children and 80 years of pioneer living. Some granddaughters remember Grandma Mary was very friendly, sweet, and kind; much more approachable than Grandpa Gordon. Others remember her as very serious and quiet; not as much fun as their granddad. Mary Louise had been left a Marlette, MI, homestead by her older brother, James Wilson. He had walked 400 miles with nephew, William Rudd, to enlist in the Union Army in Lexington, KY, August, 1862. William died of pneumonia in Lexington in 1862. James died in a Confederate (Southern) Civil War prison 1863. On Mary Louise's Marlette homestead, Gordon farmed for 20 years and they raised their children. The 1880 U.S. Census lists them "living in Marlette Township with six children ranging in age from one to fourteen, as follows: William, Walter, Harvey, Robert Henry, Cora, and May." A son, Charles, the third child, died shortly after his birth. There was at least one later birth, a daughter, who died in infancy. The 1900 U.S. Census lists "eight children born; six living."

Advertisements by the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railroad in 1880s for prospective settlers in the famous Ree Valley in the Dakota Territory stirred up the Gordon Rudds for one more move. Except for sons Harvey and Robert Henry, who stayed with Grandma

Wilson to care for her while they continued their schooling, in the spring of 1883 the family rode the train to Redfield, the deadend of the line. They unloaded their stock and equipment and drove a team and wagon the final 30 miles to the homestead area in Hand County 3 miles south of present Orient, SD. As in Michigan, the Rudds were among the first settlers on Ree Indian Reservation in new Dakota Territory.

Much later, 22 July, 1937, a letter written in California was published in the ORIENT ARGUS commenting on first arrivals in Orient: "Arrived in that locality April 30, 1883. It was known as Ree Indian Reservation. The white inhabitants that come that Spring was the Sebring gang, consisting of Sebring, Dodge, Cal Sears, and others; the Rudd gang; and lastly the McClure outfit; I being the first white man to drive a Squatter Stake in that locality. Tom McClure."

A few stories circulated about Gordon Rudd: The Rudds arrived with a yoked team of oxen and two horses. The nearest town was Redfield, 30 miles distant. As the oxen and horses were being used by his older sons for sod busting, ploughing, and seeding, Gordon was known to walk 30 miles to Redfield one day and return the next with a 50 pound sack of flour on one shoulder and an equal weight of staples (food supplies) on the other. He was a Hand County Commissioner for a period, but decided the 30 mile walk to meetings was too strenuous, particularly in winter.

Some western frontier history: The Sioux Indians slaughtered the Custer Expedition at Little Big Horn in Montana, 1876. Years later, rumors of further Sioux uprisings rallied the early settlers in Dakota Indian Territory. The grain storage elevator southwest of Orient was prepared as a fort. Because of his Civil War experiences, Gordon Rudd was named captain to organize and train a company of infantrymen. They drilled with pitchfork handles, broom sticks, and the few rifles available while waiting for government guns and ammunition. The scare died down; guns were never delivered, and no further Indian trouble developed, although the homesteaders had staked their claims on Ree Indian Reservation lands.

Another anectdote: Gordon Rudd's grandchildren remembered his frequent rendition of "Marching Through Georgia", a Civil War song, and more exciting action. The Rudds had more children in the nearby county school than any others. As the school board refused Gordon Rudd's request to move the school to a more convenient location, with some outside help and horses he took action into his own hands. In the dead of night the school house was moved and appeared in the location he chose. Grandpa Rudd lived a life filled with action. The Rudds were very active Methodists. They helped organize the church in Orient. Gordon was also active in the Hand County American Legion Post, the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Masonic Lodge. The family farmed the Orient homestead for 16 years. This included a 10 acre tree farm claim which Rudds had started upon arrival from Michigan, 1883.

In 1899 they moved to Miller in the new state of South Dakota, previously designated as Dakota Territory. In 1920, at 80, Gordon built his last house, the family home at 521 West First Avenue. Gordon and Mary celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary on 24 March, 1924. Mary died two years later. Gordon had developed heart trouble in middle years, and severe diabetes in his dotage. He lived five years after Mary's death; until 25 January, 1931, just short of his 90th birthday. Both were buried in G.A.R. (Grand Army of the Republic) Cemetery, Miller, S.D. In 1988, Maureen Wherry Gerdes, a great granddaughter, 1.6226, and husband, Delmar, lived in the house Gordon built in 1920.

WILLIAM JAMES RUDD - SARAH MCCORMACK

1.61 Rudd, William James, eldest of Gordon and Mary Wilson Rudd, born 1 May, 1866, Marlette, MI. He was 17 when the family moved to Dakota Territory in 1883. He and younger brothers were very much involved in breaking the virgin sod of the flat, treeless, wind-swept grassy prairie. They planted the first crops on the new homestead. William hired out as a farm hand for neighbors in those early years.

On 25 April, 1890, in Watertown, SD, he married Sarah Caroline McCormack, born 7 November, 1872. His mother, Mary Louise, had brought Caroline out to meet Will, as Mary did not approve of his friend, Trink Hern. Will and Caroline rented a house for $5 per month in Watertown and Will worked in a livery stable caring for horses for $20 per month. After a year they moved out to Orient to return to farming. Will's father, Gordon, 1.6, gave them a wagon to get them started and a team of horses to pull a small "walking plough" which Will guided by hand as he walked behind. Will's first claim was in the hills. He disposed of it quickly and returned to farm across the road from his father. He then homesteaded a half section, 320 acres; and farmed another quarter section, 160 acres, nearby. He was chiefly a pig farmer. He raised the feed on the farm and had some added grain and hay for sale. He and Caroline raised seven children: Charles, Henry, Stella, Alfred, Leora, Ethel, and Chester. All were born in Hand County, south of Orient, SD. There were also premature twins, their firstborn, who lived only briefly. Caroline died 31 March, 1915, from complications following the birth of Chester, the youngest.

Later, Will married Trink Hern Alley who was a widow and had raised a large family. Trink had been an early love of Will's but their marriage was cut short by her early death. Will then courted her sister, Mary Hern Andrus. He married her, and moved into the hills to the Andrus place. Mary's son, Shorty Andrus, was living at home. He and Will did not get along well. Will wanted Shorty to leave. When it came to a vote, Will was outvoted 2 to 1 and was voted out. Will, who outlived two wives, could not win out with his third.

He was still active nearing 70. I recall my mother, Rosa Cassidy Rudd, Uncle Will's sister-in-law, made a short visit in 1935 to Los Angeles. She visited Uncle Will briefly as he was nearly out the door, on a date when she arrived. He died 15 July, 1942, in South Dakota. Both he and Caroline were buried in Prairie View Cemetery one mile south of Orient.

Charles Rudd - Bertha Greeves family

1.611 Rudd, Charles, the eldest of Will and Caroline, born 11 March, 1892, Hand County, south of Orient, S.D. He helped the family farm and graduated from Miller High School, 19ll, in a class of 14 which was the largest yet. The family bible shows Charles's middle name as William. His 1904 birth registery merely lists the first name. Charles earned an engineering degree from South Dakota State College in 1917. On 1 January, 1918, at Miller, he married a high school chum, Bertha Esther Greeves, born 19 September, 1893, in Miller. Her family tree registered 27 generations back to Sir Henry Greer in 1100s. Charles and Bertha's two children, Nathelle and Eloise, were born in 1921 and 1927 in Miller.

After a year in France 1918-19, World War I, Charles returned as a captain, field artillery. He resigned his regular army commission and served in reserves. In 1942, W.W.II, he was recalled as a major. Between wars he had worked with his father-in-law in the Greeves and Rudd Grocery in Miller, then as an engineer for South Dakota Highway Department. From 1942-1952 his 10 years active service spanned 7 in Colorado and 3 in Japan for Korean War. He retired a Colonel in 1952. He was employed in Denver, CO, Civil Defense for 2 years, and was an under sheriff for Denver County for 3 years. In 1958 he retired at 66. Rudds celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary on 1 January, 1978. Charles was very interested in progress of Rudd Family Research Assn. and IRISH RUDD FAMILY BOOK. He made valuable contributions regularly and hoped to enjoy the book's publication. Bertha died 7 December, 1983. Charles exceeded his goal of 90 by 2 years. He died 2 January, 1985. Both were buried in Fort Logan National Cemetery, Denver.

1.6111 Rudd, Nathelle Elaine, born 2 June, 1921, Miller, SD. On 19 August, 1940, in Nebraska, she married Harold Eugene Snodgrass born 4 June, 1921, Hand County, SD. Their children were: Kent Michael, Patricia, Stephen, Suzanne. Harold was a pilot during World War II stationed in Guam and New York. Later the family lived in San Bernardino, CA, where Harold was a house mover. He also ran a car wash in Hemet, CA. In Scottsdale, AZ, he continued as a house moving contractor. Nathelle died of cancer 18 October, 1979, and was buried in Riverside, CA. Harold married again; he was in Scottsdale, 1988.

1.61111 Snodgrass, Kent Michael, born 30 April, 1940. In San Bernardino in 1958 he married Carole Christianson, born 1942. Their four sons were: Jeffrey, Robert, James, and Kenneth all born before the parents divorced in 1965. Michael was married on 21 June, 1965, to Marcia Leigh Shiner, born 13 August, 1943. Their son, David Bryan, was born 13 May, 1973, in Scottsdale. Michael owned and operated a land development and construction company in Scottsdale. Carole died in 1980. The Rudds lived in Cave Creek, AZ, in 1988.

1.611111 Snodgrass, Jeffrey Michael, born 23 August, 1959, in San Bernardino, CA. Jeff had a degree in business administration from Arizona State University. He was a fundamentalist preacher in the Marantha Movement in College Station, TX. On 25 August, 1984, he married Marianne Jean Polgase, born 27 August, 1959 in WI. She had a special education degree. Their two children were: Jessica Nicole, born 10 April, 1986, and Susannah Grace, born 11 November, 1988, in College Station, the family hometown, 1988.

1.611112 Snodgrass, Robert Kent, born 6 February, 1961, San Bernardino, CA. He was in real estate and land development. In 1983 he married Susan DeRosa, born 23 August, 1961. Their two children were: Katherine Ashley, born 31 December, 1984, and Benjamin Robert, born 21 August, 1987, Scottsdale, AZ, the family hometown in 1988.

1.611113 Snodgrass, James Richard, born 23 February, 1962, San Bernardino, CA. Jim's degree was in hotel and restaurant management from North Arizona University. In November, 1987, he married Tamala Babcock who had a son, Ryan, by a former marriage. In 1988, Jim managed the Bobby McGee Restaurant, and the family lived in Scottsdale, AZ.

1.611114 Snodgrass, Kenneth Allen, born 12 July, 1965, San Bernardino, CA, and lived in Scottsdale, AZ, in 1988.

1.61112 Snodgrass, Patricia Joan, born 15 August, 1947, Miller, SD. Patricia's B.A. degree was Greek and Latin from University of California, Berkeley. Her Master's degree in educational psychology was from University of Indiana, Bloomington. Her career was as school psychologist, personnel consultant, and personnnel manager. On 21 December, 1968, in Santa Barbara, CA, she married Arthur Jon Schwalge, born 3 November, 1946, Chicago, Ill. He was a financial analyst with degrees from Santa Barbara and Berkeley campuses, University of California. Their child, Jennifer Anne, was born 18 October, 1973, Los Gatos, CA. Her parents divorced June, 1980. Patricia was married 15 August, 1987, in Columbus, Indiana, to Vojciech (Bert) Ladislav Hollansky, born 9 May, 1944, in Prague, Czechoslovakia. His family was displaced by the Nazi W W II invasion. Bert became a stock broker, a vice president in Prudential. Patricia was supervisor of academics, Atterbury Job Corp Center, where 600 urban youth found opportunity for a second start. The family lived in Columbus, Indiana, 1988.

1.61113 Snodgrass, Stephen Charles, born 26 June, 1954, Laurel, Maryland. He operated a house moving business with his father in Phoenix, AZ. On 26 June, 1981, in Phoenix, he married Diane Cecile Smith, born 14 January, 1959, San Bernardino, CA. Their child, January Diane, was born 20 January, 1985, in Phoenix before her parents separated. Stephen had a very serious freak accident in October, 1987. The back of his head contacted a power line while moving a house. He was electrocuted, but the impact of his fall from the roof restarted his heart. He was alive, miraculously, and normal. He lost both arms below the elbows. He had adjusted so well, overcoming the handicaps, he resumed his business operations in Phoenix, still his home in 1988.

1.61114 Snodgrass, Suzanne Sharon, born 16 March, 1957, San Bernardino, CA. On 18 November, 1978, in Las Vegas, Nevada, married Theodore Albert Miller III, born 19 October, 1955, Glendora, CA. Their son, Theodore Albert IV, was born 22 November, 1979, in Phoenix, AZ. The parents divorced 2 March, 1982, the year Teddy was seriously ill with infectious spinal meningitis which handicapped the child. Suzanne was living in Phoenix in 1988 working for her father.

1.6112 Rudd, Eloise Ester, second child of Charles and Bertha Greeves Rudd, born 5 April, 1927, Miller, S.D. Eloise was a licensed practical nurse, a graduate of Riverside Hospital, Newport News, Virginia. In August, 1947, in Yokohama, Japan, she married Dean Alexander Doyal, born in Indianapolis, Indiana, 19 April, 1922. He studied 3 years at The Citadel, a military school in Charleston, South Carolina, before his entire class shipped out in World War II. Dean was an army captain when he and Eloise married; not once but three times: first in a civil ceremony in American Consulate 13 August; second under Japanese law; and third in a church ceremony 20 August. Their three children were: Talis, Charles, and Michael. Dean served 31 years in the U.S. Army retiring a Lt. Colonel. In 1988 Doyals lived in Newport News, VA. Eloise had spent much time through the years in Denver, Colorado, caring for her mother and father. Eloise and her father, Charles, provided much needed information on the Will Rudds, Code 1.61.

1.61121 Doyle, Talis June, born 22 July, 1948, Tokyo, Japan. She graduated as a licensed practical nurse at Denver General Hospital. On 28 June, 1964, in Ft. Monroe, VA, she married Orville Tallman Lester (Curley); born 21 April, 1947, in Jolo, West Virginia. Curley was a Virginia state trooper and a state undercover narcotic agent. He was homesick for West Virginia mountains so he returned to Jolo. He was proud of being a "hill-billy", his part Cherokee Indian blood, and the Indian name, Tallman. He was a coal miner at the time of death in a freak accident February 28, 1974, as he flew his model airplane by remote control and hit a high voltage line. A son, Jonathon Luke, was born 18 May, 1972, in Richlands, VA, before Curley's death. In 1988 Talis continued working with her mother-in-law, Vernie Landers Leslie, in their grocery-gas station-garage in Jolo.

1.61122 Doyal, Charles Thomas, born 1 March, 1952, Fairbanks, Alaska. He graduated, 1976, from College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, VA, in computer science. He was in the computer field in active army reserves in Arizona and as a civilian in Virginia and Pennsylvania, chiefly with Sperry Univac as systems analyst and scientific programmer. On 25 February, 1977, he married Barbara Salome Hamaker, born 12 March, 1953, Washington, D.C. Hers was an old line Virginia family. She was a history major at William and Mary College and taught school in Virginia and Arizona, was a computer trainee in Utah, and in 1988 was with Sperry Univac. The Doyles' two children: Alexander Spencer, 14 December, 1974; and Rebecca Elizabeth, 20 January, 1981; both born Sierra Vista, AZ. The family home was Falmouth, VA., 1988.

1.61123 Doyal, Michael James, born 5 July, 1953, in Columbus, Georgia. He graduated from The Citadel, Charleston, South Carolina, in physical education. He was at Ft. Hood, TX, while a lieutenant in the regular army. On 7 June, 1975, in Newport News, VA., he married Deborah Beth Avery, born 30 June, 1953, Ft. Sill, Oklahoma. She was a home economics major, from Longwood College, Farmville, VA. As a civilian, he took an advanced engineering course while a reserve officer. He returned to active duty as a captain and served in the army engineering corps in Germany before retirement. Their children were: Elizabeth Payne, born 19 August, 1977, Ft. Alfred Rudd - Minnie Jacobson family

1.614 Rudd, Alfred Milton, fourth child of William and Caroline McCormack Rudd, born 28 February, 1901, Orient, SD. He attended Orient schools; graduated Miller High School. On 11 May, 1921, in St. Lawrence, SD., he married Wilimena (Minnie) Jeannet Jacobson, born 31 March, 1901, in Miller. Her parents emigrated from Denmark around 1890. Their three children were: Gordon, Vernon, and Kenneth. They farmed three miles south and a mile west of Orient until dust bowl eroded soil conditions forced them to leave. In March, 1935, they loaded a 1929 International truck with their belongings and headed west to Idaho, where they worked for a year enroute to Oregon and California. They visited my family; the Robert Henry Rudds, Code 1.64, in Corvallis, Oregon; where we all got acquainted. They eventually migrated east to Brown's Store, Virginia, arriving with about $20 cash. They started a small poultry ranch in Miskimon, VA, after some very rough times. Later their successful poultry farm and hatchery was in Winchester, VA. A fall from a poultry truck fatally injured Alfred 12 June, 1956. Minnie died 12 December, 1961. Both were buried in the National Cemetery, Winchester, VA.

1.6141 Rudd, Gordon William, born 11 January, 1922, Orient, SD. He was 13 when the family left the farm and ended up raising chickens in Virginia. Gordon completed the 7th grade in Idaho where the family was working enroute to the Pacific Coast. He continued his education in Virginia earning his B.S. degree in aeronautical and mechanical engineering and naval science & tactics from Purdue University in 1948. On 29 August, 1947, in Washington, D.C. he married Helen Barbara Hauter, born 26 January, 1927, in El Paso, TX, a fellow student at Purdue University, Lafayette, IN. Barbara's B.S. degree was in home economics. Her graduate studies were in Alabama and Virginia. With her Virginia teacher's certificate she taught for several years. Gordon was commissioned a Navy Ensign, 1948, and after four years service, worked for the Navy Department six years.

The last 30 years in the swimming pool construction business have been rewarding. Barbara introduced Gordon to this business when she volunteered him as chairman of a local community swimming pool committee. His good work was so professional a builder offered him a position in his Alabama business. Gordon was a pioneer in large pool design and construction. A 1981 Roanoke newspaper reported Gordon had built over 3,000 pools from Lynchburg, VA. into West Virginia. These included the newsworthy White House pool for U.S. President Gerald Ford; after Gordon and his brother, Ken, built Ford's personal pool; and another for the Nelson Rockefeller estate; and one of world's largest pools (18,000 square feet surface) in a Northern Virginia regional park. Gordon was involved in the development of the swimming pool industry; one of the first Directors of the National Swimming Pool Institute; and senior officer in several regional swimming pool associations. Gordon was listed in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA as a designer of pools, pool equipment, and pool construction.

Gordon's and Barbara's five children were: Gordon, Gayle, Gary, Gloria, Gina. In 1988 the couple lived in Roanoke where Gordon and Barbara were involved in National Pools of Roanoke, Inc. She had always been involved in Gordon's work. Since 1986 Rudd Roundup II, Gordon had been chairman of Rudd Family Research Association. Barbara volunteered at Rudd Roundup II, in the Burlington-Niagara-Canada area, to chair the 1989 Rudd Roundup III Committee. With their family and committee they organized Roundup III at Fort Magruder Inn, Williamsburg, VA, for over 140 international Rudd cousins attending in August, 1989.

1.61411 Rudd, Gordon William II, born 21 December, 1949, Washington, D.C. In 1972 Gordon accepted a commission in the army after graduating with honors from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, VA. He served in Europe, Central America, New Zealand, Middle East, and Korea in addition to his several tours of duty in the United States. He was a United Nations observer living in Jerusalem. He crossed into South Lebanon on assignments during the uprisings in Beruit. He was stationed along the DMZ (demilitarized zone) in South Korea before returning to the U.S. to attend the Naval War College, Newport, RI. His trip to England and Ireland was a respite following Korea. In 1988 he began work on a master's degree in military history at Duke University, Durham, NC. He was scheduled to teach military history at West Point Military Academy upon attaining his advanced degree. Gordy was a Major, 1989, and on the selection list for Lt. Colonel.

1.61412 Rudd, Gayle Barbara, born 31 January, 1951, Washington, D.C. Gayle graduated Virginia Polytechnic Institute (VPI) 1973. Her B.A. degree was in art with a Virginia State teacher's certificate. She taught art in Virginia Beach schools. Her art was in all immediate family members' homes. On 5 August, 1972, in Alexandria, VA., she married Frederick Lee Wall of Johnson City, New York. When they separated Gayle retained her maiden name. In 1988 she owned and operated Southport Fashions and Accessories in Crabtree Valley arrangement. He finished grade school west of Orient in a country school before returning to Miller for high school where he graduated in 1933. Known as the "dirty thirties", those were hard times in South Dakota dust bowl area. No rain, no crops, no work; just dust storms and grass hoppers.

Chester spent two years in the C.C.C. (Civilian Conservation Corps) in Deadwood, SD. In 1937 Chester hitched a ride into Detroit, Michigan, and became a grocery truck driver hauling groceries, meats, and produce for Krogers, a grocery chain store. On 26 December, 1938, in Detroit, he married Mildred (Millie) Effie Augustine, born 11 July, 1918, in Toledo, Ohio. Chester was exempt from the draft when WWII began as he was a "mover of food stuffs; classified as essential". Chester's and Millie's daughter was Roberta, born in 1940. By 1944 Chester was chief steward, Teamsters' Union, and was noticed by Jimmy Hoffa, labor boss. In October, 1945, Hoffa hired Chester as a business agent to organize Union chapters, negotiate contracts, and service the membership during labor grievance hearings, first in the Detroit area; then to Lansing, MI.; and then to Grand Rapids, MI, for the last 17 years of the career. Chester retired 1 May, 1975, after 30 years as a business agent and the family lived in Wyoming, MI. Chester had serious health problems, including diabetes, a condition prevalent among Rudds in Family One.

1.6171 Rudd, Roberta Willadean, born 25 January, 1940, in Detroit, MI. On 20 February, 1960, in Grand Rapids, she married Dennis Cecil Hopkins, born 23 June, 1940, in Lansing, MI. Their three children were: Lori, Dennis, and Robert, born before the parents divorced in 1980. Roberta was a teacher's aide for several years. She and the children lived in Wyoming, MI, until Roberta's sudden death 29 September, 1987, from a brain tumor. She was buried in Resurrection Cemetery, Wyoming, MI.

1.61711 Hopkins, Lori Ann, born 22 August, 1961, Grand Rapids, MI. In 1988 Lori was a secretary/broker for an import office at Grand Rapids Airport and lived in Wyoming, MI.

1.61712 Hopkins, Dennis Cecil, Jr., born 5 February, 1964, in Grand Rapids, MI. After a year of junior college he was in sales and service for a fire extinguisher company, and was a truck driver in 1988 distributing magazines. On 18 June, 1988, he married Jodi Hutchinson. Their son, Nicholas Ryan, was born 23 September, 1987, in Grand Rapids, MI., the family home in 1988.

1.61713 Hopkins, Robert Chester, born 11 November, 1967, in Grand Rapids, MI. In 1988 he worked for U.S. Gypsum & Insulation Factory and lived in Wyoming, MI, with his sister, Lori.

WALTER WILSON RUDD - ELLEN ELIZABETH DUNN

1.62 Rudd, Walter Wilson, second child of Gordon and Mary Wilson Rudd, born 8 November, 1867, in Marlette, MI. Walter was 15 when the family moved to Dakota Territory in spring, 1883. Formal schooling totaled a few years in Marlette area. Redfield, SD, the destination, was the end of the railroad line. With a pair of logging oxen, a wagon and a team of horses the family moved the boxcar of machinery and household goods to the new home. It was a 30 mile trip west to the present village of Orient, South Dakota. The town of Orient was officially organized 3 October, 1887; however several businesses were established earlier. Walter worked on the home ranch with his older brother, Will, breaking the virgin grassy sod, plowing with the ox team. They planted the first crops and started a 10 acre tree farm with sapling trees they brought from Michigan.

In his early 20s, Walter was thrown from a half-gentle horse and seriously injured riding herd on 200 cattle. The only doctor nearby was a young man who had left medical practice for the priesthood. He took Walter to his home in Zale and nursed him back to good health. He also helped him with his reading and exposed Walter to his collection of books. Walter became interested, studied, and converted to the Catholic religion. Later he met the Irish Catholic girl who became his bride. This conversion caused some family problems as religious differences were still emphasized strongly. Protestant vs. Catholic antipathies had very significant historic foundations and were fervent in the late 1800s.

On 8 November, 1893, in Huron, SD, Walter married Ellen (Nellie) Elizabeth Dunn, born 5 October, 1868, in Peoria, IL. Her parents, Patrick Dunn and Mary Miory, were Irish refugees (emigrants) from the Irish potato famine in late 1840s, and had been acquainted in Ireland. They married and settled in Illinois, raising a family of six daughters and two sons. Pat and his sons worked on the railroad as it was extended from Illinois to Dakota Territory. It reached Faulkton in 1883 and finally extended to Orient in 1886 which became the dead end of the line for some years. The Dunn daughters had enough schooling to be teachers. Ellen taught for eight years in rural Hand County before marriage. She rotated among several schools and taught three months at each one. A sister, Margaret Dunn, was caught out in the great blizzard of 1888 and froze to death on her way to a rural school. Ellen intended to become a nun, not to marry. However, Ellen felt sorry for the young man who came over in freezing cold to court her in the fall of 1893. So they married and raised a family of seven children: Edward Stuart, Mary, Marguerite, Florence, Julia, John, and Geraldine. They lost four infants: Walter, Walter Joseph Theodore, Ellen, and Gordon Anthony.

In the 1900 U.S. Census, Walter was listed as a grain buyer in the Norwegian settlement of Courtenay, North Dakota. He later farmed east of Orient on one of his grandfather's quarter sections (160 acres), located immediately south of the original homestead and east of the 10 acre tree claim. Walter's eldest son, Stuart, recalled his father was over six feet tall and very thin, weighing near 150 pounds, with the Wilson black hair. Walter ran a grain elevator (storage) for several years during the winter for wages so the children could get some schooling. His health was poor as he suffered from diabetes and had some early heart problems. He died at 59 on 3 January, 1926. His son, Stuart felt the cause was pneumonia following a bad cold. Nellie survived Walter for 25 years. Part of that time she lived with her daughter, Julie in Chicago and also in Woonsocket, SD. Nellie succumbed with complications from a broken hip in March, 1951. Both were buried in St. Anne's Catholic Cemetery, in Miller.

Stuart Rudd - Marie McGeary family

1.621 Rudd, Edward Stuart, born 21 August, 1894, Hand County, SD. His Grandmother Mary Dunn was the midwife at his birth. Stuart grew up on the farm, attended a small country school for several grades, finishing his schooling in Orient through the eight grades. Stuart was very sociable; he liked to dance, so he hid a suit of clothes in the barn and crawled out the window on Saturday nights to go dancing in spite of his mother's careful surveillance. Enlisted in the U.S. Navy in W.W.I he served on U.S.S. Georgia from Hampton Roads, VA, which was a troop transport escort ship to France. Though never under fire, they destroyed many German mines which were pulled from the water and detonated on the ship's deck. After the armistice, Stuart worked with his father on the farm before his marriage in 1921.

On 4 April, 1921, in Omaha, Nebraska, he married Marie Anne McGeary on her birthday, born 4 April, 1900, in Faulkton. They first rented a farm near Faulkton where their first son was born. Later they moved to a farm near Orient, and then 10 miles northwest of Miller where they farmed until 1971. Their six children were: Robert, Norvin, Mary Ellen, Adaline, Edward, and Donald. The '30s were very trying for South Dakota farmers. These were the depression years and South Dakota was plagued with dust storms, drought, and grass hoppers. This was the dust bowl era; farmers did not survive. Donald, Stuart's youngest son, reminisced about his father: "He was about 5 feet 10 inches, weighed maybe 140 pounds; a thin, wiry build; a muscular person. He was a hard worker but never attained very much. He was a reader; read all the books he could. He was not a carpenter like his dad and grandad. He was kind of an unconcerned farmer. One incident: my Grandad Gordon stopped to see my father one spring and he didn't have his potatoes in by St. Patrick's Day. My grandad was very upset that this young fellow, his grandson, hadn't even planted his potatoes. But my dad was never very depressed; never complained about things no matter how bad times were. He was very religious which may have accounted for his acceptance of adversity."

Stuart and Marie left the farm in 1971 and moved to the village of St. Lawrence just east of Miller. Stuart lived to age 84 and died of a stroke 3 March, 1979, complicated by Parkinson's disease and a bleeding ulcer. He was buried in St. Ann's cemetery, Miller. In 1981 we visited Marie who lived in St. Lawrence for five years. She lived in a senior citizen retirement complex in Miller, still alert and interested in daily affairs in 1988.

1.6211 Rudd, Robert Anthony, born 15 January, 1922, Faulkton, SD. He lived on the family farm northwest of Miller, and attended local schools. In 1955, in Huron, he married Herdes Irene Anderson Tevis, born 5 January, 1917, in Redfield. Her three daughters, by a previous marriage were: Dagmar Marie, 8; Della Ann, 5; Teresa, 1. Their father, Ralph Tevis, died in February, 1954. Robert did not adopt the girls, but raised them as daughters. Robert and Herdes had two sons: John and Paul. Herdes made quilts which became a demanding hobby. Robert worked 40 years for Armour Meat Packing plant in Huron. He retired officially six months after the plant closed. He was very active in St. Martin's Catholic Church and Knights of Columbus. Like many Rudds, Bob was diabetic. Great travelers, the family enjoyed at least one yearly trip as camping enthusiasts and they lived in Huron in 1988.

Dagmar Marie Tevis, born 8 March, 1945; married 1.6217 Donald Rudd, younger brother of Robert. Della Ann Tevis, born 1 April, 1948, married William H. Ranschau, farmer, in Rock Valley, Iowa. Teressa Ellen Tevis, born 16 July, 1952, married Guy Croucher, commercial painter, with a shop in Aberdeen, SD.

1.62111 Rudd, John Stuart, born 23 June, 1956, in Huron. He attended local schools; was selected in junior year to attend American Legion sponsored Boys State at Northern State College, Aberdeen. He majored in political science at University of South Dąkota, Vermillion, and served as a legislative intern in South Dakota Senate, Pierre. He was City Clerk in Waukon, Iowa, then city administrator in Blue Earth, Minnesota. On 13 June, 1981 in Estherville, Iowa, he married Deborah Lee Tholkes, a remedial reading teacher, born 25 August, 1954, in Waukon. Her degree was in elementary education and remedial reading from the University of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls. In 1988 John was Delavin City Administrator in Wisconsin. Deborah was teaching in a Catholic elementary school.

1.62112 Rudd, Paul Thomas, born 13 April, 1961, Huron, SD. Paul was a chess player who won his first match in grade school. After high school, he served a tour in the U.S. Army. At home, still single, he died 10 February, 1986, of leukemia after six months illness.

1.6212 Rudd, Norvin James, born 12 October, 1927, Aberdeen, SD. He attended country schools near the homestead and graduated from a German Catholic School in Polo, SD. He attended both Columbus College, Sioux Falls; and St. John's at Collegeville, Minnesota. On 14 October, 1950, in Huron, he married Mary Ellen Manning, born 23 November, 1932. Their five children were: James, Judy, Anne, Mary, and Michael. He was employed by U.S. Postal Service 30 years. He and Mary enjoyed roller skating. She made news by knitting while she skated. She also collected antiques and Red Wing pottery which filled the house where we visited in 1981. Norvin's serious accident, which occurred while skating, pushed his hip bone into his pelvis. They lived in Huron in 1988.

On 5 September, 1955, in Miller, she married Eugene Raymond Porter, born January, 1928, in Miller. He was a blacksmith; a rapidly disappearing trade. Their five children were: David, Audrey, Wayne, Kathleen, and Ronald. Mary nursed for 17 years at Good Samaritan Lutheran Home, Miller. His shop was in St. Lawrence village where the family lived in 1988.

1.62131 Porter, David Eugene, born 23 May, 1957, Miller, SD. His B.S. degree was from South Dakota State, Brookings. In 1981 he was a medical technician at St. Mary's Hospital, Pierre, S.D., continuing through 1988.

1.62132 Porter, Audrey Marie, born 15 August, 1958, Miller, SD. Her B.S. degree was from South Dakota State in microbiology and chemistry. In 1981 she was a medical student at University of South Dakota, Vermillion, to be an M.D./general practitioner. On 23 May, 1984, she married Dr. Steve Bailin, cardiologist. Their two children were: Rachael Elise, born 4 October, 1986; and Samuel Stuart, born 28 July, 1988. By 1988 Audrey was an M.D. practicing in St. Paul, MN., where they lived.

1.62133 Porter, Wayne Joseph, born 11 December, 1959, Miller. He was a junior at South Dakota State, Brookings, majoring in political science, 1981, and earned his degree. In 1988 he raised a prize herd of several hundred sheep, worked for his father as a blacksmith, and sculptured in iron as a hobby in St. Lawrence.

1.62134 Porter, Kathleen Joyce, born 12 April, 1963, Miller. In 1981 she was a freshman at South Dakota State, Brookings. In 1988 she was a degreed microbiologist for Ft. Dodge Laboratories in animal research developing protective serums, and lived in Ft. Dodge, Iowa.

1.62135 Porter, Ronald Matthew, born 19 October, 1967, Miller. In 1988 he was a senior in mechanical engineering at University of South Dakota, Brookings.

1.6214 Rudd, Adaline Teresa, born 8 July, 1932, in Miller. Adaline's teacher's certificate was from Northern State Teacher's College, Aberdeen, SD. She taught rural schools four years before her marriage. On 30 August, 1954, in Miller, she married Carol Ray Busby, born 7 August, 1933, in Lubbock, TX., who tested and repaired high pressure tank systems. Their four children were: Steven, Gregory, Kevin, and Paula. In 1985 the family was in Huntington Beach, CA., and in 1988 Carol retired and the family moved to Amarillo, Texas.

1.62141 Busby, Steven Lee, born 9 July, 1955, Lubbock, TX. He was a welder and worked on high pressure systems. In 1988 he was in Amarillo, Texas, and was a painter.

1.62142 Busby, Gregory Ray, born 18 January, 1957, Abilene, TX. In 1980 he married Cindy Gibbons, born 20 December, 1958. Cathy was Cindy's daughter by a former marriage. born 3 October, 1975. Gregory's and Cindy's two children were: Barbara Ann, 12

November, 1981; and Gregory Ray, Jr., 24 December, 1983; both born in Springfield, Missouri. In 1988 Gregory was employed in refrigeration/air conditioning on heavy mobile equipment and the family lived in Springfield.

1.62143 Busby, Kevin Wayne, 10 September, 1959, Abilene. While in junior college, he died in an auto accident 14 October, 1978.

1.62144 Busby, Paula Marie, born 22 August, 1970, Long Beach, CA. She was profoundly deaf at birth. Adaline learned sign language to improve communications. Paula attended elementary school in Santa Ana, CA, an outstanding school for the deaf as total communication was used. Paula was in regular junior high school classes with an interpreter where she made excellent progress. In 1988 Paula was a high school senior in Amarillo, TX. She planned to attend Gallaudet College, Washington, D.C. in 1989, the only college strictly for the deaf in the country. Paula hoped to become a teacher of the deaf.

1.6215 Rudd, Edward Thomas, born 21 August, 1935, his father's birthday. Ed served in the U.S. Marine Corps in Korean War. He was an alcohol and drug abuse counselor at Bellin Hospital, Green Bay, Wisconsin. On 12 April, 1958, in Minneapolis, MN, he married Joan (Joni) Sharon McCabe, born 15 July, 1935, in Wausau, WI. Their two children were: Connie and Edward Jr. Jane was an administrative assistant for Brown County Mental Health Center. Her own business, "Joni's House", carried handcrafted miniature doll houses and accessories. She expanded the business as "Image Peddlers", a wholesale distribution of Wisconsin-made gifts to 12 states and growing in 1988. Ed and Joni were both antique buffs; country music and science fiction fans; and avid Green Bay Packers supporters, a residency requirement where they lived. Ed Sr.'s cancer of tongue and throat was diagnosed late. He died 28 February, 1988, and was buried in Green Bay, Wisconsin.

1.62151 Rudd, Connie Lynn, born 20 December, 1958, Miller, SD. On 23 August, 1980, in Green Bay, WI., she married Dale Bernard Ebben, born 3 September, 1957. They separated. Connie was a sales representative for a metal company. They lived in Green Bay, Wisconsin, in 1988.

1.62152 Rudd, Edward Thomas, Jr., born 12 August, 1962. Expected on his father's and grandfather's birthday, 21 August, he arrived earlier on 12 August and had been in a hurry ever since. Ed was badly injured in an auto accident at age four. He suffered severe nerve damage in left arm leaving limited use. He played pool with considerable skill and success in spite of a handicap. He managed a periwinkle mattress outlet in Green Bay. In 1988 he was a car salesman engaged to Tina Walk, born 7 January, 1964; he lived in Green Bay, WI.

1.6216 Rudd, Donald Joseph, born 1 December, 1939, Miller, SD. On 13 September, 1968, in Huron, Donald married Dagmar Marie Tevis, stepdaughter of Don's older brother, Robert. Dagmar was born 8 March, 1945, in Huron. Although hers was a good Danish name, she said she was not interested in her family background. Their three children were: Aaron Stuart, 12 September, 1970; Annette Kathleen, 29 March, 1973; both born in St. Louis, MO; and Christina, born 16 December, 1979, in Silver City, New Mexico. Donald reported he was 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighed about 120 pounds. He was an amateur boxer when young and fought over 100 times. He won the South Dakota State tournament four times and boxed three times in National Golden Gloves tournaments, going to the quarter-finals twice. He also boxed two years in the U.S. Army at Ft. Campbell, Kentucky. He kept fit by running 8 to 10 miles a day and completed several marathons. In Silver City he was an anesthetist who trained at Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, MO.

Also a philosopher, Donald stated: "History is sometimes a fable that is agreed upon. Word of mouth gets lost or distorted in a few generations." Donald was interested in family records and due to his medical background he was particularly curious as to Rudd longevity and the diseases which were fatal to Rudds. Quoting Donald: "The Rudds have a certain type of personality. They are hard-headed people. They believe what they want to believe. I don't think they have ever had any mental illness; not even a nervous breakdown." The Donald Rudds lived in Silver City, New Mexico, in 1988.

Mary Louise Rudd - Melvin Wherry family

1.622 Rudd, Mary Louise, born 30 August, 1896, in Hand County, S.D., the second of eleven children of Walter and Ellen Dunn Rudd. Mary Louise was named after her Grandma Rudd. She was baptized in Courtenay, N.D., where her folks had moved after her birth. The North Dakota 1900 U.S. Census showed Rudds still in Courtenay with three children. A fourth child, Walter, did not survive. These Rudds were back in South Dakota by 1901 living on a farm near Orient where Mary grew up attending a small country school in the lower grades and school in Orient several winters when her father moved the family to town while he operated a grain elevator (storage). She finished eighth grade at a Benedictine Sisters' boarding school in Zale. For two years, Mary studied at Aberdeen Normal (Teacher's) College for a teacher's certificate.

Before marriage she taught 5 years in Faulk County and Park Township, Hand County., Her first contract was for 3 months at $25 per month. On 23 January, 1918, in Orient, she married Melvin Francis Wherry, born 11 April, 1892, in Vermillion, SD. Their seven children were: Bernard, Celius, Werner, Eileen, Dennis, Maureen, and Donna. Melvin was in the U.S. Army soon after marriage. He was in France and Belgium two years. The Croix de Guerre with Gilt Star was among his several medals. It was from the French Government in 1919. Mary continued to teach during his enlistment. On his return the Wherrys settled on a farm in northern Hand County near Orient, where they shared a home with Mary's folks a short time. Later they farmed in southern Faulk County as their family grew up, and returned to Hand County to a farm from which they retired in 1958.

Their children remember a home of love, security, and many joyous times. In spite of hard times in the 1930 dust bowl years, there were always Christmas gifts and decorated Easter eggs. The family attended church each Sunday and the children took their religious instruction on Saturday afternoons. Mary was very active in St. Joseph's Church, Orient, and in the American Legion Auxiliary. Her life was very busy; very hard at times taking care of seven children with no modern conveniences; a pattern many other farm families experienced in those years. Melvin's mother also lived with them for several winters along with the County school teacher. Like most farm wives, besides caring for house and children, Mary helped with the "chores": raised the chickens and turkeys; milked cows; raised a garden; and sewed a lot of clothes. In her children's words: "During all this she maintained the patience of a saint."

After leaving the farm, Mary and Melvin lived in Orient until his death 19 June, 1970, at age 78. Melvin was buried in the Faulkton Cemetery. Mary moved to Miller and lived many years in her own home where we visited her in 1981. At 92 she lived in Prairie Good Samaritan Home in Miller in 1988.

1.6221 Wherry, Bernard Francis, born 8 June, 1920, Orient, SD. He went to country school in Hand County and Orient High School where he played a baritone horn in the band. He served four years in the U.S. Army. He was a farmer. On 23 November, 1948, Bernard married Louise Leona Meier, born 2 October, 1915, in Orient. He worked on several farms in Polo area before retirement. Louise, in poor health, died March, 1986. In August, 1988, Bernard married Doris Sunding of Spearfish, SD, a widow with several daughters.

1.6222 Wherry, Celius Allred, born 18 September, 1921, Orient. He attended Hand County grade school and three years of high school in Orient. Celius was employed in a California aircraft plant for a time and also farmed in Faulk County before marriage. On 23 November, 1943, at St. Thomas Catholic Church, Faulkton, he married Regina Pauline Speck, born 6 July, 1920, in Hoven, SD. Their three children were: Richard, Donald, and Diane. Celius was with the South Dakota Highway Department for 25 years before retirement. Carpentry was one of his several hobbies. He and Regina lived in Faulkton, SD, in 1988.

1.62221 Wherry, Richard Charles, born 31 October, 1946, in Faulkton, SD. His B.A. degree was in business education from Northern State College, Aberdeen, SD. On 24 August, 1966, in Faulkton, he married Phyllis Joan Glanzmen, born 13 December, 1946, in Germany. Their four children were: Deanne, 1967; Brent Eugene, 1 July, 1970; and Christy Marie, 28 November, 1971; all born in Aberdeen; and Kevin Michael, 16 June, 1979, born in Ortonville, MN. Phyllis was employed by an insurance company and Richard taught business courses and coached at Milbank High School, Milbank, SD, where the family lived in 1988.

1.622211 Wherry, Deanne Sue, born 4 November, 1967, Aberdeen, SD. She attended college and worked in insurance. In 1988 she planned to marry Michael Docktor, a dairy farmer, April, 1989.

1.62222 Wherry, Donald Celius, born 25 September, 1948, Faulkton. He attended Faulkton schools, served two years in the U.S. Army, including one year as a medical corpsman in Vietnam. After service, Donald was employed by United Parcel Service. On 31 May, 1969, in Faulkton, he married Sandra Lee Kukrall, born 27 December, 1949, in Ipswich, SD. Their two sons were: Shawn David, 26 September, 1971; and Brian Donald, 22 April, 1974; both born in Aberdeen, SD. Sandy was a bank teller and Donald was with U.P.S. in 1988 in Aberdeen where the family lived.

1.62223 Wherry, Diane Cecelia, born 13 January, 1952, Faulkton. Diane attended Faulkton schools. On 27 January, 1970, she married Brad Joseph Becker, born 2 May, 1950, in Rockham, SD. Their three children were: Stacey Ann, 10 June, 1970, Faulkton; Michelle Jo, 20 February, 1974; and Chad Joseph, 13 September, 1981; both born in Aberdeen where

He was in aircraft parts procurement at McDonald- Douglas Corporation several years. In 1986 he was with International Contract Administration for Emerson Electric and lived in Hazelwood in 1988.

HARVEY GORDON RUDD - EMMA DAVIS

1.63 Rudd, Harvey Gordon, third child of Gordon and Mary Wilson Rudd, born 28 February, 1872, Marlette, MI. He was 11 in the spring of 1883 when the rest of the family migrated to "newly opened" land on Ree Indian Reservation in Dakota Territory. Harvey and his younger brother, Robert Henry, stayed in Marlette to continue their schooling and lived with their Grandma Wilson. In 1884-1885 at 13-14 Harvey followed the family west, taking the train to Redfield, the end of the rail line. His older brother, Walter, met him there. They rode part way home on a load of lumber and hiked the last half of the 30 mile trip during the night. Harvey attended Spring Township Center School from the homestead and was at Dakota Wesleyan, Mitchell, at least one year. In his 20s he worked on the homestead with his father. Later, when his father, Gordon, was seriously ill with Bright's disease, he was deeded the original homestead quarter section. His brother, Will, had the quarter section (160 acres) across the road; and brother, Walter, had a quarter section of land next south. The original homestead was 3 miles south and 3/4 of a mile west of the present village of Orient.

On 21 November, 1898, in Orient, Harvey married Emma Carrol Davis, born 19 May, 1876, in Norwich, Ontario, Canada. She was a twin, the youngest child of a retired Methodist minister, the Reverend John T. Davis, of Somerset, England. Her mother, Amy Clark, was a yankee from Vermont. Emma was good looking and a bit taller than Harvey, used to city life as a preacher's daughter. In time she adjusted fully to farm life. They farmed and rebuilt the old homestead; new house, new barn, and granary. Their three daughters were: Ruth, Gladys, and Arlie; all became school teachers. In 1948 they sold the homestead to their second daughter, Gladys and spouse, and moved to Redfield and lived five years. In 1953 they moved to Aberdeen to live with their youngest daughter, Arlie. Harvey died 13 August, 1956, and Emma died 26 April, 1957; both are buried in Riverside Memorial Cemetery, Aberdeen.

Ruth Rudd - (1) William Calley (2) Clarence DeJong (3) Luther Corbin families

1.631 Rudd, Ruth Leona, born 26 July, 1900, Orient, SD. Out of 29 grandchildren, Ruth had the only auburn-red hair like Grandpa Gordon's. She attended Orient schools and graduated Watertown High School, then received a teacher's certificate. She taught several years in Spring Township schools, including a year at Center School, her childhood school. In 1924 she completed a degree at Dakota Wesleyan, Mitchell, to teach high school. On 25 August, 1925, in Redfield, she married William Robert Calley, a Methodist minister. Their daughter, Rosamond, was born 29 May, 1926. They traveled to schools in the Mitchell area where Reverend Calley preached and Ruth played the piano. He developed a cancerous sarcoma tumor below his eye which was removed successfully in Kansas City, MO; however he hemorrhaged and died 17 July, 1926. He was buried in Graceland Cemetery, Mitchell.

Ruth taught a mission school in Sioux City, Iowa, when she met Clarence Adrian DeJong. On 3 July, 1929, in Mitchell, she married Clarence, born 25 April, 1891, near Orange City, Iowa. Their five children were: Edwin, Leonard, Noreen, Emily, and Eloise. After two years they moved to Mitchell where Clarence was with Milwaukee Railroad and then Hormel's Packing Plant. Ruth continued to teach in several high schools while raising their family. In August, 1954, Clarence lost his left hand in a plant accident. He died of a heart attack four months later and was buried in Graceland Cemetery, Mitchell.

To support the family, Ruth continued to teach most high school subjects and substituted as principal when necessary. In 1957 she attended summer school at South Dakota State, Brookings, studying home economics and business. Here she met Lou Corbin, a local farmer. On 1 January, 1958, in Brookings, she married Luther Adler Corbin, a widower, born 20 June, 1897, in Miner County, SD. She taught at Carthage and Canova while married and lived and farmed in Carthage area. He became seriously ill and Ruth retired after teaching 29 years. Lou suffered a stroke in May, 1978. He died 1 July, 1978, and was buried in Prairie Flower Cemetery, Fedora, SD. Ruth had developed diabetes, cataracts were removed from both eyes and she suffered Parkinson's disease. We visited Ruth in 1981 in a Mitchell retirement home. In March, 1982, she fell and broke a hip and did not recover from the accident, but died 1 August, 1982. She was buried in Graceland Cemetery, Mitchell, SD.

1.6325 Engle, Virgil Lee, fifth of Lloyd and Gladys Rudd Engle, born 12 January, 1940, in Faulkton, SD. On 15 December, 1962, he married Colleen Rose Danhauer, born 27 April, 1943. Their three children were: Garret; Chadwick Aaron, 3 May, 1970; and Corella Ann, 10 July, 1972; born in Lincoln, Nebraska. Chad was a psychology major at University of Nebraska in 1988. Virgil owned a mail store and operated a United Parcel Service outlet in Lincoln; Coleen was an executive secretary at Lincoln General Hospital. The family lived in Lincoln in 1988.

1.63251 Engle, Garret Lee, born 18 July, 1966, Lincoln, Nebraska. He was a salesman for an engine parts store in 1988.

1.6326 Engle, Dorothy Louise, sixth child of Lloyd and Gladys Rudd Engle, born 13 October, 1942, in Faulkton, and died as an infant.

Arlie Rudd - Stephen Goldade

1.633 Rudd, Arlie Helen, third daughter of Harvey and Emma Davis Rudd, born 16 February, 1911 in Orient, South Dakota. Arlie attended Orient schools and graduated from Redfield High School in 1929. After two years at Northern State Teachers College, she began teaching in rural schools. She earned a bachelors degree from Dakota Wesleyan in 1935 and a masters from Northern State in 1955. She taught a total of 39 years, the last 19, commercial subjects at Aberdeen Central. She retired from teaching in 1973. She was also doing secretarial work at St. Lukes Hospital in Aberdeen. Her folks spent their final years with Arlie. On 28 May, 1977, she married Stephen J. Goldade of Aberdeen, but lived less than a year, dying of cancer 10 March, 1978. She was buried in Riverside Cemetery in Aberdeen. Her husband Stephen died in his sleep the same year, 30 October, 1978, after four days of pheasant hunting.

ROBERT HENRY RUDD - (1) ETHEL GLASS; (2) ROSA CASSIDY

1.64 Rudd, Robert Henry, fourth child of Gordon and Mary Wilson Rudd, born 29 September, 1873, in Marlette, Michigan. My father was called Henry, and signed as R.H. Rudd. In 1883, when the family moved to Dakota Territory, Henry and his brother, Harvey, stayed in Marlette with Grandma Wilson to continue schooling. Harvey joined the family a year later in Dakota. Their grandma was quite a character; a Scot-Irish pipe-smoking lady who was difficult to be around. Henry cooked and cared for her while in school obtaining a teacher's certificate. His Uncle Henry Wilson promised him a farm for his efforts when he grew up, but the pay off never was made. Henry's first teacher's contract was at age 19, in 1892. He taught all grades in Cass County, N.Dak. country schools. He also taught in Hand and Faulks Counties, S.Dak., a total of 10 years. In a souvenir program I have, Lulu and Jesse Rudd were among 32 students in his Orient, S.D., school. They were granddaughters of Gordon Rudd II, head of Family 8, and were Henry's second cousins. Henry also attended Ames Agricultural College, Ames, Iowa for parts of two years.

It was while boarding with the Robert Glass family that he met his first wife in 1898. On 14 December, 1898, in Gardner, N.D., Henry married Ethel Olive Glass, born 24 October, 1878, in Birvie or Tiverton on Lake Huron north of Goderich, Ontario, Can., where John Rudd, Family 4, raised his family. Ethel's mother was one of seventeen children of Francis and Jane Collins Colwell. There were at least two Colwell-Rudd connections; Codes 1.3 and 8.1. My older half-brother, Clayton, was Henry's and Ethel's only child.

Teaching salaries of $25 to $40 per months did not support a family. In 1903 Henry quit teaching to be a mail clerk on the Sioux Line R.R. between Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, and Minneapolis, MN. After a year or so he opened "Groceries, Notions, Boots, and Shoes" in Enderlin, N.D. In 1907 the store burned; only a barrel of vinegar, a barrel of crackers, and the cash register were saved.

There were glowing reports about new land being opened for homesteading in the newly created Province of Saskatchewan, Canada. Henry and family migrated with the Glasses in late 1907. They took up homesteads 65 miles south of Battleford, the nearest town before the railroad. This was virgin prairie, not a tree in sight. The first houses were built of sod cut from the grassy top soil. The poles used for rafters were brought in from a distance for the roofs. Plentiful buffalo chips were the chief fuel the first winter. These were gathered by the wagonload from the open prairie.

As Henry had brought along his cash register and barrels of vinegar and crackers, he brought in a few supplies from Battleford and set up a store. His wife, Ethel, was in poor health. She and Clayton wintered in Spokane, WA, 1907-08 with an aunt. Ethel was treated for severely infected tonsils. The infection spread to her stomach and kidneys. On 8 May, 1908, she and Clayton left Spokane to join Henry at home. She died within three weeks, 27 May, 1908. She was buried in Saskatchewan Prairie Cemetery, now Kerrobert.

Wherever Henry lived he started a non-denominational Sunday school or was soon superintendent of an existing one. Henry continued to be very active leading and supporting religious meetings and holding community cottage meetings around Kerrobert and Hartsburg with John Cassidy for several years before the Kerrobert Union Church was built in 1915. In 1981 Mari and I saw my father's photo, "The First Superintendent", on the Sunday school wall there. We labeled it "Robert Henry Rudd, 1911-1918, Superintendent".

Henry knew the Cassidy family well. On 27 October, 1909, in Cassidy's home near Hartsburg he married Rosa Vivian Cassidy, born 26 February, 1884, in Ailsa Craig, Ontario. She had trained to be a milliner's apprentice in London, Ontario, before Cassidys moved to Saskatchewan in 1908. My parents' three children were: Norman, Marion, and Ruth, born near Kerrobert.

Hartsburg was the first post office near the future Kerrobert. Set up in Lucinda Hart's home, she was the first post mistress. The Hart's homesteaded in 1907, one of earliest in area. She was John Cassidy's sister. Named for Robert Kerr, a rail official, the town was incorporated when the railroad reached Kerrobert in 1911; a good year on the prairie, the year of my birth.

Henry farmed in Saskatchewan nine years of small yields and bitter 40-below-zero winters. Near Indian and buffalo trails, and migratory fowl fly-ways, the Rudd farm had a bubbling well, a large pond, berries supplied by the Indians, and room to roam on a pony. Our family left Kerrobert in 1918. Dad farmed in Alberta, Canada; Washington; again in Alberta; and finally in Oregon. In 1933 he was critically injured in a farm accident which crushed four vertabrae in his back. Henry was not paralyzed, however he suffered intermittent pressure on the nerves and the damaged spinal cord and never recovered his health. In 1937, in spite of no serious injury in an auto accident, Dad died 31 January, when the family car Mother drove turned over on a gravelled curve on a snowy country road near Scio, Oregon.

Besides being a farmer and teacher, my father, Henry, was a religious leader; a lay minister of sorts. Henry Rudd felt every youngster should be given moral and religious training. He never forced his views, but demonstrated his beliefs and principles by example in daily living. His strongest epithets were: "Con hammered" and "by the Great Horn Spoon". Remembering the Indians swore by the Great Horn Spoon and their food was served with a spoon made from a buffalo horn....this was an important belief.

My mother, Rosa, was 53 when my father died. She had never worked outside her home, but that was no deterrent. She ran a boarding house in Salem, Oregon, and worked in the Portland shipyards during WW II. She operated a variety store in Scio, and finally was a cook in a nursing home in Salem. In her 80th year, she attended a family reunion. On 1 October, 1964, she died of a heart attack and massive stroke in the London, Ontario, Canada, hospital where she was born. Both Rosa and Henry were buried in Skyline Memorial Gardens, in Portland, Oregon.

Clayton Rudd - Grace McCune family

1.641 Rudd, Clayton Glass, only son of Robert Henry and Ethel Glass Rudd, born 10 June, 1904, Tower City, ND. He grew up on Saskatchewan prairies and completed high school in Spangle, WA. In 1931, he received his D.D.S. degree from University of Minnesota. On 3 September, 1932, in Minneapolis, he married Grace Estelle McCune, born 29 April, 1905, in Minneapolis. Their son, Robert Clayton Rudd, was born there. Dr. Rudd practiced dentistry for 48 years in Minneapolis and Grace kept the accounts until he retired in 1979.

Prairie-raised, Clayton had always been an ardent conservationist and environmentalist stimulating interest in natural resources and native species through his writing, photography, and lectures. He was highly instrumental in organizing the Minnesota Natural History Society in 1949. Grace actively supported and participated in these efforts. He was President and Editor of the Society's quarterly magazine publication, THE NATURALIST, for 37 years. In 1988 he served on the Presidential Advisory Committee on the operation of U.S. National Parks. The Clayton Rudds had spent most summers in Jackson/Moose, Wyo., where they helped design and build their second home. In their retirement, Grace and Clayton divided their time between Edina, MN, and Moose enjoying their large tri-level smooth-logged home centered on the spectacular view of the three central peaks of the Grand Tetons. The home was within the Teton National Park boundaries. In 1988 their summer in Moose was spent at the Jackson Hole Museum assisting their son, Robert, the Curator, and enjoying their two granddaughters, Laurel and Melissa.

1.6411 Rudd, Robert Clayton, born 20 May, 1940, in Minneapolis. Bob graduated from Blake School and received his B.A. degree in art from Carleton College, near Minneapolis, where he met Sharon Walker. Graduate work was at Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. His M.A. education degree was from University of Pennsylvania. On 8 August, 1965, in Great Falls, Montana, he married Sharon Kathleen Walker, born 13 March, 1943, Great Falls. Sharon was a Phi Beta Kappa with a B.A. degree in English from Carleton College; and a teaching credential in German. She taught English in Carbondale where Bob was teaching. Their two children were: Laurel Elizabeth, 29 November, 1971; and Melissa Leigh, 13 August, 1976; both born in Jackson, Wyo. In 1988, Laurel's high school junior year, she was a Rotary exchange student in Belgium studying in the French language. A month after her return from Belgium on August 10, 1989, Laurel was killed when her small car was demolished in a head-on collision with a van and trailer. Sharon was interested in gold- and silver-smithing. In 1988 she was a qualified silversmith with a studio at home in Wilson, WY.

Bob taught art for three years at Carbondale, Colorado, before moving to Jackson, Wyo., where he summered for many years. He was a fine artist, a published photographer, and art director for THE NATURALIST magazine. Bob was a general contractor; a designer and builder of 34 homes in the Jackson area over several years culminating in the creation of their own passive solar, earth-bermed, family home on a small mid-stream island reached by a suspension bridge. Bob organized efforts to restore Jackson Hole Museum enlarging the collections for preservation. In 1983 during Rudd Roundup I many Rudd cousins visited this museum to better understand the history of the area and appreciate Bob's efforts. In 1988 he was curator of the museum and the Robert C. Rudds lived in Wilson near Jackson.

Norman Rudd - (1) Aileen Miles family (2) Mari Alberts Reed

1.642 Rudd, Norman Newton, eldest child of R.H. (Henry) and Rosa Cassidy Rudd, born 2 August, 1911, was delivered on the kitchen table in a sod house by an itinerant doctor near Kerrobert, Sask., the same year Kerrobert was incorporated. I, Norman, was raised in western Canada and the State of Washington. I received my chemical engineering degree from Oregon State College, in Corvallis, 1934; and a California teaching credential from University of California, Berkeley, 1939. My U.S. citizenship papers were approved the same year. On 11 August, 1940, in LaGrande, OR, I married Adna Aileen Miles, born 12 April, 1917, Cheney, WA. Her maternal ancestors were all early Oregon Trail pioneers and came through the Columbia River Gorge in 1844, the second year wagon trains reached Oregon, and in 1845, by the Meek shortcut that almost ended in disaster, the theme of the "Terrible Trail" by Rowland Clark. Her paternal grand-parents also came from Missouri by covered wagon to settle in the Palouse country of eastern Washington. Aileen was a secretary in the Federal Land Bank in Pendleton, OR, while I was a high school teacher in Pendleton. Our four children were: Robert, William, Michael, and Shelley.

I taught high school math and science in Oregon and California for nine years before beginning a 30-year civilian career with the U.S. Navy, North Island Naval Air Station, San Diego. I was a materials engineer and preservation technologist for 20 years then progressed to Department Head, Quality Assurance Program including supervision of all inspection and quality control. The civil service career was concurrent with teaching freshman chemistry at San Diego Evening College for 25 years commuting nightly by ferryboat between Coronado/North Island and San Diego. I retired from teaching in 1971 and from civil service in 1973 to care for my wife. Aileen died 15 February, 1978, after a long fight with cancer. She was buried in Glen Abbey Cemetery, Bonita, near Chula Vista.

In August, 1978, during a trip to Guadalajara, Central Mexico, with my Spanish language teacher and 30 fellow students, I met Mari and her mother, Lora Smith, 80; both students in other classes. We found a wealth of common interests; mainly family genealogy, history, and love of travel. On 5 June, 1979, in Chula Vista, I married Mariam "Mari" Eileen Alberts Reed, born 8 March, 1923, Hollister, CA; a 4th generation native-born Californian. Her maternal forebears, the Amos Whites of Vermont came to California in 1847 in the 2nd Donnor Party through the Sierras. The Twitchell-Longs arrived by covered wagon in 1848 before the '49 Gold Rush. Mexican War widow Eunice Twitchell-Long married Beckwith and they ran the hotel and saloon at historic Sutter's Fort, Sacramento, over a year then moved west to Mission San Juan Bautista where the children attended the Mission school. Long- (Lawn)-Coffmans farmed in the San Juan and Hollister valleys. Whites owned 3,500 acres along eastern foothills of San Jose (White Road) and later large ranches south of Paicines and Hollister.

Mari's father, Chief (Marine) Engineer George W. Alberts was half Bavarian and half Portuguese (Azores); born in Hawaii on Honolulu's Punchbowl, 1898. Like his sea captain father, George sailed the 7 seas. Both rounded Cape Horn as did George's mother at 7 with his DeCosta grandparents sailing from Azores to Hawaii, 1880, to set up Honolulu's lst bakery. George sailed the U.S. West Coast, transitted Panama Canal and circled the Caribbean bi- monthly for Gulf-Pacific Lines. On duty aboard ship, he died in labor union violence in Alameda, CA, March 22, 1936. Earl Warren, State Attorney General, won convictions of union officials after year-long trials before he became California Governor and later the Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

After business college, Mari was a secretary for 25 years in large California corporations and held her real estate license. In 1964 she resigned to attend San Jose State University. Her major was elementary education; her minor was art. Graduation: January, 1968; B.A. degree with Honors, Social Sciences. Mari taught English to foreign-born. One hundred years earlier, 1860s, Mari's great grandmother, Frances Ann White, was in the first teachers class at San Jose Normal School; the same college. In San Diego since 1972, Mari did post-graduate studies for her real estate broker's license and Graduate Realtor's Institute certificate in 1975 and ran a home improvement company as a partner.

Mari and I share an interest in studying the variety of cultures and histories experienced in foreign travel. Since 1979 we circled through England, Scotland, Ireland, and Europe for three months in 1980 researching Rudd histories and locales in preparation of this volume.

1.6421 Rudd, Robert Thomas, oldest of Norman Rudd - Aileen Miles, born 22 July, 1941, Pendleton, OR. Bob attended schools in Coronado and Chula Vista, CA. He was a fine arts major at San Diego State University. He won numerous awards including the Fine Arts Society Award for a metal sculpture at All Media Exhibition, 1965, and Best of Show Award 1968, Teamsters Union Art Show. Bob drove local trucks for Roadway. He collected Indian artifacts and fossils in Baja California, Mexico, for years and ran weekly 10K's to keep fit. On 28 January, 1961, in Winterhaven, CA, he married Karen Lucile Anderson, born 25 May, 1943, San Diego, CA. She was a high school art student. They had three children: Cathy, Kristin, and Eric. After 20 years time out raising a family, Karen earned a psychology degree at San Diego State University, 1988, and began graduate study. The family lived in San Diego.

1.64211 Rudd, Cathryn Alison, born 18 September, 1961, San Diego, CA. Cathy graduated Hoover High School, with some college before marriage. She managed the San Diego Old Town bakery speaking Spanish to the crew. On 15 August, 1981, San Diego, she married Darrell Ray Cooper, born 17 December, 1950, Portsmouth, Ohio. Darrel, an electronic equipment salesman, was employed by Price Club, a "warehouse" wholesale-retailer. Their child, Susan Rudd Cooper, was born 3 September, 1986, in San Diego. This entire publication is dedicated to Susan, my first great grandchild, representative of all new Rudd generations. The family lived in San Diego in 1988.

1.64212 Rudd, Kristen Cassidy, born 9 January, 1963, San Diego. Kristen was a very strong athlete: high school soft ball pitcher; later a rugby player; a real "jock". In 1985 she was prop forward from San Diego on women's West Coast Champion rugby team which was national runner up, losing to Florida State in national championship. In 1988 in carpenters' union, Kristen was a journeyman accoustical engineer and leaderman of crews from Southern California to Hawaii.

1.64213 Rudd, Eric Thomas, born 3 February, 1966, San Diego. He was a high school cross country letterman. He later held a student pilot license. Eric evidenced tall Rudd genes at 6 ft., 3 inches. Living at home in 1988, he was a refueler at a local small plane airfield while he carried a limited college program.

1.6422 Rudd, William Newton, second of Norman Rudd - Aileen Miles, born 4 March, 1943, in Coronado, CA. Bill attended Coronado and Chula Vista schools. He earned a B.S. degree in zoology with a minor in marine biology from San Diego State University. In 1966/68 Bill served in the Peace Corps in Togo, West Africa, as an agriculture extension agent.

On 28 December, 1968, in Chula Vista, CA, Bill married Elizabeth June Lukasik, born 27 October, 1946, in San Diego. In 1971/73 Bill and wife Betty joined Peace Corps fisheries projects in Cameroons along with their 2 year old Jennifer. They worked with the chief, The Faun, and taught local tribal people to build private dams and fishponds to raise warm water talapia fish for needed protein. After an interval for Sarah's birth in Key West, Florida, their following seven years were in western Honduras where son Jason was born 12 May, 1976 in Tegucigalpa, the capitol. They built a small community of homes and started a local school while Bill was operations manager for Sea Farms de Honduras raising shrimp, "camarrones", commercially in 200 acre salt water ponds along the Pacific Ocean. We visited their tropical Jicarito seaside hacienda in 1979 west of Jicaro.

After evacuation from the Honduras-Nicaragua border war zone in 1981, Bill became a marketing specialist with Meridian Products, Inc., Los Angeles, California; international seafoods importers. Due to demand, Bill became a shrimp culture specialist and consultant to global government and corporate sea product interests. On extensive travels, he consulted in Ecuador, Spain, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia, Australia, Indonesia, Thailand, Hawaii, Japan, and China. In 1988 Bill chiefly was a broker for marine seafoods. He limited travel to be involved in the children's heavy schedules of school team sports which Bill coached to trophy level.

Betty's degree from California Polytechnic, San Luis Obispo, CA, was in biological sciences. Her California teacher's credential was from California State University, Fullerton, CA. Betty was a Peace Corps volunteer in Cameroon, West Africa, with husband Bill. She taught the younger children and local children in their own school in Honduras also. In 1988 she taught biological science in Chino High School and enjoyed biology in her home gardens and as a part-timer at Nurseryland in Fullerton, the family home in 1988.

Bill and Betty's three children were: Jennifer, Sarah, and Jason. Jennifer Lynn, born 28 October, 1969, Chula Vista, CA. She spoke "pidgin" English in West Africa til age four; Spanish and English til age 12 in Honduras. In Fullerton, CA, she was a high school varsity track letterman; a strong swimmer and soccer player. Jennifer was a sophomore, Fullerton Junior College, 1988; a Girl Scout Camp aquatics instructor, Catalina Island, summer 1989. Sarah Marie, born 14 March, 1974, Key West, FL. Sarah's imminent birth brought the family to the USA from Africa. A good athlete, she was on Fullerton All Star soccer team 1987/88. Jason William, born 12 May, 1976, Tegucigalpa, Honduras. At age 2, as a dual citizen of Honduras and USA, he was owner of "Don Jason's" open air fish and chips beach eattery on the Gulf of Fonseca on the Pacific Ocean, Honduras. Jason was a strong athlete favoring baseball and soccer and basketball in National Junior Basketball league.

1.6423 Rudd, Michael Peter, third of Norman Rudd - Aileen Miles, born 23 July, 1947 in Coronado, CA. Mike's English B.A. and educational technology master's degree, 1981, were from San Diego State University. His office building maintenance business supported the lengthy college career. An instructional technologist at University of California San Diego Medical Center, he developed programs for patient and staff education using closed-circuit television and lived near the hospital, 1988. Mike did all the photographic work in this publication. He reproduced all pictures received. His partner, Patty McCormick, was our advisor on layout and computer reproduction. She processed all of the camera ready text.

1.6424 Rudd, Shelley Aileen, fourth of Norman Rudd - Aileen Miles, born 15 May, 1953, Coronado, CA. Her Liberal Arts B.A. degree in 1977 and her multiple subject teaching credential in 1978 were from San Diego State University. On 24 July, 1978, in San Diego, retaining her maiden name she married Cornelius Dresden Cunningham, born 7 August, 1943, Evanston, Ill. Neil's father was a professor at Columbia University, Northwestern University, and San Diego State University. Neil's mother was music department head in a San Diego local school district. Neil was an M.P., a courier, and a sentry dog handler in the U.S. Air Force, Vietnam period. Neil was a custodian with Chula Vista Elementary Schools, 1988.

Shelley worked for 7 years with children aged 5 to 11 at Cook Child Development Center, Chula Vista. She organized a course in child development for day care centers which she taught at Southwestern Junior College, Chula Vista, for two semesters. In her 4th year of primary grade teaching, 1988, Shelley's college group studied upgrading and developing stronger science classes for primary grades. The Rudd-Cunninghams lived in Chula Vista in 1988.

1.643 Rudd, Marion Vivian, second of Henry and Rosa Cassidy Rudd, born 27 November, 1915, Kerrobert, Sask., Can. Schooled in Alberta, Can., and Washington, she graduated from Corvallis, OR, high school and began a beauty career. On 6 November, 1933, in Vancouver, WA, she married Ferrol Ray Perin, born 29 October, 1916. He took beauty training but preferred the lumber industry. Marion's beauty shops were in Yachats on the Oregon Coast and Portland, OR. Their child, Jeanette, was born November, 1949, before they separated. On 4 January, 1957, Marion married William Russell Channer, born 4 July, 1926, Kelsey, MN. His child, Judy, by a previous marriage, was born 14 January, 1947, Duluth, MN. Russ was a Wurlitzer electronic organ service technician and operated an organ service business from home, Ocean Park, WA, 1988. Marion was a skilled carpenter; remodeled interiors of a house boat and two houses and they maintained their 8 apartments several years on WA coast.

1.6431 Perin, Jeanette Vivian, born 24 October, 1934, Corvallis, OR. She attended Oregon schools; graduated from Roosevelt High School, Portland. On 22 August, 1954, in Portland, she married Donald Lloyd Boone, born 31 January, 1933, Forest Grove, OR. He was a Western Electric installer. Their children were Cinda and Michael before the December, 1973, separation. Jeanette was a U.S. Postal Service clerk since 7 January, 1966. She was the post mistress in Garden Valley, near Sacramento, CA, since 21 April, 1979. On 18 December, 1976, she married Warren Lee Baldridge, born 15 November, 1920, Merced, CA. He was a farmer, then an El Dorado County Road Department employee and retired March, 1977, and became a gentleman farmer on 15 acres of varied livestock. Cool, CA, was home in 1988.

1.64311 Boone, Cinda Rae, born 24 September, 1955, Sacramento, CA, graduated from Ponderosa High School in gold rush area near Placerville. Cinda was one of first 5 girls accepted for Merchant Marine Academy training, Vallejo, CA. On 24 June, 1976, in Carson City, NV, she married Scott Randell Martin, a classmate, born 5 December, 1950, San Jose, CA. Their 3 children, born before the parents separated, were John Canby, 22 November, 1976; and Thomas Paul, 12 July, 1978, both in Placerville; and Elizabeth Ann, 1 January, 1981, born in Red Bluff, CA. Cinda was an emergency medical technician for an Auburn, CA, ambulance company during the school year and a medic for San Jose Family Camp near Yosemite National Park during summer vacation. In 1988 she and the children lived in Garden Valley, CA.

Ponderosa High School, Placerville, CA. He lived in Garden Valley, CA, a neighborhood Mr. Fix It, 1988.

1.644 Rudd, Ruth Lorraine, third of Henry and Rosa Cassidy Rudd, born 5 June, 1917, Kerrobert, Sask. She started school in Alberta, Canada; attended Washington and Oregon schools; and graduated high school in Corvallis, OR. She left Oregon State College after two terms to be a beautician. On 10 November, 1948, in Stevenson, WA, Ruth married Aldon Frank Wachter, born 16 December, 1916, in Stevenson. Aldon ran his father's grocery and Ruth operated her beauty shop. Their child, Trudy, was born before the December, 1961, divorce. On 19 March, 1966, in Reno, NV, Ruth married Asmus Randrupt Hansen, born 8 April, 1911, Fresno, CA, of Danish parents. His two sons by a former marriage were Raymond, March, 1949; and Darrell, June, 1953. Lefty Hansen operated the Multnomah Falls restaurant several years; later he was a partner in Rickshaw Charley's, Portland. Ruth was an accomplished craftsman, moving walls, finishing basement rooms, and general remodeling. She and Lefty divorced in 1988; both lived in Portland.

1.6441 Wachter, Trudy Lorraine, born 17 June, 1949, Vancouver, WA. She graduated from Centennial High School, Portland. Her BA degree in English was from Portland State College. On 22 December, 1972, in Portland, she married Joseph Peter Hamling, born 7 September, 1950, Portland. His degree in business was from Portland State College and worked with the Social Security Administration. Their two children, Alicia Denise, 5 December, 1975; and Sara Christine, 2 June, 1979; were born in Portland before the parents divorced in August, 1980. Trudy was in sales advertising for Portland Oregonian News for many years. On 19 February, 1989, in Portland Trudy married Gregory Allen Coleman, born 20 September, 1951. Greg was in advertising makeup at the Portland Oregonian. His son, Scott, born 3 June, 1978, by a prior marriage, lived with his mother. The Colemans lived in Portland in 1989.

CORA ANNE RUDD

1.65 Rudd, Cora Anne, fifth child of Gordon and Mary Wilson Rudd, born 18 April, 1876, in Marlette, MI. In 1883 her family moved to Dakota Territory; when she was 7. Before 1885 no school was open in Spring Township so Cora commenced school at age nine. There may have been upper grades in Miller by Cora's high school years. Cora took teacher's training in Madison Normal School, now Dakota State College. Maybe Cora did teach school; however her obituary stated she taught school in Hand County and later took nurses training in Iowa.

She and a friend vacationed in Banff and Lake Louise, Alberta, Can., visiting her brother's family, the R. Henry Rudds, in Sask. In the rail station in Calgary, Cora and friend saw a notice of homestead land available and filed a claim 12 miles north of Medicine Hat, Alberta. They bought a rifle and ammunition and settled in a depot room to wait out the winter. By spring they bought horses and equipment to break sod and built a shack on their claim to meet requirements. After proving the claim they stayed on the homestead at least a second year. An added shack was built for a hired man and small stable. When they heard of land available in Red River Valley, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can., they sold the claim and separated. Cora bought a half section, 320 acres, at Lorette, Manitoba, and farmed alone for 20 years near Winnipeg. She did not marry. It was said she and sister, May, were in love with Abe Magee when they were young and neither would step aside. This was supposedly when he left his 800 acres in South Dakota.

Her nephew, Clayton Rudd, had frequent contact with Cora during these years. He claimed she was an excellent farmer with farm buildings which were well designed; who used careful animal husbandry; a clean, efficient operation. She sold the farm when arthritis bothered her; took it back when payments were not met; and resold it during WW II for $17,000. She moved to Miller, SD and became a traveling ambassador of the Gordon Rudd family. She kept in touch with the relatives with many surprise visits. I first met Aunt Cora when she knocked on my door in Coronado, CA, with suitcase in hand. She announced she was my aunt and had come to visit. In spite of these surprise visits she was well liked; she had helped several nephews and nieces through school. Cora lived to 89 and died 26 July, 1964; buried in the G.A.R. Cemetery, Miller, where roses appeared regularly on her grave.

MAY MARY RUDD

1.66 Rudd, May Mary, sixth child of Gordon and Mary Wilson Rudd, born 10 July, 1878, Marlette, MI. She was 5 when the family moved to Dakota Territory and started school when 8. She attended 3 months in the fall and 3 in the spring. Ten years later she taught in rural schools with a second grade teacher's certificate. Her first school consisted of 4 first grade boys and two others, at $28 a month. After a few years she attended Eastern Normal School for a state certificate to teach high school. After teaching in Orient, St. Lawrence, and Miller, she was elected County Superintendent of Schools, Hand County, for two 2 year terms. She resumed teaching high school in Huron for two years and resigned to return to University of South Dakota, Vermillion. She earned B.A. and M.A. degrees and a Life Professional diploma. May continued teaching to 1930 when she stayed home to care for her father as her mother had died 5 years earlier. Aunt May was very close to her father. As her nieces remember, she always talked about her father; not her mother. Times were very hard in the early '30s; crops were too poor to pay the taxes. One of May's letters said they lived on her father's Civil War pension til his death. She then returned to teaching, a career that spanned over 30 years.

In 1980s, May's nieces thought she was a very domineering person; partial to some relatives, and very selective in her support of individuals. In the 1930s and '40s May was very "close" with her funds; a prevalent "depression syndrome". May had acquired the family home for $1 from father; three rentals in Miller; and a 640 acre section of farm land plus another 320 acre 1/2 section of farm land in Orient area. She became more eccentric with time; she went to town mid-summer dressed for mid-winter blizzards. May suffered with diabetes, a quite common Rudd complaint. During her later years she lived behind the house in a small building where one day she had refueled her small kerosene stove. No one admitted, but perhaps some gasoline was added to the kerosene by mistake. When lit, the stove exploded in her face practically blowing her out the door. In typical May Rudd fashion, she went back in the firey building to get her purse before seeking help. She was fatally burned and died 23 August, 1947, and was buried in G.A.R. Cemetery, Miller.

1.67 Rudd, Estella, born 14 November, 1882, Marlette, MI. She was a baby when the family moved to Dakota Territory in 1883. It may have been the confusion and trauma of moving and marginal facilities that affected her health. She died 25 September, 1884, nearly two. Her home made coffin was buried on a hill a half-mile west of the homestead. When the Spring Township Cemetery now Prairie View was opened in 1897, Stella's was the first grave in the new cemetery.

ELIZA RUDD - GEORGE WILSON

1.7 Rudd, Eliza, seventh child of William and Ann McLean Rudd, born 29 December, 1842, in townland of Rathsarn glebe (church land), Queens County, Ireland. In the family bible Castle Fleming was listed as the birthplace. This was the listing for at least one other brother and sister. It was a small crossroad near the northwest corner of Rathsarn parish. There may have been a small hospital there. When William and Ann emigrated in 1849, they left four children in Ireland with relatives. One was Eliza, age 7. Which relative she remained with or emigrated with to Canada West, 1853, is uncertain. The family moved to Sanilac County, Michigan, in 1856 when Eliza was 14. Any schooling would have been in Ireland and Canada West. There was no school in Marlette, MI, for the first year, 1857. On 17 March, 1869, in Marlette, Ann married George Dawson Wilson, born 1842 in Ireland. George's sister, Mary Louise, married Gordon Rudd, Ann's brother. The children of these marriages were double cousins, as close as possible genetically without being brothers and sisters.

George Wilson was the third of eight children of Robert Wilson and Mary Scott, born in Ireland and married in Telholly Church, County Armagh, presently one of six provinces in Northern Ireland. Mary Scott and Anne McLean, spouse of William Rudd, Code 1, were said to be of Scottish origins from the same town. Some reports show their Scottish birth; however 1860 and 1870 Census records list both as born in Ireland. The Rudd and Wilson families may have known each other in Queens County, but the Wilsons emigrated from Ireland to Canada several years before the earliest Rudds. One report said Mary Louise Wilson, the sixth child, was born in London, Ontario, March, 1844, immediately after Wilsons arrived in Canada. The SANILAC COUNTY (MI) PORTRAIT, 1884, said the family moved to Marlette in 1860, four years after the Rudds. In 1964 when the Wilson homestead was declared a Centennial Farm by Michigan Historical Commission, it was listed as homesteaded in 1857.

There are other variances in dates which may be clarified by the 1884 status of George and his seven siblings.

ROBERT WILSON AND MARY SCOTT FAMILY IN 1884

1 John Wilson, b.1837, Ireland; d.1884; widow in Centralia, WA.

2 James Wilson, b.1839, Ireland; d.1863, Confederate Prison. He left homestead to sister, Mary Louise; Gordon Rudd, 1.6, home.

3 George Wilson, b.1840, Ireland; m. Eliza Rudd, l.7; lived in Marlette, 1884.

4 Robert Wilson, b.23 June,1841, Ireland; m. in Centralia, 1884.

5 Eliza Wilson, b.1842, Ireland; m. Albertson; lived in Freesoil, MI, 1884.

6 Mary Louise Wilson, b.1844,Canada West; m. Gordon Rudd; lived in Dakota Territory, 1884.

7 Emma Wilson, b.1847, Canada West; m.Albertson; unknown in 1884.

8 William Henry Wilson, b.7 Feb.,1850, Durham County, Canada West; m. Mary Haskins; two sons: H. Wesley,b. 20 June, 1874, and Clarence H. b.20 May, 1876; lived in Marlette, 1884; milling business and built steam elevator near depot, 1880.

Robert Wilson, the father, died 26 June, 1876, in Marlette at 67. Mary Scott Wilson, the mother, lived another 19 years; died 28 March, 1895, at 89. Henry Rudd, 1.64, lived with and took care of her for several years while he continued his schooling after his family moved to Dakota Territory in 1883.

George Wilson was a farmer. He and Eliza Rudd Wilson raised eight children on a farm about two miles south of Marlette. The children: Edgar, Herbert, William, Hiram, Anna, Harriet, Elmer, and Helen. George was naturalized 3 Sept., 1872. His Homestead Certificate #203 was signed by Ulysses S. Grant 25 April, 1873. George died at Marlette homestead 5 July, 1914. Eliza continued to live there with daughter Anna who was teaching in Marlette schools. When George's younger brother, William Henry became seriously ill, Anna moved her mother to Highland Park, MI, where she could care for both her mother and Uncle Henry. Henry had outlived both his sons and his wife and was alone. Eliza died as a result of complications from a broken hip at 89. She was buried a mile south of Marlette in a cemetery on land donated originally by her husband George.

In 1985 James was maintenance manager at East Harbor State Park, Port Clinton. The family lived in Port Clinton in 1988.

MARY HELEN WILSON

1.78 Wilson, Mary Helen, the youngest child of George and Eliza Rudd Wilson, b. 18 August, 1885, in Marlette, MI. She was a teacher with an A.B. degree from Albion College in 1914. Helen taught two years in Lake City, MI, and two years in Caro, MI, before teaching Jr. and Sr. high schools in Pontiac for 33 years. Her last subject was English literature before retirement in 1951 she returned to the Wilson homestead in Marlette. She died 19 January, 1954; buried in the Wilson plot, Marlette Cemetery.

WILLIAM RUDD

1.8 Rudd, William, eighth child of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd, b. 1846 in the townland of Graigavalla, Queens County, Ireland. He was the youngest of four children left in Ireland with relatives when Gordon and Alicia emigrated from Ireland to New York, fall, 1949. We found no record of where he stayed or how he followed his parents to Canada West around 1856. Solid information on William was his Civil War enlistment in Company K, 22nd Regiment, Michigan Volunteer Infantry, August, 1862. He was 14 in 1860 Census. He and his uncle, James Wilson, reportedly walked from Marlette, MI, to Lexington, Kentucky, about 400 miles, to enlist. Notes found gave James's age as 20. The Sanilac County Portrait of 1884 listed James's birthdate as 1839. Neither man returned. James died in a prisoner of war camp in the South. William contracted typhoid and pneumonia and died in Lexington within six months after enlistment. We visited his grave #200, Section T, Veterans' Section, in the fourth row west of the flag in National Cemetery, Lexington, marked simply: William Rudd.

KATHERINE RUDD

1.9 Rudd, Katherine, the ninth and youngest of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudds children, b. 1848-49 in the Graigavalla townland. She was a toddler when the family emigrated in fall, 1849, to New York. She and her older sister, Jane, contracted measles during the Atlantic crossing on the British ship, The Lady Milton. The others survived, but Katherine and Jane died in Castle Garden quarantine in the lower east side of Manhattan, New York, without records of burial sites.

Family Two

JOSEPH RUDD - MARY WALL

Code 2 Rudd, Joseph, second child of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd, b. 1812 in Graigavalla townland, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland; baptized in church, 30 October, 1812. Choosing to remain in Ireland when seven sisters and brothers emigrated to New York and to Canada, he lived his life in the Rathsarn area. Some of the earliest known records of the Rudds are in the vestry books of the Rathsarn church. Joe was recorded in 1840. That year his younger brother, John, was appointed church warden. Gordon Rudd, the father, and Joseph were appointed overseers of the church. In 1845 four Rudds were listed as church wardens: Gordon, Sr. and three sons, Joseph, John, and George.

In the Index to Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin Marriage License Bonds up to 1845, 25 Rudd marriages are listed mostly in County Wexford and Dublin. Two are from Rathsarn parish: William married Anne McCleane, 1829; and Joseph married Mary Wall, 1842. The Rudd-Wall marriage must have been in Rathsarn church. Mary might have been Joe's cousin as Joe's grandmother was Rachael Wall and there were some Wall families recorded in the area. Joe and Mary Wall Rudd's three children were Gordon, Joseph, Jr. and Alicia.

Reverend Francis Lodge was curate of Rathsarn parish in control of the church (glebe) lands which he rented out for church income. Griffith's Valuation of Rathsarn parish in 1850, which was done on all townlands to establish appropriate tithes assessments for support of the poor, shows two Joseph Rudd holdings:

1. "In the townland of Kyleamullawn, Joseph Rudd holding from Robert Perry a herd's house and land (16 acres, 2 roods and 8 perches) valued at £.8-15s-0." (8 pounds, 15 shillings, 0 pence).
2. "In the townland of Rathsarn Glebe, Joseph Rudd, holding from the Rev. Francis Lodge house, offices, and land (16 acres, 2 roods, and 8 perches) valued at £.18." (18 pounds). A rood was a quarter of an acre or 40 square rods; a perch, one square rod.
3. In 1858 after his father's death, Joe took over the Gordon Rudd holdings and moved his family there. Griffith's Valuation stated "In the townland of Graigavalla, holding from the Right Hon. John W. Fitzpatrick, a house, offices, and land (34 acres and 11 perches) valued at £.24-5-0." These were assessments; not land values.

Mother Alicia's letter from Graigavala to her son Robert Rudd in Ontario, Canada, describes Joe's take over of the home place. The following is an attempt to decipher Alicia's script.

" Graigavala July 14 58

My Dr (dear) Robert, I want to tell you after your poor father beried Joe came to take an inventory of what was heer, I mane the chattel property. Gave word not sel or make a hand of them as he should get a childs part of everything heer. How that will end I canot tell yet. He set off to Dublin to administer but I had to Goe administer then in order to keep the thing in me owne hands, a tareble job for a old woman licke me. Was not Joe tareble to put me to that for nothing. Well my Dr Robert, I am heer still well. You may say what keeps me heer... in the bargain I was to have grass and Cow... nae thing else for the Cow. I have to by hay straw. I have the Garden.. I haven to call worck man and moved Frmr ...nor is done with the Rood now at this assases... poor father had it for 3 years the time is up now... Joe is to have them. I know you would not say as he did that you should have a devide or childs part..it is very Lickle poor father thot joe would act so unkind to me.. he has the olde house lockd up. I supose he will take the barn and stable now in harvest.. there is a very good crop on the Land this year. This is a nice place now.. we could have got alonge. I am forc'd if any other persons got it..poor father was getting it improvd every day...My Dr Robert I would be very glad...you all were united and help one another licke brothers and sisters. It is anuff for us heer to be alright. I hope you are all well My love to all"

Farms existing in Ireland 150 years ago were small plots of 15 to 40 acres or less and most were rentals on share holdings. Code 2.241 Margaret Rudd Ryan recalls hearing her great-grandfather, Joe Rudd, Sr. had four farms. He may have added another holding after 1850 but we found no record.

In 1856, Joe Rudd, Robert Larke, and William Cobbe were listed as church wardens. In 1870 Joe Rudd was listed as a vestryman with his son, Joe, Jr., and his brother-in-law, Joseph Wall. In 1882 Joe Rudd was listed in church records as living in Graigavalla. An 1886 entry refers to a Rathsarn glebe address, where he apparently lived until death on 11 July, 1892. His death was recorded in the Calendars of Irish Wills and Administrations from 1858 to 1892. There was no will. His daughter Alice Pratt, of Derrycarron, Queens County, was granted the administration of the estate. Joe's wife, Mary had apparently died earlier. There was no record found of the value of the effects. It is presumed both Joe and Mary were buried at Rathsarn church where the Rudd plot, without individual markers, was enclosed by a wrought iron fence.

GORDON RUDD

2.1 Rudd, Gordon, baptized 17 November, 1844. He must have not survived infancy. His baptismal record was the only evidence found of his birth.

JOSEPH RUDD - SARAH PRATT

2.2 Rudd, Joseph Jr., b. 1846-47, Rathsarn glebe, baptized in Rathsarn church 7 February, 1847, by Rev. John Samuel Loundes, curate of Rathsarn. Joe Jr.'s name first appears in church vestry records in 1870 listed as a vestryman with his father and uncle, Joseph Wall.

He was elected church warden in 1871. Circa 1880 in Rathsarn parish, he married Sarah Jane Pratt. Their four children were Joseph William, Mary Ann, George, and Gordon John. They were recorded as residents of townland of Eglish, 1882, and in townland of Graigavalla, 1886. Joe Jr. was killed by a runaway horse in a market place accident in 1886. Margaret Ryan, 2.241, his granddaughter, remembered hearing he fell from a horse and was kicked. She also heard her folks say a relative died young from heavy drinking but had a long funeral procession as he was so well liked. This description could fit Joe Rudd Jr. who died at 39 in an accident but the cause of death was listed as cirrhosis of the liver rather than accidental injury.

Sarah was widowed with four children under age six for a brief interval. Sarah married Edward Fitzpatrick, the hired man, a Catholic who was a heavy drinker. Neither his religion nor his drinking were considered desirable attributes among Rathsarn Rudds and Sarah and family were ostracized at least, if not disinherited. The Fitzpatrick children were Robert, Edward, Michael, and Bill (not William) born within ten years. John Thompson, 3.16, told of his father's reaction when Sarah Pratt Rudd Fitzpatrick appealed to him for financial assistance. He said: "Mrs. Rudd, (he refused to say 'Mrs. Fitzpatrick') you said you were poor as wife of Joe Rudd. Why then did you remarry and continue to have more children?" She answered: "Ah, Mr. Thompson, it wasn't my fault. It was the evil spirits within me." Joe Jr.'s estate took over two years to settle. There was no will. The Calendar to Irish Wills and Administrations includes the entry: "8 Jun 1889 Administration of the personal estate of Joseph Rudd junior late of Graigueavallagh, Queens Co. farmer, who died 15 December, 1886, at the same place, granted at Kilkenny to Sarah Jane Fitzpatrick of Graigueavallagh (wife of Edward Fitzpatrick) the relict. Effects £. 129."

In 1897 some of the family pressure was relieved when Robert Francis Rudd II (Frank), Code 7.7, was delivering fattened beef from Canada to the British Isles and stopped in Ireland to meet his cousins. He brought the two oldest boys, Joe and George, back to Alma, Ontario, where they lived until rejoining the Fitzpatrick family who emigrated from Ireland to Brooklyn, N.Y. in 1905. The Fitzpatrick sons established a successful trucking business in Brooklyn where they made their living.

The eldest son, Robert, was the only one who married. During WWI two of the boys, Michael and Edward, were in the Service and Robert and his half brother, Gordon, ran the trucking business until their brothers returned. During this period Sarah and Edward Fitzpatrick separated. The four sons supported their father until his death in 1940s. Sarah died 11 April, 1945; buried in Evergreen Cemetery, Brooklyn.

JOSEPH RUDD - ANNA LIVINGSTON

2.21 Rudd, Joseph William, the eldest child of Joseph Jr. and Sarah Pratt Rudd, b. 1 November, 1881, in townland of Eglish. He was baptized in Rathsarn church 26 February, 1882. John Thompson, 3.16, attended school with Joseph Rudd's children. He recalled Joseph Wm. Rudd was a very active boy, a "holy terror", always fighting with his younger brother, George. In 1973 John pointed out the letters: "J.R." carved into an arm of the Rathsarn church pew bench as the handiwork of Joe Jr. At 16, Joe Jr. and George made the trip to Canada with Frank Rudd, 7.7, shortly before Frank's marriage. When Frank Rudd married Eva Norris in 1898, the Irish Rudd boys were part of the package. They lived with the newlyweds nearly eight years and rejoined the Fitzpatrick family in Brooklyn in 1905.

Joe met and married Anna Livingston in Brooklyn. He was a truck driver for life. Margaret Ryan 2.241 visited the Joe Rudds in their Brooklyn apartment and remembered both of them were very tall, large people. Joe retired to Homer, MI, near Battle Creek, where he died 7 December, 1965, and was buried. He left his estate to a church in Homer where a church hall was named for him.

MARY ANN RUDD - WILLIAM WALL

2.22 Rudd, Mary, second child of Joe Jr. and Sarah Pratt Rudd, b. in townland of Eglish, Ireland, 21 November, 1883. She attended school in Rathsarn parish and emigrated with the family to Brooklyn, N.Y., in 1905 at age 22. There she worked as a housekeeper before marriage. On 18 December, 1912, in Brooklyn, she married William Joseph Wall, b. 12 August, 1889, in upper New York state. They were cousins, not only through the Pratts but also the Walls. He was son of Rebecca Pratt; his father was Joseph Wall. His paternal grandparents were Richard Wall and Mary Carter. The Wall records listed "Carters, Claxtons, O'Briens, Walls, Scarrets, Pratts, and Rudds; all settled in the Rathdowney area, Queens County." William and Mary were alleged to be second cousins. He was a dairy farmer, first in Amboy and later in Manlius, New York. Their four children were Joseph, Robert, Sarah, and Gertrude. The two sons were born in Amboy and the two daughters in Manlius.

The Wall's neatly maintained Manlius farm was 100 acres or more. Gordon Rudd, 2.242, and Margaret Rudd Ryan, 2.241, had warm memories of summer vacations with their Wall cousins at the large white farm house beside the two great red barns. William's parents, Joseph Wall and Rebecca Pratt, lived with the Jr. Walls in Manlius. In 1946 Will and Mary Ann sold the farm and retired to a smaller farm in Camillus, N.Y., where they gardened and raised chickens and a few beef cattle. Mary Ann died 15 February, 1976, of heart failure. He died 21 October, 1977, from stroke; both buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, Syracuse, N.Y.

Joseph Wall - Gertrude Dailey family

2.221 Wall, Joseph William, eldest child of Will and Mary Rudd Wall, b. 15 September, 1914, in Amboy, N.Y. On 1 May, 1940, in Manlius, he married Gertrude Clarice Dailey, b. 30 July, 1912, in Manlius. Their two sons were William and John. They lived in Bergen, N.Y., near Rochester when Joe retired 1 January, 1977, then moved to Ellerton, FL, to spend their retirement years. They lived there in 1988. Joe worked for 39 years for Agway, Inc. - a farm cooperative company.

2.2211 Wall, William Robert, b. 17 July, 1943, in Syracuse, N.Y. Bill's A.A. degree in hotel management was from Paul Smiths College, Paul Smiths, New York. His B.S. in business management was from Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester. On 6 May, 1967, in Churchville, N.Y., Bill married Margery Joyce Griffin, b. 13 September, 1944, in Lakeland, FL. Margery's B.A. was in elementary education from New York State Univ. College at Brockport. Her M.S. in psychology was from Middle Tennessee University. She was a supervisor with Sheraton Hotels, Denver. He managed food and beverage operations for Sky Chefs, Denver, CO, International Airport. rejoined his mother, step-father, and Fitzpatrick and Rudd siblings in Brooklyn in 1905.

George stayed with the Frank Rudds in Canada two or three more years before following Joe Jr. to New York. George drove a bakery wagon for Consumers Bakery in Brooklyn until 1910, probably in a horse drawn wagon. In 1910 he returned to Canada to homestead a quarter section (160 acres) in Saskatchewan province near the present town of Sanctuary. After "proving up" his homestead claim with some buildings, he returned to Brooklyn for 1912-13 winter. On 3 March, 1913, in Brooklyn, he married Emily Gertrude Backman, b. 3 July, 1893, in Brooklyn. Returning to his homestead, George and Emily lived with neighbors for 10 days as their house was full of flax seed up to the windows. George got the flax crop to the grain elevator before they could move in. Other typical pioneer problems: a prairie fire in early years almost burned them out; and loss of their barn in 1924. A barn raising and dance helped replace the barn. Their two sons were Gilbert and Philip. The George Rudds lived their lives on the Saskatchewan homestead, and celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary 3 May, 1963. On 14 December, 1965, George died of stroke. Emily died of a heart attack 27 June, 1979, in Rosetown, Sask. Both were buried in the Elrose Cemetery, Sask., Canada.

Gilbert Rudd - Myrtle Smith family

2.231 Rudd, George Gilbert, eldest child of George and Gertrude Backman Rudd, b. 14 July, 1915, on Rudd farm near Sanctuary, Sask. On 7 October, 1937, in Elrose, Sask., he married Myrtle Isabel Smith, b. 13 September, 1911, in Rosetown, Sask. Gilbert was a farmer beginning in the early 1930s. He farmed wheat plus oats and feed for livestock, expanding farm to nearly 1500 acres. Myrtle's folks were both born in London, England. She completed 12th grade in Battleford, Sask., and a year of Normal School in Saskatoon to earn a teachers certificate 1st Class and taught three years in rural schools before returning to University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, for a primary grades teaching degree. She taught two years in Hughton, Sask., before marriage. Their two children were Barry and Sharon. Their farm was near Elrose. Gilbert died of cancer at 58, on 16 March, 1973. Myrtle was living in Elrose in 1988.

2.2311 Rudd, Barry Gilbert, b. 19 August, 1941, in Elrose. In 1968 he bought a ranch near Webb, 30 miles west of Swift Current in southern Sask. He raised registered quarter horses, feed, and commercial cattle. On 20 April, 1968, in Elrose, he married Lynda Louise Dinsmore, b. 23 March, 1947, in Rosetown, Sask., a certified nursing assistant. Their four daughters were Kerri-Lynne Patti, 15 May, 1970; Kelli-Ann Marion, 16 September, 1972; Kristi Joy Barri, 5 September, 1979; and Kandace Dayle, 11 March, 1981. Kerri-Lynne and Kandace were born in Swift Current and Kelli-Ann and Kristi Joy were born in Gull Lake. The girls attended the Gull Lake schools. The entire family was involved in 4-H projects. The two older girls were both rodeo riders and barrel racers. Kerri-Lynne had completed one year of animal health at college in Vermillion, Sask., 1988. The family lived in Swift Current, Sask.

2.2312 Rudd, Sharon Lynn, b. 2 March, 1947, Elrose, Sask. She was a registered psychiatric nurse, a hospital administrator, a health care consultant. She trained in North Battleford, Sask. On 14 July, 1971, she married Ernest Downs and they separated in 1975. In 1988

Sharon had completed a masters degree and was a hospital administrator in an Edmonton, Alberta, hospital.

Philip Rudd - Betty Burns family

2.232 Rudd, Philip Robert, second child of George and Gertrude Backman Rudd, b. 15 April, 1930, in Elrose. On 25 April, 1957, in the family home near Sanctuary, he married Betty Doreen Burns, b. 28 July, 1934, in Kelfield, Sask. Betty was a telephone operator before marriage. Their son was Gerald. Philip was a farmer with extensive holdings. He and son, Gerald, farmed several sections in the Sanctuary, Sask., area and the family had an Elrose address in 1988.

2.2321 Rudd, Gerald Philip, b. 3 November, 1957, in Rosetown, Sask. He farmed several years with his father. On 12 November, 1977, in Princeton, British Columbia, Canada, he married Noreen Louise Sinclair, b. 19 June, 1956, in Armstrong, B.C. She was a trained cook before marriage. Their daughter was Tanya Jean, b. 8 November, 1980, in Rosetown. They separated in 1987. Tanya was with Noreen in Elrose where Noreen was cooking at the hospital. Gerald was living in Maidstone, Sask., in 1988, driving an oil company truck.

GORDON RUDD - RACHAEL BERRYMAN

2.24 Rudd, Gordon John, fourth child of Joseph Jr. and Sarah Pratt Rudd, b. 6 September, 1886, in townland of Graigavalla, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland. He was baptized in Rathsarn church 5 June, 1887, after his father's death. Gordon was in the second grade of Rathsarn schools in August, 1896. In 1905, at 19, he emigrated from Ireland to Brooklyn, N.Y., with his mother, sister, step-father, and four younger half brothers. Good with horses, one early job was tending delivery wagon horses used at Abraham and Strauss, a large Brooklyn department store, which is still operating in 1980s.

During WWI Gordon and his half-brother, Robert Fitzpatrick, ran the Fitzpatrick trucking business while two Fitzpatrick brothers were in the Service. On 26 January, 1916, in Brooklyn, he married Rachel Berryman, b. 25 September, 1886, in Maghorafelt, County Derry, Ireland. Their two children were Margaret and Gordon. Rachel was a nursemaid for the Finleys. He was president of Hunter College and editor in chief of the New York Times. Rachel told stories of tending the children while Mrs. Finley had tea with the wife of former president, Grover Cleveland. They lived in Brooklyn five years before moving to a beachfront community near the present J.F.K. International Airport. Later Gordon was a packer at National Biscuit Company. During the depression of the l930s Gordon ran his own house to house grocery service.

During WWII Rachel took Red Cross training and was a private duty practical nurse. From 1940 until he retired in 1958, Gordon worked on the Bond Bread Bakery assembly line. After retirement, they moved to a waterfront home. Gordon died of a heart attack on 27 March, 1964. Rachel died of cerebral thrombosis on 1 November, 1967. Both were buried in Greenfield Cemetery, Hempstead, Long Island, N.Y.

Margaret Rudd - Jack Ryan family

2.241 Rudd, Margaret Jean, eldest child of Gordon and Rachel Berryman Rudd, b. 3 April, 1917, in Brooklyn, N.Y. During the 1930s depression, she and her brother, Gordon, had a paper route and felt 8 cents was a handsome tip, better than the usual 3 cents a week for delivery. She attended evening sessions of Washington Square College, Greenwich Village in Manhattan, while working for a patent attorney. She quit to pursue a journalism career; first as a society reporter for the Long Island Daily Press, and later as a news writer for the Associated Press in Rockefeller Center. She first married Donald Brodie Schwind, a newspaper and foreign correspondent, on 24 December, 1937. With more separation than marriage, they divorced. On 9 September, 1946, Margaret married John (Jack) Raymond Ryan. He was born 3 December, 1916; son of Ethel Seykora and Clyde Waters of Pueblo, Colorado. Jack and his two sisters were adopted by Captain George J. Ryan, his stepfather, and they assumed his name. Jack graduated from University of Washington, Seattle, and was a Seattle Times reporter and later for the Associated Press and the New York Times. His U.S. Army career was in Combat Engineers in France and Germany. He separated as a captain and married Margaret two months after he returned from five years duty. Jack retired in 1979 as Director of Corporate Public Relations in Stamford, Connecticut, after 20 years with Olen Corporation. Margaret's and Jack's two children were Gordon and Doris. The Ryans lived in Weston, CT., in 1988, were active in volunteer groups, and sailed Chesapeake Bay. Margaret supplied us with much Family Two information.

2.2411 Ryan, Gordon George,b. 13 September, 1949, in New York City. He graduated from American University, Washington, D.C. His law degree was from law school of Loyola University of the South, New Orleans. He practiced law in Mantauk Point, Long Island, New York, and taught real estate law at Southhampton campus of Long Island University. On 9 April, 1983, in Ft. Lauderdale, FL, he married Iris Dianne Peterson of Hollywood, FL. Diane was a Florida State College, Tallahassee, graduate with a masters degree in special education from Nova University, Ft. Lauderdale. She taught children with learning disabilities in Montauk. Their daughter, Robin Jolee, was born 3 July, 1985, in Southhampton, Long Island. They lived on the beachfront at Amagansett, Long Island. Their second daughter, Loralee Rae, was born 26 July, 1989.

2.2412 Ryan, Doris Leslie, b. 18 August, 1952, in Amityville, Long Island. Her B.S. journalism degree was from Syracuse University. Doris did advertising and publicity for Bolton, Vermont, ski resort for two years before moving to Burson-Marsteller, a public relations agency in New York City. In 1988 she was a vice president in the company and lived in Manhattan.

Gordon Rudd - (1) Jean Paige - (2) Janet Guinn families

2.242 Rudd, John Gordon, second child of Gordon and Rachel Berryman Rudd, b. 12 September, 1919, in Brooklyn, N.Y. Gordon was a WWII B-24 Liberator bomber pilot based in Okinawa. August, 1945 VJ-Day, when the Pacific war ended, came before he flew a combat mission but he served one year in occupation forces in Japan. In 1945 in Greenwood, Connecticut, Gordon married Jean Paige. Gordon attended college under the G.I. bill benefits and supplemented his income by playing tenor saxophone and clarinet in college dance bands. Their three sons were Gordon, James, and Craig. His law degree was from University of Cincinnati in 1951. Jean and Gordon separated in 1960. In 1961 in Xenia, Ohio, Gordon married Janet Guinn, b. 1935 in Dayton, OH. Their two children were Susan and John Gordon, Jr. Janet was a legal secretary before marriage. Gordon was a trial lawyer with his own firm of attorneys in Xenia, OH, where he retired as a county judge. He still flew and jammed occasionally with the DeMinimus Cats, his college dance band. In 1988 the family lived on 80 acres near Xenia and wintered in Boca Raton, Florida. More information is needed for Gordon, James, and Craig, Gordon's three older sons.

2.2421 Rudd, Gordon Robert, eldest child of Gordon and Jean Paige Rudd, b. 2 March, 1946, New York City, during WWII while Gordon was in the Pacific war zone. Gordon Robert was married, had at least two children, and lived in Illinois; 1988 report.

2.2422 Rudd, James Steven, second child of Gordon and Jean Paige Rudd, b. 7 August, 1947, in Dayton, OH. James was married, had a daughter, and lived in California according to 1988 reports.

2.2423 Rudd, Craig William, third child of Gordon and Jean Paige Rudd, b. 16 July, 1954, in Dayton, OH. Craig lived in Montana according to 1988 reports.

2.2424 Rudd, Susan Leslie, eldest of Gordon and Janet Guinn Rudd, b. 23 July, 1962, in Dayton, OH. Susan's degree was from Rice University, Houston, TX, where she was an All American tennis player. She was head woman's tennis coach at University of Kentucky, Lexington, before marriage. On 18 June, 1988, in Dayton, OH, she married Robert Beckman Breen of Dayton. He graduated from Fairfield University in Connecticut and was sales manager of a Dayton auto dealership in 1988 and Susan was teaching in the Miami Valley Prep School.

2.2425 Rudd, John Gordon, Jr., second child of Gordon and Janet Guinn Rudd, b. 12 February, 1964. John Jr. was an accomplished pianist. He graduated from Connecticut College, New London. He worked with the New York City law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell. In 1988 he had completed his first year of law at the University of Cincinnati.

ALICIA RUDD

2.3 Rudd, Alicia, b. circa 1849. On 14 August, 1867, in Rathsarn church she married John Pratt of Offalin parish, son of John Pratt. On the marriage license, John Pratt, Sr. was listed as a farmer. Alicia was listed as from Rathsarn parish; father, Joseph Rudd, farmer. Apparently Alicia and John had no family. The next record of Alicia is dated after the 1892 death of Joseph Rudd, her father. Administration of the estate was granted at Kilkenny to Alicia Pratt of Derrycarron, Queens County, July, 1892.

Family Three

JANE RUDD - MATTHEW GRAY

Code 3, Rudd, Jane, third child of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd, b. late fall, 1813 or early 1814, in the townland of Graigavalla, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland.

Baptismal records in Rathsarn church show Jane baptized 20 August, 1814, the eldest daughter. Apparently Jane lived in Graigavalla until her early 30s. In 1847 Jane and John, her younger brother, left Ireland for Canada West. Their aunt, Deborah Wellwood Holmes had been living in the Goderich area on Lake Huron for at least 12 years. It is presumed Jane and John traveled directly to that area. Deborah was a younger sister of their mother, Alicia, who had emigrated to Canada immediately after her marriage to John Holmes in 1833. In 1849 the Gore District marriage register showed Jane Rudd married Matthew Gray in Simcoe township on 6 March, 1849, near Caledonia in the present Haldimand County. Another aunt, Elizabeth Wellwood Thompson, also lived there. William Thompson was one of the marriage witnesses along with John Klayney and Richard Cobb. Rev. Thomas Cosford performed the ceremony. Later, Matthew's birthdate on tombstone was "8 January, 1819 a native of Yorkshire England", a contrast with the following story in a note in a Bird family bible: "Aunt Holmes' (Deborah) name was Wellwood. She was Mother's (Mary Jane Bird) great aunt. Aunt Holmes was a sister of Grandmother Gray." If this were true, a third Wellwood sister would have married Samuel Gray, Matthew's father. The Wellwood sister could have been Anna, b. 6 May, 1799, as the other Wellwood sisters all died young and were buried in Freshford, County Kilkenny, Ireland. This connection was highly unlikely if Matthew were born in Yorkshire, England, unless Anna were his stepmother. If by chance Anna Wellwood were Matthew's birth mother, he and Jane would have been first cousins. None of this is confirmed.

The Grays were located in Seneca township, in the Caledonia area by the 1861 Census report: " Wesleyan Methodists: Matthew, age 40, born in England; Jane, age 36, born in Ireland, and three daughters, Alice 9, Mary Ann 7, and Elizabeth 5." Matthew was farming 100 acres; 60 acres under cultivation with an estimated value of $4000. The original farm was on Lot 3, Concession 3 in Seneca township. The 1871 census showed Jane's age as 40 (getting younger). These census figures confused Jane's birth year and resulted in earlier coding as Family 6. Jane was at least five years older than Matthew. Her tombstone indicated birth in 1816. Perhaps Matthew never knew. Jane died 30 December, 1877, at 63; the tombstone read: "61 yrs, 14 days, Native of Queens Co, Ireland". Matthew died 22 January, 1882, "aged 64 yrs, 14 days, Native of Yorkshire, England". Both were buried in Unity Methodist church cemetery.

ALICE GRAY - WILLIAM BURCH

3.1 Gray, Alice Jane, the eldest of Matthew and Jane Rudd Gray, b. 26 March, 1851, in Seneca Township on the Gray farm owned in 1927 by Walter Weylie. On 25 February, 1875, in Glanford Township she married William John Burch, b. in 1842. The Burches lived in Glanford area a few years then Caledonia to live out their years. Their son was Morley. Alice was very active in the Grace United Methodist church and a charter member and president of the Caledonia Methodist Women's Society for 32 years until her death. William died 1 January, 1921, in 79th year; Alice died 26 September, 1927. Her obituary lists her pallbearers as: three nephews, William M. Bird, James F. Bird, and Cecil A. Bird; and three cousins, J. W. Richardson, William Rudd, and Samuel Gray. The Burches were both buried in the Caledonia cemetery.

3.11 Burch, Morley Benson, b. circa 1877 in Glanford Township. He married Isobel _____ while young. Their one daughter was Margaret. There was a story that shortly after Margaret's birth, Morley went west without his family and never returned to Ontario. Another story told of the Morley Burches in Regina, Sask., in later years: Morley, Isobel, and Margaret were listed as survivors in his mother's obituary of 1927.

MARY ANNE GRAY - WILLIAM BIRD

3.2 Gray, Mary Anne, second child of Matthew and Jane Rudd Gray, b. 23 June, 1853, on the Gray homestead in Seneca Township, Caledonia area of Canada West. On 20 November, 1877, she married William Bird, b. 18 January, 1852, on Lot 14, 1st Concession of Seneca Township. Their five children were William, Frederick, Elizabeth, Cecil, and Ida. William's father died at an early age so William was raised by his mother, Elizabeth, and a stepfather, Rev. James G. Montgomery, a Primitive Methodist circuit preacher. William was a farmer and farmed the original 100 acres of Lot 14. All the early subdivisions in Canada West were laid out in 100 acre lots rather than in quarter sections of 160 acres. William died of heart failure on 11 October, 1917. Mary Anne lived 18 years in Canfield, Ontario, Canada, after William's death until 2 September 1935, age 82. Both were members of Canfield Methodist church, later Canfield United church, and were buried in Canfield cemetery, North Cayuga township, Haldimand County, Canada.

WILLIAM BIRD - NELLIE STEWART

3.21 Bird, William Matthew, eldest of William and Mary Anne Gray Bird, b. 25 November, 1878, in Seneca Township, Ontario, Canada. On 15 June, 1905, in Cayuga, Ontario, he married Nellie Hanna Burdette Stewart, b. 1 August, 1879, in North Cayuga Township, Ontario, Canada.

Their five children were Jennie, Stewart, Victor, Etoile, and Fraser. William was a farmer. He operated a service station and sold real estate. He was reeve of his township and a member of the Haldimand County Council four years. In England a reeve was a town or district's chief official. In Canada the reeve was generally the elected representative for an area and a town and a member of the county council. The Birds lived in the Canfield area, and later at Niagara Falls, Ontario. Gerald Albert Bird

3.242 Bird, Gerald Albert, second child of Cecil and Ethel Brown Bird, b. 24 May, 1917 in North Cayuga. He lived 2-1/2 years til 24 October, 1919.

IDA BIRD - BRUCE BEATTY

3.25 Bird, Ida Victoria, fifth child of William and Mary Ann Gray Bird, b. 28 June, 1889 in Seneca township, Ontario. She was a teacher before marriage. On 30 March, 1927, in Renton, Ontario, she married Bruce Alexander Beatty, a farmer. They had a gas station on their farm corner. The night of 21 May, 1954, they were beaten during a robbery. Bruce died immediately. Ida lived six weeks but never recovered from massive head injuries.

ELIZABETH GRAY - WILLIAM STOBBS

3.3 Gray, Elizabeth Victoria, third child of Matthew and Jane Rudd Gray, b. 28 August, 1855 in Seneca Township near Caledonia, Ont. On 19 March, 1884 in Romney Township near Wheatly, Ontario, she married William Stobbs, b. 7 February, 1846 in Leamington, Ont. They raised two of their four children: Cecil and Alicia. Ann and Wilbert died in infancy. An entry in Jane and Matthew Gray's family bible noted a babe, Ann, died 19 April, 1885; hers was the earliest birth. William farmed and first settled on the 3rd Concession near the Pere Marquette railroad off the Zion side road. His brother, Jack Stobbs, was on the next farm. They signed notes for their youngest brother, Thomas, who skipped the country. As a result of his debts, both brothers lost their farms. One story tells of the errant brother returning to Ontario dressed as a woman to pick up his wife and eight children to sneak them back across the international border to settle near North Platte, Illinois. Thomas changed his name to Langford and later was reported to be the town sheriff. Brothers William and Jack resettled in Leamington, Ont. William farmed at Wigle and Setherington Streets. William died 8 March, 1912 and Elizabeth lived another 40 years, most of the time on the home ranch. She died at Riverview Hospital, Windsor, Ontario, 8 April, 1953, near her 98th birthday. She and William were buried in Erie Cemetery near Wheatley off the #3 highway.

CECIL STOBBS - LULU SMITH

3.31 Stobbs, Cecil William Gordon, b. 7 September, 1886 in Leamington, Ontario. On 9 November, 1909 in Berlin (present Kitchener), Ont., he married Lulu Hilare Smith, b. 1 August, 1883, in Ruthven, Ont. Three of their six children were unnamed: a girl and two boys who died at birth or in infancy: a girl, 4 December, 1911, and two boys, 2 April, 1913, and 20 September, 1914. Three later children were Helen, Jean, and William who grew up in the Leamington - Wheatley area. Cecil farmed nearly 8 years east of Leamington on #3 highway. In 1920 they bought Johnny Robinson's farm 8 miles east of Wheatley. More than five successful gas wells were drilled which more than paid the taxes. Cecil raised sheep and swine, served with the Breeder's Assn., and was reeve of Romney Township for a time. In 1930 the Stobbs moved to Sam Moffat's farm a mile from Wheatley and closer to the high school. Cecil raised Hereford cattle and some sheep, managed the Leamington Fair and sold real estate. A final move in 1937 was to #4 Smith Street, Leamington, where Cecil raised show chickens. He developed prostate cancer in 1948 and died 4 May, 1949. Lulu remained in the home many years and took in boarders for company. Her last 8 years were in Sunparlor Home, Leamington, with her sister-in-law, Alice Stobbs. Lulu died 1 September, 1975, and was buried near Cecil in Erie Cemetery, near Wheatley.

Family Four

JOHN RUDD - MARY FORD

Code 4 Rudd, John: fourth child of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd, born late summer 1818 in townland of Graigavalla, Rathsarn parish, Queen's County (County Laois) Ireland. One record listed Castle Fleming, a village near Rathsarn where a hospital or nursing home may have been located, as John's birthplace. He was baptized in Rathsarn Church of Ireland 6 December, 1818, the first Rudd family baptism by Rev. Francis Lodge, rector 1818 - 1853. John was church warden in Rathsarn Church in 1840, apparently living at home in Graigavalla. He was reappointed church warden in 1845 with his father, Gordon and two brothers, George and Joseph. Late in 1847 he emigrated from Ireland to Canada West with his eldest sister, Jane. Apparently they proceeded directly to Goderich area, Huron County, where relatives were located. Deborah Wellwood, one of his mother's younger sisters, had married John Holmes in Ireland in May, 1833. Immediately after the wedding the Holmeses left for Canada West and settled in Huron Tract, later Goderich Township. Later Holmesville, seven miles southeast of Goderich, was named for the family. Alicia's sister, Deborah Wellwood Holmes, was born 6 June, 1806, raised 10 children and lived past her 101st birthday til 16 November, 1907; buried in Maitland Cemetery, Goderich.

John was a farmer who bought a "bush lot" of 100 acres soon after his arrival. By 1851 he was sufficiently established on Lot 71 on Maitland Road to marry. On 1 October, 1851, Rev. S. Lear married John and Mary Ford. She was born in Ireland 11 June, 1824, in Harperstown, County Wexford. She and six brothers and two sisters and English-Scotch parents had emigrated from Ireland in 1836. John's and Mary's five children were Alicia, Jennie, Mary, Emma, and Minnie. John was also a Wesleyan Methodist lay minister. He had been a leader and lay preacher in Ireland on the Maryborough circuit before emigration. He was given a local preacher's license by Goderich Official Board in 1849 which he retained for life. The Fords were staunch members of the Anglican Church and Mary's marriage to a Wesleyan Methodist preacher resulted in an estrangement between the Ford and Rudd families which lasted many years.

John and Mary lived in the home he built on Lot 71. John continued to be very active in the Methodist Church donating land for the Ebenezer Church which was active until 1954. He was township assessor in 1861; a tax collector in 1868, and a township auditor. His final will and testament signed 18 March, 1895, is on file in Toronto Archives leaving all his property to his wife during her lifetime. On her death he provided the farm known as Lot 38 in Maitland Concession, which was originally a Disney property, go to his daughter Emma. The original homestead comprising parts of Lots 70 and 71 and the balance of his estate he willed to two single daughters, Jennie and Minnie. Two legacies were charged against the homestead: the sum of $600 due Alicia Evans, the eldest daughter, within four years after Mary's death "she having already received advances from me". A second legacy of $200 was due Jennie within one year after Mary's death. John died 28 August, 1895, and left the will to be executed by his widow, Mary, and two spinster daughters. The homestead was sold and Mary, Jennie, and Minnie moved into Clinton and lived on Mary Street. Mary died 26 March, 1909 at 85. Her obiturary stated: "Mrs. Rudd was the last of the original settlers of Goderich Township." Both Mary and John were buried in Maitland Cemetery, Goderich, Ontario. The purchasers of the farm were the owners and operators in 1988 working the farm and using some original buildings.

ALICIA RUDD - PERCIVAL EVANS

4.1 Rudd, Alicia, eldest child of John and Mary Ford Rudd, born 1853 in Maitland concession, Holmesville, Ontario. On 14 December, 1881, married Percival John Evans, born 17 November, 1856, in St. Marys, Ontario. The Evans farmed in Holmesville area for nearly 20 years. Their four children were Harry, Minnie, Mervyn, and Frank. In 1900 the family moved to Manitoba province to settle in Cameron District six miles north of Minnedosa which is 120 miles west of Winnepeg, 70 miles from Saskatchewan province, and nearly 80 miles north of North Dakota. Percival built the homestead house, barn, and outbuildings. After farming 14 years more, they retired to a two story house on 3rd Avenue South in Minnedosa and sold the farm to their second son, Mervyn. Amy Lumsden, Code 4.131, recalled her grandmother, Alicia, knit her long red woolen stockings to keep her legs warm while waiting for the school van which was horsedrawn in early years. After piano lessons in town Amy remembered going to Grandma's house to play games and have tea while she and brother, Bill, waited for their folks. Grandma prepared buttered soda biscuits and tea with lots of milk and sugar to drink from real cups instead of mugs which made the children feel very grown up. Alicia died at home of a heart condition on 19 May, 1925. Percy then moved to Vancouver, British Columbia, to live with daughter Minnie Jenkins and family for nearly three years. He died 28 June, 1928, at age 71. Both Alicia and Percy were buried in Minnedosa cemetery after Methodist services. Percy's nephew, Herbert Evans, Robert's Creek, B.C., on Sechelt Peninsula, was a distinguished author of three major novels, two books of poetry, and 60 serials for magazines, 200 short stories, and 12 radio plays. At 92 he worked on the latest project, a novel on frontier life in British Columbia and died of pneumonia 17 June, 1986, at 94.

HARRY EVANS - HENRIETTA HAMMOND

4.11 Evans, Harry Gordon Reginald, eldest child of Percival and Alicia Rudd Evans, born 28 August, 1882, in Holmesville, Ontario. At 18 he moved to Minnedosa, Manitoba, with his folks. In 1908 in Minnedosa he married Henrietta (Rita) Estelle Hammond, born 1877 in Muskoka, Ontario, Can. They farmed in Fairmount District near Basswood, a small town northwest of Minnedosa, for nearly 30 years. Their three children were Percy, Egbert, and Grace. Harry was very active in community affairs in Fairmount and Basswood areas. In 1938 they retired to Minnedosa to live in his parent's home. He was briefly ill and died in January, 1949. In 1969 Rita died in Victoria, B.C. They were buried near the homeplace in the Fairmount cemetery.

Percy Evans - Mildred Porter family

4.111 Evans, Percy (Pat) Hammond, born 31 December, 1908, in Basswood, Manitoba. In 1933 in Basswood he married Mildred Lillian Porter, of Basswood. Pat was a farmer in the Fairmount District near Basswood for 23 years. Their two children were Berva and Gordon. In 1956 the family moved to Victoria, B.C., where Pat worked for the Canadian Federal Government stores at the dockyard in Esquimalt Navy Base until retirement. He died suddenly 5 October, 1982, was cremated and his ashes buried in the family plot in Hatley Memorial Gardens, Colwood. Mildred remained in Victoria.

4.1111 Evans, Berva Kathleen, born in 1936 in Basswood, Manitoba. In 1954 in Basswood she married Allen James Bradley, born in Newdale, Manitoba province. Their two children were Brenda and Gwen and they lived in Basswood and in Brandon, Manitoba, until Berva's death in 1976 of diabetic complications.

4.11111 Bradley, Brenda Kae, born 1954 in Basswood, Manitoba. In 1974 her son, Jamie Ryan Parken from an early marriage, was born in Port Hardy, Vancouver Island, B.C. In 1980 at Prince George, B.C., she married Albert Paul Simon, born in 1953 in New Westminster, B.C. Their child was Kelte Oleen born in 1980 in Prince George where they lived in 1984.

4.11112 Bradley, Berva Gwen, born in 1959 in Brandon, Manitoba. In 1978 she married Dale Rudy in Vernon, B.C., in the Canadian Rockies. Their child was Carla Dale, born in 1978 in Vernon, B.C. The Rudys lived in Edmonton, Alberta, in 1984, later separated. Michael Joseph Comeau was born in 1987.

4.1112 Evans, Gordon Roland, born in 1938 in Basswood, Manitoba. His child was Dawn Lee by a early marriage, born in 1974 in Parksville, B.C. In 1982 in Parksville he married Louise Blackburn, born in Ottawa, Ontario. Gordon and Louise lived in Parksville on Vancouver Island in 1984.

Bert Evans - Della Brown family

4.112 Evans, Egbert Henry, second child of Harry and Rita Hammond Evans, born 5 February, 1912, in Basswood, Manitoba. Bert attended Fairmount and Basswood schools and went to Minnedosa for 12th grade. His boyhood ambition was to be a pilot. After he graduated in 1934 from University of Manitoba with an electrical engineering degree, he joined the Royal Canadian Air Force as a Pilot Officer. On 14 June, 1939, in Minnedosa, he married Della Helen Brown, born 20 November, 1910, in Minnedosa. Their two children were Sharon and Debra. Della had attended business college in Winnepeg, and was a secretary for Commercial Adjusters, Ltd., before marriage. In January, 1940, Bert went overseas with the first bomber squadron from Canada and returned in November but went overseas again in 1944. Bert was given many important assignments during his 25 year military career. In 1943 he was Commanding Officer, Goose Bay, Labrador. At retirement in 1961, he was at Headquarters, in Ottawa, Ontario. Later Bert was a stock broker for Davidson & Company, Ottawa, until health forced an early retirement at 57. In July, 1980, Bert and Della moved to Victoria, B.C., where Bert died 18 February, 1983, after a lengthy illness. After cremation his ashes were placed in the Garden of Memories, Purecrest Cemetery, Ottawa, Ontario. In 1988 Della lived in Victoria, British Columbia.

4.1121 Evans, Sharon Helen, born 4 December, 1941, in Victoria, B.C.. Sharon was a nurse with her R.N. degree from Civic Hospital, Ottawa. On 10 July, 1963, in Ottawa, she married Cline Ashley Woolley, born 5 May, 1940, in Ottawa. He was a chartered accountant, a partner in Thorn Riddell, Ottawa. Their children were Kristina Helen, born 15 February, 1969; and Linda Jane, born 4 December, 1970; both born in Ottawa where the family lived in 1984.

4.1122 Evans, Joan Debra, born 11 August, 1950, Ottawa, Ontario. Debbie's B.A. degree in mathematics and economics was from Western University, London, Ontario. She worked 2 years for Canadian Transport Commission, Ottawa, and 4 years in Montreal as economist for Canadian National Railroad. In 1977 Debbie was an economist for British Columbia Provincial Government in Vancouver, B.C., and also was a consultant. On 2 March, 1984, in Vancouver, she married Blair Paul Walker, born 28 February, 1953, in Vancouver, British Columbia. MARY GERTRUDE RUDD

4.5 Rudd, Mary Gertrude, fifth daughter of John and Mary Ford Rudd, born 9 May, 1866, on Maitland Concession, Holmesville, Ontario. Minnie grew up in Holmesville-Clinton area. She was the librarian at Clinton Library for many years. On retirement she was honored for the long faithful service by her portrait being hung there. She was an executrix of her father's estate after his 1895 death. Minnie and her older sister, Jennie, and their mother moved to Clinton and bought a house after the homestead farm sale. They all lived on Mary Street until the mother died in 1909 and Jennie died in 1911. Minnie's nephew, John Rumball, spent a considerable period with her as a child and during his college years in Toronto. Around 1933 Amy Evans Lumsden, 4.131, visited Ontario with her parents. She remembered Miss Minnie Rudd lived in a lovely old home in Clinton which she shared with Miss Clarke, editor of the local newspaper. They were both recalled as very gracious and lovely ladies; Minnie was in her late 60s at the time. After retirement from the library, Minnnie bought a home on East Street in Goderich and lived well past her 90th birthday, 19 January, 1957. She was buried in Maitland Cemetery near her parents and sisters.

Family Five

ALICIA RUDD - ROBERT LARKE

Code 5 Rudd, Alicia, fifth child of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd, born in the first quarter of 1820 in the townland of Graigavalla, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland. She was baptized in Rathsarn church of Ireland 7 May, 1820. (Note: Alicia is a common Rúdd family name often interchanged with Alice in family records. The name Alicia appears officially in Alicia Wellwood Rudd's obituary and in Alicia Rudd Larke's marriage certificate.) Alicia's early life is not documented. The townland of Graigavalla was listed as her residence when she married Robert Larke Jr. of the townland of Old Town on 30 March, 1849, in the Registrar's Office in Roscrea. He was baptized 22 December, 1822, and was the eldest child of eight in Robert Larke Sr.'s Old Town farm family. One of Robert Larke Sr.'s sisters, Annabella, married Robert McClean of the townland of Castle Fleming, the brother of Ann McLean who married Alicia Rudd's older brother, William Rudd, Code 1. Robert Larke Jr., was listed on the marriage certificate as a farmer and a Relieving Officer and witnesses were George Evans and John Paso. The single daughter, Alicia Rebecca, was born at Boroughan when Alicia was 34. This was a fairly late marriage at a time seven of the nine Rudd children were planning or had emigrated from Ireland to America. The Rudd family felt Alicia married well. The Griffith Valuation of 1850 showed two Larke brothers, Thomas and Robert, Sr., farming some 90 acres in Old Town and using Boroughan land for grazing; Robert Larke Jr. with three acres, one rood, and 10 perches including a house leased from his Uncle Thomas. The Larkes were very active in the Methodist Society in Rathdowney but also maintained connections with the Church of Ireland, Rathsarn parish. Robert Jr., Joe Rudd, and William Cobbe were Church Wardens in 1858. Probably inheriting some Larke Sr.'s leases, Robert Jr. continued to farm and he and Alicia lived in Rathsarn parish til death. The Rudd burial plot at Rathsaran Church was surrounded with a low wrought iron fence with no visible markers. Both were buried in Rathdowney, presumably in the Methodist Cemetery, according to one notation.

ALICIA LARKE - RICHARD THOMPSON

5.1 Larke, Alicia Rebecca, born December, 1854, in townland of Boroughan, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland. She was the only child of Robert and Alicia Rudd Larke and attended school in the Rathsarn area. On 11 July, 1878, in Rathsarn Church she married Richard Thompson, born 1840, son of Jacob Thompson of Comross and Dinah Claxton of Kyle. The Larke's eight children were Dinah, Alicia, Jacob, Richard, Elizabeth, Robert, William, and Susan. Her husband, Richard, was a farmer in the Rathsarn area with holdings in Boroughan and Kyleamullaen. He raised feed and fattened beef. Alicia and Richard were very active in the Rathsarn church. Their son, John Thompson, told me in 1973: "The Rudds and Pratts may have started the Rathsarn Church but it was the Thompsons who kept it going." Alicia died 16 February, 1910. Richard died 16 January, 1921 in his 81st year. A large headstone behind the Rathsarn Church marked their burial plot.

DINAH JANE THOMPSON

5.11 Thompson, Dinah Jane, born in 1879 in Boroughan, Rathsarn parish, Queens (Laois) County. She lived at home and cared for her folks in their declining years then lived with a married sister until death at 82 on 4 February, 1961, and was buried at Rathsarn Church and shared a headstone with her parents and brother Jacob.

ALICIA THOMPSON - WILLIAM WALKER

5.12 Thompson, Alicia (Alice) born 18 December, 1880, in Boroughan, Rathsarn parish. On 7 January, 1904, at Rathsarn Church she married William Henry Arthur Walker of Portarlington North, Kings County, born 7 February, 1857. William was the son of John Walker and Elizabeth Cobbe. She was the older sister of Anne Cobbe who later married Robert Francis Rudd, Code 7. William was a farmer with holdings in Kilbride, Portarlington North. Portarlington is on the line of Queens (Laois) County and Portarlington North is in Kings (Offaly) County. The Walker home, "Anamoe", was apparently in Kings County. Kilbride was also mentioned in records and was probably a townland in Portarlington North parish. William's and Alicia's eight children were Alice, Robert, Dinah, William, Richard, Susan, Sarah, and Florence all born in the Portarlington area in Ireland. In 1924 when Florence was four, the family emigrated from Ireland to Australia. They stayed in the People's Palace Hotel in Sydney, New South Wales, for a few weeks before buying a farm at Badgerys Creek near Liverpool and Sydney. Later they acquired a second farm at Joadja Mittagong, New South Wales, where some of the family lived in 1988. William died of pneumonia in Bowral, NSW, 6 January, 1935. Alice continued to live on the original farm for several years after William's death and later with daughters Elsie and Evelyn. She was in a nursing home in Camden near Elsie's home her last five years until death on 28 June, 1974, when she was 94. She and William were buried at Mittagong, NSW.

Elsie Walker - Frederick Woollams family

5.121 Walker, Alice Elizabeth (Elsie) was born 16 April, 1905, in Kilbride, Portarlington North, Kings County, Ireland. At 19 Elsie emigrated with her family from Ireland to Sydney, Aus. On 4 April, 1927, at Camden, NSW, she married Frederick Charles Woollams of Badgerys Creek. NSW, born 10 August, 1907, at Stuart Town, NSW. He was a farmer. Fred and Elsie farmed at Rossmore near Liverpool, NSW. Their seven children were Elizabeth, Gwendolyn, June, Noreen, Barbara, Merrilynn, and John. Fred served five years with the Australian Imperial Forces in the Middle East and New Guinea during WW II and returned to farming in 1945. Our accidental contact with Elsie Woollams in 1986 provided the wealth of information and contacts with the Alice Thompson descendants. Our first letter was incorrectly addressed but was delivered correctly due to the postal code. Elsie not only forwarded us information on her very extensive family of 24 grandchildren and 37 great grandchildren but also involved her brothers and sisters in collecting information for their families which was sent to us for the Rudd Family book. As an unexpected reward and sacrifice, at 81 Elsie traveled from New South Wales, Australia, together with ner niece, Elizabeth Maie Sherwood, to join their Rudd cousins in Burlington, Ontario, Canada, at Rudd Roundup II, August, 1986, where they were enthusiastically greeted and honored.

Elsie lived in Camden, NSW, in 1988.

5.1211 Woollams, Elizabeth Alice, born 10 August, 1927, at Burwood, NSW. Beth was a bookkeeper before and after marriage. On 6 April, 1946, in Bringelly, NSW, she married Stanley Gordon Hume Miles, born 30 October, 1924, at Atbury, NSW. He served in the RAAF during WW II and worked for the Army as a storeholder after leaving the Service. Their four children were Kenneth, David, Robyn, and Neryl Margaret. Stanley died of a heart attack 17 January, 1984. Beth received an invalid pension and lived at Warwick Farm, NSW, in 1986.

5.12111 Miles, Kenneth Stanley, born 11 February, 1947, at Albury, NSW. He served 20 years in the RA Navy. On 19 December, 1970, at Pascoevale, Victoria, Aus., he married Ivy May Hutchinson, born 15 August, 1949, in Melbourne. Their two children were Justin Paul, born 24 March, 1974; and Amanda Louise born 23 October, 1975; both born in Nowra, NSW, before the 6 October, 1980, divorce. After discharge from Service in 1984, Kenneth was attached to the Victorian Police Force and lived in Preston, Victoria, in 1987.

5.12112 Miles, David John, born 26 October, 1948, at Albury, NSW. He was a public servant with the Army. In 1987 he lived in Liverpool, NSW.

5.12113 Miles, Robyn Elizabeth, born 13 March, 1950, at Fairfield, NSW. She was a chemist assistant. On 11 July, 1970, at Liverpool, NSW, she married Kenneth Frank Stephenson, born 30 December, 1946, in Yorkshire, England. He was a council worker. Their two children were Wendy Jane, 20 April, 1972, at Penrith, NSW; and Julie Anne, 3 February, 1974, at Liverpool, NSW. In 1987 the family lived in Mullaway, NSW, near Coffe Harbour.

5.12114 Miles, Neryl Margaret, born 30 September, 1957, at Sidney, NSW. She wanted a child of her own; Timothy Gordon Miles, born 15 April, 1983, in Port Macquarie, NSW, but she opted to not marry. Neryl was a car detailer and helped support her pensioned mother and lived in Liverpool in 1986.

5.1212 Woollams, Gwendolyn Gladys, second child of Fred and Elsie Walker Woollams, born 4 November, 1929, in Penrith, NSW. Gwen was a dressmaker. On 17 March, 1951, in Rossmore, NSW, she married Leonard Henry Biddle, born 15 March, 1930, in Liverpool, NSW. He was a cabinet maker. Their five children were Stephen, Lesley, Leonie, Debra, and Graham. The family lived at North Haven, NSW, in 1987.

5.12121 Biddle, Stephen Henry, born 17 December, 1951, in Sydney, NSW. He was a cabinet maker. On 13 November, 1974, in Corrimal, NSW, he married Debbie Irene Frame, born 16 January, 1953, in Bundaberg, Queensland, Aus. Their two children were Joel Henry Knox, 8 July, 1972; and Malynda, 4 February, 1974; both born in Millthorpe, NSW, where the family lived in 1987.

5.12122 Biddle, Lesley Anne, born 16 January, 1953, in Sydney, NSW. On 31 October, 1970, in Corrimal, NSW, she married Larry Douglas Lewis, born 14 February, 1951, in Bulli, NSW. He was a technician. Their three children were Simone Alice-Anne, 10 May, 1971; Kristie Elizabeth, 16 September, 1973; and Danielle Marie, 24 March, 1977; all born in North Haven, NSW, where the family lived in 1987.

ROBERT JOHN THOMPSON - MARGARET WINTER

5.16 Thompson, Robert John, sixth child of Richard and Alicia Larke Thompson, born 16 November, 1891, in Oldtown, Rathsarn parish, County Laois, Ireland. In April, 1918, in Springfield, County Limerick, he married Margaret Charlotte Winter, born 14 April, 1884, in County Limerick. Their four children were Richard, Anna, Marjorie, and Edward, all born on the Boroughan farm. Later when John was semi-retired he turned the Boroughan farm over to his eldest son, Richard. John and Margaret moved to the rector's residence at the ancient Catholic church which the Rathsarn Church of Ireland had replaced. His Park Grogan address may have referred to holdings in the townlands of Park and Grogan but was more apt to refer to the Park townland where the church was located and the Rathsarn church itself which was also called Grogan Church. The remnants of Saran's Rath which gave name to the parish lies between the old rectory and the present Rathsarn church. John was a farmer all his life. In 1973 he was raising his own feed and fattening beef for market. He felt very strongly that his grandsons needed to stay on the land. Between his and his sons' holdings he hoped there would be a plot of land for each grandson to start farming.

In March, 1973, while visiting John and Margaret, he provided much insight into Rudd origins and Rudd history in the Rathsarn area; sure the Rudds had been there for a long time; several generations. He gave Rudds credit along with the Pratts for building and supporting the early Rathsarn church. We explored the church together and found four boxes (benches) in the balcony with name plaques for Rudd-Thompson, Pratt, Talbot, and Wellwood. John was very interested in his roots. It was later that he and Margaret reviewed all the vestry books of Rathsarn church for any Rudd references in the records and sent complete listings for this publication. Unfortunately, we omitted getting similar listings of Thompsons, Stanleys, and Carters from the records.

John said the Rudds were very big men. One story was of the time they added a side door and entry step to the church and disturbed an unmarked grave in the process. When a very large thigh bone was unearthed in the mishap, John knew at once it was a Rudd grave. There were also tall McLeans in Rudd Family One and tall Fords in Rudd Family Four. This may clarify genetic combinations manifested in current large scale offspring in today's families. In 1973 John and Margaret had 20 grandchildren and three great grandchildren. On 3 September, 1976, John died of a heart attack. Margaret lived to 6 March, 1983, one month short of 99. Both were buried at Rathsarn church.

Richard Thompson - Yvonne Bennett family

5.161 Thompson, Richard William, born 13 February, 1919, in Boroughan. Dixie was a farmer with holdings in Boroughan and Oldtown in Rathsarn parish and in Clonburen. On 19 September, 1951, in Abbeyleix, he married Hilda Yvonne Bennett, born 12 May, 1928. She was the youngest of 10 children of James Bennett and Susan Carter. Richard's and Yvonne's five children were Heather, Robert, Rhona, Richard, and Edward. When we visited in 1980 and 1985 they lived in a modern house on the old family place in Boroughan and Dixie raised feed and beef cattle with two of his sons. The 80 foot high Castle of Clanburn, their own castle, was in the back pasture and dated back to the days of the Norman takeover when castles were needed for safe sleeping.

5.1611 Thompson, Heather Hilda, born 17 September, 1952, in Boroughan, Rathsarn parish, County Laois. She was a nurse who trained at Newtownards, County Down. GEORGE RUDD - ELIZABETH MEARES

Code 6 Rudd, George Welsdon, sixth child of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd, baptized in Rathsarn church on 8 May, 1822. His obituary lists this as his birthdate but church records show it as a baptismal date. He was born in the townland of Graigavalla, Rathsarn parish, Queens County. He grew up in the parish and was apparently influenced by the Methodists at an early age. The Methodist Riders stopped at the Rudd home. George was also involved in the Rathsarn Church of Ireland, listed as a church warden in 1845 along with his father and two older brothers, Joe and John. He worked in the mercantile business as a young man, first in Stradbally, County Laois, and later as a store manager in Portumna on the Shannon River. In December, 1854, in St. James parish in Dublin, he married Elizabeth Charlotte Victoria Meares, born 1834.

Some confusion exists as to Elizabeth's origins. Her younger half-sister was Adelaide Yard indicating Elizabeth's mother married twice. One of Elizabeth's pictures is labeled Elizabeth Charlotte Victoria Stoney and her second son was named Thomas Johnston Stoney Rudd. Her stepfather may have been Mr. Stoney, Adelaide Yard's father. Another story has Elizabeth, or more possibly her mother, as a distant relative of Queen Victoria disowned by the Royal family for marrying a commoner. This one is pure rumor, but an interesting bit of conjecture. In any case the name Meares was used on Elizabeth's wedding certificate.

Shortly after the wedding George and Elizabeth emigrated to Canada West near the present city of Hamilton, Ontario. Their first three children were born here: Eliza, Thomas, and Charles. George may have tried farming or possibly worked in the mercantile business with limited success. In 1862 the family returned to Ireland. A story tells of George Rudds crossing the Atlantic in a sailing ship with a babe in arms, which would have been Charles who was born in October, 1860. The crossing was exceedingly rough with real danger of being lost at sea. Residence was established at Templemore, County Tipperary and a mercantile business was set up which lasted for 14 years.

Five more children were born in Templemore: George, Alicia, Charlotte, Arthur, and Robert. Church records show the baptisms in the Roscrea Methodist Church. George moved the family to Dublin in 1876 in order to provide better opportunities for the children according to his obituary. He collapsed in the street, apparently from a stroke, on 2 March, 1891. A quote from his obituary: " He was brought home suffering from paralysis and softening of the brain." He died 22 May, 1891, and was buried in Rathdowney, Queens County, in the family burial plot at Rathsarn church.

In his obituary, published 31 July, 1891, much was made of his lifelong activity in the Methodist Society and his participation in church affairs in his early life in Rathdowney and in Canada where he took letters of introduction from Irish Methodist ministers to Canadian counterparts. This was also done on his return from Canada to Templemore where he functioned as local preacher and Sunday school teacher. He held various offices in the Methodist Society.

Elizabeth lived another 23 years as a widow, much of that time in Dublin with her youngest son before and after his marriage. She died of pneumonia at age 80, 14 December, 1914, and was buried in Dean's Grange, Dublin, in a common grave with her halfsister, Adelaide Annie Yard who died 12 years earlier.

ELIZA SELENA RUDD

6.1 Rudd, Eliza Selena, born 6 August, 1856, in Hamilton, Canada West; baptized by the Reverend James Elliott, a Wesleyan minister. She was a sickly baby;lived only 13 months and 19 days; and died 25 September, 1857, of "congestion of the brain". She was buried in the Burlington Cemetery, Hamilton.

THOMAS RUDD - MARGARET ADAMS

6.2 Rudd, Thomas Johnston Stoney, born 18 August, 1858, Hamilton, Canada West. He was baptized by Reverend Charles Lavelle, a Wesleyan minister. He was age four when the family returned to Templemore, Ireland. Jack's second name was at times listed as Jonston. When he married he was proprietor of the Temperance Hotel in Bray, County Wicklow. On 11 December, 1895, in the Bray Methodist Church he married Margaret Adams, born 1872. She was listed on the marriage license as manageress of the hotel. Their first daughter, Eileen Gertrude, was born in 3rd Qrt., 1896; and Olive Melville was born in 1st Qtr., 1898, in Rathdowney area. Their third child, Susan Elizabeth, was born in 3rd Qtr., 1902, in South Dublin. No record was found of dates of deaths. but all three girls died as infants. Tuberculosis was alluded to as cause of one child's death. Muriel Rudd McLean, 6.83, remembered Uncle Jack as a timid person; a lovable soul who held her on his knee as though longing for a child of his own. He may also have been sickly. He died at 66 in the 3rd Qtr., 1925, and was buried in Mt. Jerome Cemetery, Dublin. His younger brother came from Belfast for the funeral. After the services the Belfast Rudds left to visit their old church and drew the ire of the widow, Margaret, as showing lack of respect for their brother. Her abrasive letter resulted in a permanent estrangement with the brother's family and loss of contact for her remaining 16 years til her death at 69 in Dublin in the 2nd Qtr., 1941. (Official records were listed by quarter rather than by month.)

CHARLES RUDD - (1) JEMIMA MURRAY (2) MARGARET STEWART

6.3 Rudd, Charles Gordon, born 11 October, 1860, at Siddeville, Middlesex County, near London, Canada West. He was baptized by Reverend Samuel Tucker, a Wesleyan minister of the London circuit. He returned to Ireland with the family as a toddler in 1862 and grew up in Templemore area. He learned railroading as an apprentice on Irish railroads. When he was 23 he left Tralee, County Limerick to make his fortune in America. No record was found as to whether he entered through New York or the St. Lawrence River into the Hamilton/London area of Ontario. He did visit his Uncle Gordon, Code 8, in Jeddo, Michigan, and his Uncle William, Code 1, and family in Marlette, Michigan.

His first railroad job was in St. Paul. Minnesota. In 1885 he was a Canadian Pacific Railroad agent, briefly in Calgary, part of the the Canadian Northwest Territory at that time. For three years he was at Moose Jaw Crossing, now in Saskatchewan. In December, 1882, when the first passenger train arrived, this was a spare village of 200 residents living in tents and frame shacks. In 1885 Charles was the first C.P.R. station master assigned to Moose Jaw. It was then he sent back to Ireland for his "Rose of Tralee", Jemima Murray.

On 8 November, 1886, in Moose Jaw at the residence of S.H. Denton, he married Jemima Fraser Murray, born 1856 in Tralee, County Kerry, Ireland. She was the second youngest daughter of Peter Murray, a veterinarian, who received his diploma in 1844 from the Royal School of Veterinary Medicine, Edinburgh, Scotland. Their first child, Robert, was born in Moose Jaw. The area suffered particularly vicious prairie winters; 1886-87 was so severe even natives talked about it. On 11 January, 1887, thermometers stood at 52 below zero, "one of the worst winters in the history of the west." Charles resigned his Moose Jaw post and moved his young family to Olwein, Iowa, where he worked for the Chicago Great Western Railway for the next 25 years.

Their second child was Hannah. In 1894 when she was age four, Jemima developed blood poisoning and died. Charles was left with two children ages four and seven. His sister, Alice, came from Ireland to help with the motherless family and stayed until Charles married again in 1897. On 4 October, 1897, in Olwein he married Margaret Jeanette Stewart, born 26 February, 1875, in Kilrae, County Derry, Northern Ireland. She was part of a Scot family who operated a dairy in the Olwein area. Charles married the milkman's sister. Their three daughters were Margaret, Charlotte, and Miriam; all born in Olwein, Iowa.

By 1913 Charles suffered from glaucoma and poor vision. He retired from the railroad and moved the family to Eugene, Oregon, where he purchased eight acres of orchard and berry land and lived out his life. Miriam remembered him as a very affectionate father, approachable and kindly; definitely not the domineering father figure so characteristic of many families in the early 1900s. Charles died 19 March, 1938, and was buried in the Odd Fellows Cemetery Number Two, Eugene, Oregon. He had been a very active Mason and a Shriner. His wife lived seven years longer and died 9 July, 1945 of cancer of the liver and was buried with Charles.

ROBERT RUDD - BESSIE MC HARGUE

6.31 Rudd, Robert Arthur, eldest child of Charles and Jemima Murray Rudd, born in Regina, Saskatchewan, 4 October, 1887. He grew up in Olwein, Iowa, and was a railroad mechanic in Montana and then moved to Portland, OR, where he was a Ford car salesman. In 1911 in Montana he married Bessie McHargue. Their son was Robert Gordon. Robert Arthur died suddenly 16 April, 1939, from a strep infection and temperature of 109 following a tonsillectomy before sulfa and antibiotic drugs. He was cremated and ashes buried in father's grave in Eugene. Bessie survived 10 years until 27 December, 1949.

Robert Rudd - Juanita Oberstock family

6.311 Rudd, Robert Gordon, born 27 October, 1922, in Portland, Oregon; the only child of Robert Arthur and Bessie McHargue Rudd. Bob grew up in Portland and attended Benson Polytechnic. He worked for Western Electric, had a Texaco service station, and then started a fishing rod business in Vancouver, Washington: Bob Rudd Manufacturing Company; Reeder Rods. On 15 November, 1946, in Portland, he married Juanita Rose Oberstock, born 20 September, 1926, in Vancouver, WA. She worked for the Department of Agriculture before marriage and inherited the bookkeeping for the fishing rod business with the marriage. Their three children were Marilyn, Charles, and Kathryn, and they lived in Vancouver, WA. Bob died suddenly from renal failure at 60 on 28 April, 1928; a rare and fatal disease: Wegener's Granulmatosis. He was cremated. Juanita had retired from bookkeeping and lived in Vancouver in 1988.

6.3111 Rudd, Marilyn Ann, born 1 January, 1948, in Portland, OR. She attended Portland State University and was a receivable clerk for Consolidated Freightways in 1988 and lived in Portland. On 15 July, 1989, she married Daniel Arthur Krause.

6.3112 Rudd, Charles Arthur, born 16 September, 1949, in Portland, OR. He graduated from Benson Polytechnic, a vocational high school. He was a service man for a business office machine company and later worked for a building contractor. In 1988 he lived in Oakhurst, California, and worked in maintenance and construction.

6.3113 Rudd, Kathryn Adele, born 7 July, 1953, in Portland, OR. On 18 November, 1972, in Vancouver, WA, she married Thomas Earl Brenegan, born 9 July, 1950, in Vancouver. Their two children were Lisa Diane, 3 February, 1974; and Kevin Thomas, 13 September, 1977; both born in Portland before the parents separated in September, 1979. On 1 January, 1984, in Vancouver, Kathy married Harold Lloyd Calhoun, born 28 August, 1942, in Allendale, Missouri, a baker for Wonder Bread. He adopted the two children and they changed their middle names to Lisa Kathryn and Kevin Lloyd. Kathy drove the school bus for Evergreen School District in 1985 and the family lived in Vancouver in 1986.

HANNAH RUDD - VIRGIL HAWKINS

6.32 Rudd, Hannah Elizabeth, second child of Charles and Jemima Murray Rudd, born 8 December, 1890, in Olwein, Iowa. She grew up there and moved with her brother to Montana after he married. She was a retail clerk before rejoining the family in Eugene, Oregon in 1913. Hannah worked in a department store in Eugene for 15 years before and during marriage. On 1 January, 1927, in Eugene she married Virgil Hawkins. He was a farmer with a fruit ranch west of Eugene. He subdivided it into city lots but died before the subdivision was complete. The area was known as Hawkins Heights and became part of the city of Eugene. Hannah died of a massive stroke and pneumonia on 27 September, 1968. She and Virgil were buried in Mulkey Cemetery in Hawkins Heights on land donated to the city by Hawkins. It was an earlier pioneer cemetery which had not been dedicated to the city.

MARGARET STEWART RUDD

6.33 Rudd, Margaret Jeanette, born 31 December, 1898, in Olwein, Iowa; the eldest child of Charles and Margaret Stewart Rudd. She died in 1903 of quinsy; severely abscessed tonsils; and was buried in Olwein.

CHARLOTTE RUDD - WILLIAM DICKERSON

6.34 Rudd, Charlotte Jane, born 24 January, 1905, in Olwein, Iowa; second child of Charles and Margaret Stewart Rudd. She grew up in Eugene, Oregon; received a degree in home economics from Oregon State College in 1932. Charlotte taught home economics at Astoria High School, Astoria, Oregon, on the Pacific Ocean at the mouth of the Columbia River for 12 years. On 30 July, 1943, in Eugene, she married William E. Dickerson, born August, 1900, in Cleveland, Ohio. Bill was purchasing agent for Bumble Bee Fish Canneries in Astoria and Alaska. They lived on the Oregon Coast south of Astoria until Bill retired in 1965 then moved to Eugene for the drier climate. Bill died of cancer in 1974. Charlotte died 25 April, 1983, after several years of deteriorating illness. Charlotte and Bill were buried in the Mulkey Cemetery on Hawkins Heights, Eugene.

Your author's chance contact with Charlotte in Freshman Chemistry in 1929 at Oregon State College resulted in meeting her family; my first contact with Family Six. This restored communications between my grandad, Code 1.6, and his long lost first cousin, Charles, Code 6.3. Their letters about family members and early records helped motivate my curiosity about Rudd family history and connections.

MIRIAM RUDD - PHILLIP WILBUR

6.35 Rudd, Miriam Stewart, born 10 July, 1911, in Olwein, Iowa, third child of Charles and Margaret Stewart Rudd. She grew up in Eugene, OR. She graduated from Oregon Normal School, renamed Oregon College of Education, at Monmouth. She taught in Lane County, Oregon, before marriage. On 10 September, 1934, in Seaside, OR, she married Phillip Patrick Wilbur, born 17 March, 1911, in Salem, OR. Phil was a mortician apprentice when married and later was a streetcar operator and bus driver for San Diego Transit Company. Their daughter was Phyllis, born before the parents separated in January, 1948. Miriam earned her California teaching credential from San Diego State College and taught in elementary and adult levels in San Diego schools. She lived in Springfield, OR, in 1988, and was retired.

During the accelerated search for Rudd roots in 1970s, Miriam made first contact with Norris and Alice Rudd, Family Seven, and with Silvia Rudd Bennett of Brisbane, Australia, from a branch of Ireland's Templemore Rudds, Code 10 T 1.XII

Phyllis Wilbur - Charles Tipton family

6.351 Wilbur, Phyllis Ann, born 5 November, 1937, in Eugene, OR, only child of Phillip and Miriam Rudd Wilbur. On 17 May, 1957, she married Charles Tipton of Chattanooga, Tennessee. Their two children were Kathleen and Christopher Ari born 31 July, 1970, in La Mesa, California.

6.3511 Tipton, Kathleen Ann, born 17 August, 1958, in San Diego, CA. Her degree in education and journalism was from Arizona State College. Her married name in 1988 was Alvey in Mesa, AZ.

GEORGE ISAAC RUDD

6.4 Rudd, George Isaac Wellwood, fourth child of George and Elizabeth Meares Rudd, born 15 June, 1863, in Templemore, County Tipperary, Ireland. He was baptized by Reverend James B. Athens, Wesleyan Minister of the Roscrea circuit. We obtained very little family information on George, the son; his early life, his occupation, his wife, or his family. He was reported to have fathered two boys somewhere in Ireland; names of the children and the mother were not obtained. Circa 1890 he was reported as badly hurt in a fall through a ship's hold on landing in America. A note in Hannah Hawkins memorabelia recorded: "George in Sister's Hospital, Buffalo, New York. Broken back; broken breast bone; unconscious for a week; taken to hospital in a wagon. Two city surgeons operated; put a steel plate in his head. Sueing Erie Railroad Co. for $20,000." George contacted his brother, Charles, from the hospital for money for stamps among other things. There must have been further contact since one of Charles's letters in 1929 mentioned his brother, George, had died in Texas and was buried there.

ALICIA RUDD - (1) G. GRANBURG (2) WILLIAM GAMBLE

6.5 Rudd, Alicia Adelaide Anne, fifth child of George and Elizabeth Meares Rudd, born 25 June, 1865, in Templemore, County Tipperary, Ireland. Alice came to Olwein, Iowa, in 1894 to help her widower-brother, Charles, with two young children. She continued as surrogate mother until Charles's second marriage in 1897. In 1905, Alice married G. Granburg who died in 1911. Alice married William J. Gamble in Gifford, Idaho. He was an itinerant preacher in the northwestern area of Idaho. Alice died 17 September, 1945, after William's death, in Lewiston, Idaho, and was buried in Spalding, Idaho.

CHARLOTTE RUTH RUDD

6.6 Rudd, Charlotte Ruth, sixth child of George and Elizabeth Meares Rudd, born 17 March, 1868, in Templemore, County Tipperary. She was baptized by the Reverend Thomas Pearson, Wesleyan Minister. She died at two months and two days from convulsions and whooping cough. She was buried at Rathsarn church in County Laois, Ireland.

ARTHUR WESLEY RUDD

6.7 Rudd, Arthur Wesley, seventh child of George and Elizabeth Meares Rudd, born 19 July, 1870, in Templemore, County Tipperary; baptized by Reverend Thomas W. Baker, Wesleyan Minister. Arthur moved to Dublin with the family in 1876 at age 6. Eleven years later, at age 17, on 8 February, 1887, Arthur died at his home at 26 Emoryville Avenue, South Circular Road, Dublin. An obituary in the Christian Advocate of 17 March, 1887, written by one of his brothers gives very little information about Arthur except "he was a pious boy, very retiring and undemonstrative, who devoted most of his spare time to study far in advance of the average boy of his age in general information." Apparently he first became ill in August, 1886, and was confined to bed for several weeks. His last illness began 1 February, 1887. On Monday, February 7th, his mind became affected; he was out of his head; delirious. He died Tuesday afternoon; no indication in the obituary of the cause. He was buried at Rathsarn church. The Reverend William Maguire, Methodist Minister from South Great George's Street in Dublin read the burial service after a funeral procession from Ballybrophy station to Rathsarn parish by way of the main street of Rathdowney where "most of the respectable shops were partially closed and some altogether while the solemn procession passed through." according to the obituary account.

ROBERT HENRY RUDD - MARY CONSTANCE MOORE

6.8 Rudd, Robert Henry, eighth child and the youngest of George and Elizabeth Meares Rudd, born 18 June, 1874, in Templemore, County Tipperary. Robert moved to Dublin with his family at age two where he grew up and attended school. He entered the insurance business first in Dublin then transferred to Belfast after his mother's death. On 24 September, 1896, at the Charleston Road Methodist Church in Dublin he married Mary Constance Moore, born 6 September, 1873, in Galway, to a Scottish family. His mother, Elizabeth Victoria, was living with her son when he met Pollie and continued to live with them after their marriage until her death of pneumonia in 1914. Their three children were Lily, and Gladys; both born in Dublin; and Muriel, born in Belfast. Robert died suddenly in 1932 from a blood clot following surgery for a bleeding ulcer and was buried in Belfast City Cemetery. Pollie continued to live with her eldest daughter in the family home on Antrim Road, Belfast, and died of cancer in 1950. She was buried in the Belfast City Cemetery.

LILY VICTORIA RUDD

6.81 Rudd, Lily Victoria, born 12 July, 1897, in Dublin, the year of the Commemorative Queen Victoria Jubilee and never married. She worked in an insurance office in Belfast for many years. In her later years she suffered from both a bad heart and advancing blindness from glaucoma and cataracts. She lived her last days in a convalescent home in Belfast and died 29 July, 1980; buried in Belfast City Cemetery.

GLADYS RUDD - THOMAS MC MEEKIN

6.82 Rudd, Gladys Evelyn, born 12 December, 1900, in Dublin, Ireland. Before marriage she worked in the Belfast City Water Department. On 5 September, 1923, in Belfast, she married Thomas McMeekin, born 8 October, 1894, in Ahoghill, County Antrim, Northern Ireland. He was the Belfast representative of Schneiders, a British men's clothing firm, for 45 years. The two children were Hazel and Brian and the family lived in Belfast until their house took a direct hit in the bombings in WW II. Fortunately no one was home. They moved out to the Muchamore area of County Antrim. Gladys and Thomas celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary 6 September, 1983, two months before Thomas died on 4 November from a blood clot on the lung following bronchial pneumonia. Gladys lived with Hazel's family for a period.In 1988 she was in a convalesent home in Whitehead, County Antrim.

Hazel McMeekin - Derrik Butler family

6.821 McMeekin, Hazel Constance, born 30 September, 1927, in Belfast. She was an accountant for the Belfast City Housing Authority before marriage. On 12 September, 1956, in Belfast she married Douglas Derrik Butler, born 18 May, 1922, in Glasgow, Scotland. The Butlers were in Ireland from the Continent and British Isles at an early date, with close connections in Kilkenny Castle. Hazel's December, 1988 letter included the six day program for the 8th International Butler Rally in Kilkenny and surrounding area in September, 1988. They rally every third year in Europe and the British Isles in Butler clan locales. Derrik was a talented musician and linguist and served with British Armed Forces in Europe during and after WW II for ten years. Later the Butlers operated an industrial electronic instrumentation business in Belfast; D.D. Butler, Ltd. Their parent company was Brown, Boverie Kent of Switzerland. Their three children were Valerie, Brenda, and Fiona. Until 1987 the family lived in Holywood, a suburb of Belfast near the harbor. In 1988 the Butlers moved to Ballywater on the Irish Sea coast in County Down. Hazel and Derrik joined us at the first Rudd Roundup in 1983 at Jackson Hole Wyoming.

6.8211 Butler, Valerie Ruth, born 4 October, 1957, in Belfast, Northern Ireland (U.K.). She studied beauty therapy and hairdressing and taught this for two years. She was a makeup and design artist for B.B.C. Television before and after marriage. On 14 August, 1986, she married Michael Connor. Their child was Lauren Kristina, born 27 December, 1987. The family lived in Bangor, County Down, near the mouth of Belfast harbor's south side. In 1990 Michael worked with Belfast Telegraph newspaper with the largest circulation in Ireland.

6.8212 Butler, Brenda Anne, born 17 May, 1959, in Belfast. She served one year with the British WRNS and studied business management. She was supervisor of fashion sales for a large Belfast department store. On 1 November, 1980, in Hollywood, she married Richard Eric Hughes, a sales engineer for D.D. Butler, Ltd. and they separated in 1984. In 1988 Brenda was in West Terschelling, Netherlands married to Robert Van Lint. Their child, Sebastian Thomas, was born 19 October, 1987. The Van Lints owned and operated their own bar and disco business.

6.8213 Butler, Fiona Reade, born 7 April, 1964, in Belfast. She studied at the University of Ulster. In 1985 she studied graphic design at Cumbria College of Art and Design in Carlisle, England. In 1988 she was on the island of Tershelling, Netherlands, near Brenda and was engaged to Jurgin Tuinman. They married 22 July, 1989, in Northern Ireland. He worked for the Dutch Coast Guard and Fiona launched a hypnotherapy business.

Brian McMeekin - Alison Chisholm family

6.822 McMeekin, Brian Kerr, born 21 January, 1935, in Belfast. He attended the College of Ballymena. In 1955 he took over his father's job with Schneiders as Northern Ireland representative of the British men's clothing store. On 23 November, 1963, in Ballyclare, County Antrim, he married Alison Margaret Chisholm, born 10 October, 1937, in Ballyclare. She was a physiotherapist who worked at Fleming Fulton School for Handicapped Children in 1985. Their three children were Kathryn; Jane; and Jonathon Henry, 26 August, 1969, in Belfast. The family lived in the Knock area of Belfast in 1985.

6.8221 McMeekin, Katherine Claire, born 29 July, 1965, in Belfast. She studied economics at Loughborough University, Leicestershire, England, in 1985. In 1989 she lived in London and worked for National Westminster Bank.

6.8222 McMeekin, Jane Louise, born 12 March, 1967, in Belfast. She worked in Northern Ireland Civil Service. In 1989 she lived in Belfast.

MURIEL RUDD - JAMES MC LEAN

6.83 Rudd, Muriel Gertrude, born 17 June, 1906, in Belfast. She attended school and grew up in Belfast area. Muriel worked for the Belfast Harbor Master for 20 years, before and after marriage. On 8 June, 1939, in Belfast, she married James McLean, born 23 May, 1901, in Rothesay on the Isle of Bute off the shore of Scotland. Jimmy came to the Belfast area as a babe in arms. He studied to be an architect serving apprenticeship with Young and McKensee, Architects, in Belfast. Jimmy worked for the Engineering Department of Belfast Harbor for 42 years until his 1966 retirement. The McLeans made the news in September, 1977, when an auto transport truck tunneled into the front living room of their home and stopped approximately 10 feet from their cozy teatime table. They lived in Carrickfergus, a Belfast suburb on the north shore with a view of Belfast harbor. Jimmy suffered a major stroke in November, 1983, and never fully recovered. His death on 7 December, 1987, was from a heart attack. He was buried in the Bangor New Cemetery in County Down. Muriel was confined to a wheelchair as a result of a joint replacement in 1974 which became infected and could not be repaired. Her health continued to deteriorate and Muriel died 4 May, 1989. She was also buried in Bangor New Cemetery.

Family Seven

ROBERT FRANCIS RUDD - ANNE COBBE

Code 7 Rudd, Robert Francis, seventh child of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd, born 15 October, 1826, in the townland of Graigavalla, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, Ireland. Robert was baptized in Rathsarn Church of Ireland on 3 December, 1826. He is entered in church records when appointed church warden in 1846 at age 20. On 22 October, 1850, Robert Francis married Anne Cobbe, a French Huguenot, of Portarlington on the border between King and Queens Counties. Anne's name was usually spelled with an "e" however both spellings were in the records, the "e" spelling being the most consistent.

Robert and Anne were married in the parish church, Coolbanaghn, Portarlington area. Anne was recorded as a Full Spinster which meant she was at least age 21. Her tombstone listed her age as 83 years in November, 1906, placing her birthdate in late 1823, three years older than Robert Francis. Her father was recorded as William Cobbe, farmer, of Ballykillane. Robert was recorded as a Full Batchelor farmer. His father, Gordon Rudd, was listed as Farmer, Graigavalla, Parish of Rathsaran. The marriage was performed by Reverend George Stafford Reed in the presence of William H. Cobbe and Thomas Armstrong. Many marriages at the time were made legal by "posting banns" for three successive weeks in the parish church to give notice to the local community. The Huguenots were Calvanistic French Protestants who escaped France following the revocation of the Edict of Nantes on 18 October, 1685. The original Edict of 1598 had provided for some religious and political freedoms after many years of severe persecution and harrassment of non-Catholics in France. The revocation in 1685 eliminated the protection and freedoms and resulted in general persecution of these groups and their mass emigrations from France.

In the fall of 1851 Robert Francis and Anne emigrated from Ireland to New York with their eldest son, William Albert. They docked in New York 25 November, 1851, on the "Samuel", a British ship out of Dublin. Captain David Morris signed the ship manifest as Master. The passenger list shows Robert Rudd, age 24, male laborer; Ann Rudd, age 20, (note adjusted age), female servant; William Rudd, age 10 months, male infant; David Cobb, age 26, male laborer; Mrs. Cobb, age 22, female servant; Richard Cobb, age 6; Mary A. Cobb, age 22, female servant; perhaps a duplication; Jane Cobb, age 9 months, female infant; and Gordon Rudd, age 8, male child. Note:? This Gordon Rudd was your author's grandfather, Code 1.6, who was left with relatives in Ireland two years earlier when his parents, William Rudd and wife Anne McLean, had emigrated from Ireland to New York with five of their nine children. Gordon was actually age 10 at the time of his New York arrival as he was born 22 October, 1841.

The Rudds and the Cobbs apparently proceeded at once to Canada West where their relatives were already located. A Cobbe sister, Mrs. Stroud, may have already been in the Hamilton, later Ontario, area. Robert's married sister, Jane, lived in the Caledonia area. Brother John was married and lived near Goderich. Robert's eldest brother, William, and family had recently moved that season from Upper New York to Canada West; a regrouping

The first record we found of the Robert Francis Rudds in Canada West was in the Index of Crown Land Sales. The Index shows Robert F. Rudd leasing in 1853 and then purchasing in 1856 Lot 36 in Concession 9 in Halett township in Huron County. A second recording in 1857 and again in 1859 shows Robert obtaining an assignment in Peel Township of Wellington County: two pieces of Lot 16 in Concession 15. Robert's obituary stated they made the move north to Wellington County in 1857. The entire area was known as "The Queen's Bush" at the time and was held as a Clergy Reserve. The township was named for Sir Robert Peel, Prime Minister of Great Britain. The 74,000 acres were first surveyed in 1843 and opened to the public by the government at $3 and $3.50 per acre in 100 acre lots. There were settlers in the area as early as 1840 but the first farm was not firmly established until 1846. In 1847 the first municipal affairs were recorded. In 1854 the first reeve of Peel Township as a separate entity was William Shirtridge. A reeve is head of the county government in parts of Canada similar to the mayor of a town. The area was settled by Irish, English, and Scots, predominatly, with a few Germans and many escaped slaves from the southern U.S. states in the southern part of the township. This was evidenced by the first church in the township: the Abolitionist Church, a branch of the Methodist Church, built by escaped slaves.

The original Rudd farm of 100 acres is recorded in the 1906 Historical Atlas of Wellington County as situated in Concession XV. Many family members remember the original homestead referred to as in Concession XIV. There was no confusion here according to Norris Rudd, Code 7.71. Roads were built between every second row of lots and were known by even numbers; thus the road between the 14th and 15th Concessions was referred to as the 14th Concession. Side roads were 1-1/8 mile apart and generally had no names. The Atlas shows the W.A.Rudd homestead immediately south in the XV Concession and two half plots labeled R.F. Rudd in the adjoining XVI Concession. This was where Robert Francis Rudd and wife Anne Cobbe established their permanent home and raised their family. Their eight additional children were Alice, John, Elizabeth, Mary Anne, Alfred, Robert Francis, Matilda, and Susannah; three died at young ages. The survivors attended local schools, grew up, and married, and all farmed in the same general area at least into their early married years.

Robert Francis Rudd was involved in community affairs over a period of 40 years as assessor, councillor, reeve, and tax collector. He was active in the Methodist Church and its early introduction into this area. He assisted in the erection of the first churches in both Elora and Alma. He laid the cornerstone of the second Alma church in 1878; "one of the monuments of his useful life." In later years the Rudds moved from the farm to Alma where Anne died on 27 November, 1906. Robert Francis lived nine years longer and died after a paralytic stroke on 16 January, 1915. His will was dated 5 November, 1914, and gave "all real and personal property to son, Robert Francis, subject to life interest in the real property and use of the house by Mrs. Martha Jane Rose, his housekeeper, (unless she left the house for over two months) and an annuity of $50 per year in lieu of any claim for wages and otherwise." Mrs. Rose was 80 years old. The real estate included lots 194-196 and 212-214 in the village of Alma. The house was known as "The Cedars" and was valued at $300; other assets less than $75.

The gravestone in the Elora Cemetery was marked:

WILLIAM ALBERT RUDD - ELEANOR EDEN

7.1 Rudd, William Albert, eldest child of Robert and Anne Cobbe Rudd, born 31 July, 1851, in Queens County, Ireland, presumed in Portarlington area; their only child born in Ireland. The parents emigrated from Ireland to Canada West in November, 1851, when William was age 4 months. He was listed incorrectly on the ship manifest as age 10 months, possibly due to restrictions on very young babies. The first five years were in the Hamilton area and in Huron County before moving north to Peel Township, Wellington County, where William grew up near the village of Alma. He was a farmer. The William Rudd homestead was immediately south of his father's on the XV Concession. On 26 August, 1882, in Arthur, Ontario, married Eleanor Eden, born 22 August, 1858, in Arthur of a pioneer family. They named their farm "Edendale". This is where they raised six children and lost one as an infant. They were Maude, Mary Ann, Ella, Letitia, William Francis, Grace, and Alice.

When their only son married William and Eleanor turned the Edendale farm over to him and made their final move to a farm on the Arthur-Fergus road. William and Eleanor were dedicated homesteaders and community workers. In granddaughter Muriel Anthony's words "She was the traditional mother, wife, and homemaker; gracious, expert, and generous. William was an aristocratic Irish gentleman who applied his considerable energy to the four focal institutions in a pioneer's life: family, church, school, and community. He was known for his love of music and organized family sing-songs around the piano. He followed the politics of the day and wrote letters of concern to the Toronto Mail and Empire. He was a staunch Methodist and contributor to the Methodist church at Parker, Ontario. He valued education and insured his children were prepared as much as was feasible in some area of expertise. His obituary described him as 'one of the honoured members of the Peel Council Board.' Eleanor and William stressed family life in all aspects. The annual picnic at Guelph Park to celebrate Eleanor's birthday was a bonding legacy for the entire family.". William died 25 September, 1931, in his eighty-first year. Eleanor died at 83 in September, 1941, in Arthur. Both were buried in the Elora Cemetery. Their memorial stone read:

In Memory of
William A. Rudd
Eleanor Eden
1858 - 1941
Infant daughter - Ella Louise

MAUDE RUDD - WILLIAM CRAIG

7.11 Rudd, Maude Alberta, eldest child of William and Eleanor Eden Rudd, born 13 March, 1883, near Alma, Ontario, Canada. Maude attended local schools and grew up on the farm. She was in touch with her Brooklyn cousins in Family Two. There were two picture post cards addressed to her in Alma in 1909 from her cousins Annie 2.22 and George 2.23. They had been back to Ireland on a visit to relations left behind. One of the views on the cards was The Square in Rathdowney with notation "Just a view of the famous town where your granpapa came from." Maude worked in Regina, Saskatchewan, as a dressmaker and milliner before marriage. In 1919 in Saskatchewan she married William W. Craig, born 16 June, 1882. He was a school teacher in southern Saskatchewan before deciding to be a farmer. The Craiges farmed first at Grayburn and later at Willows near Assiniboia. Maude was head of the Ladies Orange Lodge of Saskatchewan in 1939. There were no children which frequently has been typical of Rudd women. Comparing many histories of the Rudd women, one finds some had one child and many had no children, an interesting study in genetics and fertility. Maude died in Willows on 13 October, 1956, and was buried in Prospect Cemetery, Toronto, Ontario. William married a longtime friend of the family, Aunt Bea. They moved into Assiniboia where William died in 1968 and was buried in the Prospect Cemetery.

MARY ANN RUDD - ADAM SIVELL

7.12 Rudd, Mary Ann, the second child of William and Eleanor Eden Rudd, born on 12 February, 1885, on the Rudd farm near Alma, Ontario. She was "Minnie" to avoid confusion with the several other "Marys" in related families. She was a public school teacher before marriage. In January, 1913, in her parent's home she married Adam Traynor Sivell, born 15 November, 1884, in Arthur township. Both his paternal grandparents came from Ireland. He was a farmer. Like the Craigs he farmed at Grayburn, Sask., and later at Assiniboia. His final farm was at Caron, Sask., just west of Moosejaw. Their three children were Robert, Doreen, and Mary born before Adam developed pernicious anemia. The family moved back to Arthur, Ontario, where Adam died 19 July, 1922, at age 38. He was buried in the Greenfield Cemetery in Arthur. Minnie continued to live in Arthur and raised the children. She was very active in her church and in the Eastern Star. She was District Deputy Grand Matron of the Ontario Grey District for a year. Minnie died of cancer 29 January, 1959, and was buried in the Arthur Cemetery. The Sivell memorial stone read:

Adam Traynor Sivell
1884 - 1922
His Beloved Wife
Mary Ann Rudd

William Karl Hamilton - Marion Hill family

7.143 Hamilton, William Karl, third son of Sandy and Letitia Rudd Hamilton, born 5 May, 1925. He was a farmer. On 13 October, 1951, he married Marion Hill, born 23 June, 1926. Their five children were Karl, Linda, Glen and Grant, twins; and Marlene. Karl was active in community affairs: school trustee of S.S. #11 in Peel Township and a member of the Board of Stewards at Alma United Church. Marion died of cancer in 1984. Bill continued to farm in Moorfield area.

7.1431 Hamilton, Karl Alexander, born 10 August, 1952, in Palmerston, Ontario. He was a youth camp director at Omemec, Ontario, in early 1980s. On 3 May, 1980, in Fergas, Ontario, he married Julie Irene Norris. She was a teacher at the youth camp. They were still involved in the youth camp program in 1988.

7.1432 Hamilton, Linda Grace, born 24 April, 1954, in Palmerston, Ontario. She was a preschool teacher in Guelph, Ontario, in the 1980s where she lived in 1988.

7.1433 Hamilton, Glen William, a twin, born 7 April, 1957, in Palmerston, Ontario. He worked at Canada Wire and Cable in Fergas, Ontario in the 1980s. He married Lisa Trahan. Their two children were Joshua, 16 July, 1985, and Jerica, 4 June, 1989, and the family lived in Guelph, Ontario, Canada. Jarrett was born 29 August 1990 while Glen was slowly recovering from a very serious motorcycle accident.

7.1434 Hamilton, Grant Robert, a twin, born 7 April, 1957, in Palmerston. He was a farmer in Moorehead area and a contractor for St. Jacobs Cannery. He married Betty Smith in 1988. Her three children by a previous marriage were David, 1968; Jerry, 1970; and Lee Ann, 1982.

7.1435 Hamilton, Marlene Elizabeth, born 21 October 1959 in Palmerston. In 1981 Marlene had a bachelor's degree in family studies and was doing graduate work at Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph, Ontario. In 1988, she was still single.

WILLIAM FRANCIS RUDD - GRACE WADE MOORE

7.15 Rudd, William Francis, fifth child and only son of William and Eleanor Eden Moore, born 17 September, 1890, on the home farm near Alma, Ontario. He was age five when the family moved from a log house to the existing brick house. The bricks were made from local clay. He grew up to take over the family farm at the time of his marriage. On 23 September, 1922, he married Grace Wade Moore, born 23 October, 1898, in Cumnock, Ontario. Mary Sivel, 7.123, a niece, was a flower girl. Their seven children were Eleanor, Doris, Muriel, Betty, Wilfred, Gordon, and Edward. Quoting daughter Muriel, "William was a successful and progressive farmer. He was the first to install a field drainage system; the first to use artificial fertilizers; the first to own and operate a farm tractor. Through his efforts electricity reached the homes along the XIV Concession road. He was a member of the Board of Stewards of the Alma Methodist Church for many years and was a trustee of S.S.#11, Peel Township, the rural school which all his children attended. His hobby of bee keeping was widely known and respected. Grace was also active in the Methodist Church. Her chief hobby was flower gardening. Her floral borders were a source of beauty, pride, and pleasure." William was killed in a farm accident at age 50 on 25 August, 1941. He was kicked by Ginger, a colt. His early death had major impacts on his wife and seven children ages 7 to 18. Those were very trying times shared heavily by the two eldest daughters. Later the three older girls were sent to school in London, Ontario. Grace followed with the rest of the family in 1946. She died 7 June, 1966, and was buried in the Elora Cemetery where the memorial stone read:

ALICE RUDD - DAVID ARCHIBALD

7.2 Rudd, Alice Louise, second child of Robert and Anne Cobbe Rudd, born August 24, 1854, in Huron County, Canada West. Some family records show Alice born in Ireland but are incorrect even with an earlier birthdate. Her older brother, William, was only four months old when the family emigrated from Ireland in 1851. The family moved to Peel Township near the present village of Alma before Alice's third birthday. She obtained whatever schooling was available in those early years and grew up there. On 5 March, 1873, in Alma, she married David Archibald, born 12 November, 1850, of Irish parents on the Archibald farm in the Alma area. The Reverend Loel Briggs performed the marriage ceremony. David was a farmer. Their nine children were Alfred, Frank, Gordon, John, Edith, George, Charles, Annie, and Moir all born in Peel Township. In 1900 the family moved to a wheat farm six miles north of Regina, Saskatchewan; most of the children moved with the family. In 1909 when their son, George, married the parents turned the farm over to him and moved to a house on Albert Street in Regina. Later they made a final move to Victoria, British Columbia, where David died 26 February, 1925. Alice lived until 20 June, 1939, and died in Victoria. Both were buried in Royal Oak Cemetery in Victoria.

ALFRED ARCHIBALD - ELIZABETH BAIN

7.21 Archibald, William Alfred, born 5 December, 1873, on the farm near Alma, Ontario. He was a farmer like his father. Alfred took over the home place in 1900 when the rest of the family moved to Regina, Saskatchewan, the same year he married Elizabeth Bain on August 10, 1900. Their two children were Marion and Edith. The Sr. Archibalds retired from farming in Guelph, Ontario, where they lived out their lives. Alfred died 5 August, 1958. Both were buried in the Guelph Cemetery.

7.211 Archibald, Norma Marion Loreen. born circa 1902. She was a teacher and taught for many years in Guelph area.

7.212 Archibald, Edith, born circa 1905. She married Mr. McGregor, a widower. They lived in Guelph and Welland, Ontario, and were there into the 1960s.

FRANCIS ARCHIBALD - ISABELLA SIMPSON

7.22 Archibald, Francis Arthur, born 7 April, 1875, on the home ranch near Alma, Ontario. He worked with his uncle, Frank Rudd, for some time during the late 1890s. He moved to Saskatchewan with his folks in 1900 and farmed in the Hanley area south of Saskatoon. On 23 August, 1902, in Regina, Sask., he married Isabella Susan Simpson, born 23 August, 1874, in England. Reverend Milican performed the service. Their six children were Arthur, Roy, Leslie, William, George, and Ruby. Two other daughters were lost at birth. Frank died at 38, on 1 May, 1913, from an attack of typhoid fever. Isobella was left with a large young family aged from infancy to age 10. She stayed on the farm for a few months then moved into Hanley. She married George Sampson in the fall of 1914. He was a farmer and the family grew up in rural Hanley. George and Isabella's daughter was Alevinia Isabella born in Saskatoon 23 May, 1916. She was said to be living in Saskatoon in 1986. Isabella died September, 1960, and was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

7.221 Archibald, Arthur Robert, born 16 November, 1904, in Regina, Sask. He was killed in a lumbering accident in 1924 in La Pas, Manitoba, at age 20 and was buried in Regina.

7.222 Archibald, Roy, born 1905 in Regina, Sask., died at age one in 1906 from accidental burns in a fire when a lighted kerosene lamp was knocked over. He was buried in Regina.

7.223 Archibald, Francis Leslie, born 5 August, 1907, near Regina, Saskatchewan. Leslie was a WW II veteran who participated in the 1939 Sicily Campaign among others. After return to civilian life he was a farm laborer in Saskatoon area several years. In 1986 he was retired and lived in a Veteran's Home in Saskatoon, Sask. Leslie died 25 February 1991.

William Archibald - Florence Wickland family

7.224 Archibald, Alexander William, fourth child of Frank Archibald and Isabella Simpson, born 18 August, 1909, in Hanley, Sask. Bill lived and worked in Hanley most of his life. He farmed and worked on other farms. On 5 February, 1936, in Hanley, he married Florence Adelaine Wickland, born 15 October, 1920, in Hanley. Their six children were Margaret, John, William, Karen, Elsie, and Susan. After farming Bill was a utility and maintenance man for 25 years for the town of Hanley and Hanley Senior Homes. He retired in 1984 and he and Florence lived in Hanley in 1986.

7.2241 Archibald, Margaret Blanche, born 1 April, 1936, in Allan, Sask. On 19 June, 1955, she married George Bruce Glennie, born 24 December, 1932, in Saskatoon, Sask. ELIZABETH RUDD - RICHARD JOHNSTON

7.4 Rudd, Elizabeth Jane, fourth child of Robert and Anne Cobbe Rudd, born 10 August, 1856, probably in Huron County, Ontario. The time of the family move to Peel Township is uncertain. The recording of the Assignment of land in Peel Township was dated 1857. This was also the year in Robert Francis's obituary as the date of their arrival in Alma area. On 13 March, 1876, at the farm home Elizabeth married Richard Johnston, born August, 1848, in County Kilkenny, Ireland. He sailed from Cork with his folks as a toddler in the early 1850s when they settled in Peel Township. He was a farmer on a 100 acre plot near Parker, Ontario. (The land was laid out in 100 acre lots along a line called a Concession. There were six lots on each concession, which were one and one eighth mile wide and roughly 3/4 mile deep.) Their five children were Ella, William, Richard, Robert, and Anne, all born on the farm in Parker area. Richard died in Parker on 26 June, 1914. Elizabeth raised a grandaughter, Alma Boyle, from an early age. After Richard's death she and Alma moved in with the William Aumans, in Elmira, Ontario. This was the family of her youngest daughter, Anne. Elizabeth lived another 13 years until 20 July, 1927. One record of her burial indicates the Salem Cemetery; however the Johnston memorial stone was in Elora Cemetery.

The family lived in Clinton, Waterloo, Guelph, and Mitchell, all in Ontario, before Barbara and Barry divorced. In 1986 she and the children lived in London and she worked in a jewelry store.

MARY ANNE RUDD - JOHN HARVEY

7.5 Rudd, Mary Anne, fifth child of Robert Francis and Anne Cobbe Rudd, born 13 October, 1858, on the home farm near the village of Alma, Ontario. She grew up there and attended local schools and qualified as a school teacher. Mary Anne had a reputation of "spelling down" the minister, the doctor, and the local editor in spelling bees. At home on 23 December, 1879, she married John Thomas Harvey whose folks emigrated from Ireland: Mountmellick, Queens County, a few miles from Rathdowney, in 1837. They farmed 200 acres of land on the 16th Concession in Peel Township 3-1/2 miles from Arthur and close to the Robert Rudd holdings. John was born in 1851 on the Harvey homestead which documented the Harveys were some of the earliest settlers in the Queen's Bush. John's sister, Martha, stood up with Mary Anne at the wedding. Her oldest brother, William, was John's best man. After the marriage they moved in with John's parents. Father Harvey died the following year and John's mother and sister, Caroline, moved into Arthur which left John and Mary Anne in sole possession of the Harvey homestead. Their four children were William, Frank, Ullah, and Miln; the first three were born in the original log house. Miln was born in the new brick house built around 1894. Early records stated "this was a house far beyond its time, with a mud room entrance at the back for the men to wash up. The kitchen had windows on three sides; a beautiful room. There was a bathroom upstairs with all the fixtures except the toilet did not work because there was trouble with the water pump." The barn was equally modern for that period. This was the home which Mary Anne named Monaghan Hall.

In 1905 they bought Sunnyside Ranch with better soil and closer to Arthur schools but the house never measured up to Monaghan Hall. In 1910 they moved into Arthur, lived briefly in Fergus in 1914 while Miln finished secondary school, then back to Arthur for the final years. In 1917 they farmed land in Tugaske, Saskatchewan, close to Elbow where their son, William, farmed and near Riverside where cousins were located. They spent a summer or two there before retiring to Arthur. Mary Anne died of cancer 25 July, 1931. John lost interest and died of pleurisy on 3 January, 1932. They were buried in Greenfield Cemetery in Arthur. Their memorial stone read:

WILLIAM HARVEY - MARY EVELYN BLAIR

7.51 Harvey, William Arthur, born 19 November, 1882, on the Harvey homestead near Arthur, Ontario. He grew up on the farm; graduated from Arthur high school; and had a year of pre-med at McGill University, Montreal, Quebec; and a year of business school in Hamilton, Ontario. In 1905 when the family moved to Sunnyside Farm, William stayed at Monaghan Hall farm along with a hired farmhand couple. William and his father went out west looking for land to homestead as early as 1906 but in 1911 he went west to stay. That year he traveled to Saskatchewan with a cousin, Thomas Gilmore. On a branch train out of Moose Jaw, Sask., they watched Easterners jump off at each stop to file a homestead claim. At Bridgeford, Sask., Tom Gilmore jumped off but William said "I'm going one more station." which he did to Elbow in the general vicinity of Riverhurst where cousins, the Robert Francis Rudds, had located. He proved his claim and built his first shelter.

Two years later he returned to Arthur to be married. On 26 February, 1913, he married Mary Evelyn Blair, born 3 June, 1887, in Arthur. Her folks were Irish and Swiss. Her mother, Jemima Buschlen, came from Frantigen, Canton of Berre, Switzerland. Evelyn had studied piano and voice at Ontario Ladies College. Her father gave her a piano and a rifle to take with her to her new home. She was said to have become accurate enough with the rifle to keep all gophers and other wildlife away from their three room shack. William and Evelyn built a barn in 1915; a house in 1916; and their eldest child, Ross, was born in 1917. Two years later they moved to Pasqua, east of Moose Jaw where farming was better; transportation more accessible. Two more children were born there: Marion and Yvonne. William was a successful grain producer and was among the earliest to initiate soil control by strip farming and cultivating instead of plowing. He was the first to own a combine. Evelyn used her musical talent in church and community affairs. They stayed on the farm until William's death from a massive stroke 30 April, 1956. Evelyn moved into Moose Jaw and lived there eleven years. She died 6 April, 1967, from a series of strokes. Both were buried in Rosedale Cemetery in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

Ross Buschlen Harvey

7.511 Harvey, Ross Buschlen, born 27 March, 1917, at Elbow, Sask. He earned his B.S. and M.S. degrees at the University of Saskatchewan and his Ph.D. from McGill University, Montreal, majoring in physical chemistry. He held a National Research Fellowship in 1940 then joined the Canadian Army where he served in the Directorate of Chemical Warfare: 1940 - 1947. He was a Canadian observer of the A-Bomb tests in the South Pacific. After WW II he attended Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, for two years on a post doctorate fellowship from the Defense Research Board of Canada. Subsequently he worked on a variety of chemical and physics research projects in Ottawa, Ontario, and in Medicine Hat, Alberta, where he was head of the Suffield Testing Ground. He retired in 1983 and lived in Medicine Hat in 1986.

Frances Marion Harvey - Harold Baller family

7.512 Harvey, Frances Marion, born 1 November, 1922, in Pasqua, Saskatchewan. Her B.A. degree was from University of Saskatchewan at Saskatoon plus a year in education to qualify for a teacher's Professional "A" Certificate. She taught English and history at high school level both before and after marriage. On 18 August, 1949, in Moose Jaw, Sask., she married Harold Daniel Baller, born 21 February, 1919, in Readlyn, Sask., of German-English parents. Their three children were Carol, Blair, and Barbara. Harold served 5-1/2 years overseas in the Canadian Army, 1939-1945. On his return he owned and operated a grocery store in Grenfell, Sask., for many years. In 1963 he became an insurance representative for North American Life Assurance. He and Marion were both active in community affairs. Harold was city counsellor, mayor, president of Chamber of Commerce, the Royal Canadian Legion, and Lions Club. He was also active in scouting and his church. He was given the Canada Centennial Medal in 1967 for his community contributions. Marion was a school trustee, a census commissioner, an administrator of the Grenfell Senior Citizens Public Housing, and an active leader in her church. The family lived in Grenfell, Sask., in 1988. Marion was a very good contributor of family information for this publication. The Baller family was well represented at Jackson Hole, Wyoming, Rudd Roundup I, 1983; and Burlington, Ontario, Rudd Roundup II, 1986.

7.5121 Baller, Marion Carol, born 12 November, 1950, Grenfell, Sask. Her B.A. degree in English and psychology was from University of Saskatchewan at Regina plus a year of education. She taught emotionally disturbed children for eight years. On 4 August, 1973, in Grenfell she married Neil Ralph Gardner, born 8 December, 1950, in Saskatoon. Their three children were Trevor Harold, 19 July, 1976; Alison Rae, 9 May, 1980; and Craig Neil, 19 May, 1983; all born in Regina. The Gardner family were among the earliest Saskatchewan settlers. The Gardner homestead near Regina dates back to 1892. Neil's B.A. degree in administration was from the Regina campus of University of Saskatchewan. His MA degree from Harvard University was in public administration. In 1988 he was director of the welfare system in the Provincial Department of Social Services. The family lived on 25 acres of the original Gardner homestead four miles out of Regina.

7.5122 Baller, Harold Harvey Blair, born 29 March, 1953, in Grenfell, Saskatchewan. Blair studied industrial instrumentation at the Saskatchewan Technical Institute in Moose Jaw. He was an instrument technician. On 19 November, 1951, in Kellaly, Sask., he married Sabina Elizabeth Exner, born 19 November, 1951, in Kellaly. She was a key punch and mine computer operator. Their two children were Gregory Scott, 17 March, 1979; and Christina Joan, 14 October, 1983; both born in Regina. In 1986 Blair was a dental equipment technologist for the Provincial dental plan in Regina schools. In 1988 he was with the Abilities Council of Regina and worked on equipment for the disabled. The family lived in Pilot Butte, Sask., a suburb of Regina.

7.5123 Baller, Barbara Joan, b. 26 December, 1954, in Grenfell, Sask. Her R.N. degree was from Kelsey Institute in Saskatoon, Sask. She was a nurse for ten years in Misericordia Hospital in Edmonton, Alberta; University Hospital in Saskatoon; and in the Royal Alexander Hospital, Edmonton, where she was assigned to intensive care and coronary care units. She was also very involved in outdoor activities and travel. On 12 November, 1988, in Vernon, B.C., she married Kenneth William Hewitt, b. November, 1951, in North Bay, Ontario. He was manager of social development with the Okanagan Indians in Vernon, B.C. Barbara worked in the intensive care at the Vernon Hospital and they lived in Vernon.

Evelyn Yvonne Harvey - Kenneth Jorgensen family

7.513 Harvey, Evelyn Yvonne, born 14 July, 1929, in Pasqua, Sask. Yvonne attended

Pasqua schools and Central Collegiate in Moose Jaw and completed a medical lab technician course but did not work in the field. Her early job was with a wholesale grocery company in Regina. On 6 February, 1957, in Grenfell, Sask., she married Kenneth Jorgensen, born 12 February, 1932, in Whitewood, Sask. Their son was Dale. Kenneth was an industrial electrician. Shortly after marriage they moved to Kitimat, B.C. and then to Portland, Oregon, with the same company. Yvonne worked for the Fred Meyer Department Store and they lived in Portland in 1986 with a vacation mobile home on the Pacific coast.

7.5131 Jorgensen, Dale Ross, born 22 June, 1965, in Portland, Oregon. He graduated from Portland schools and became a pressman at Vocational Village in Portland. In 1986 he worked for the Orange County Register in Anaheim, California, near his home.

FRANCIS HARVEY - (1) RELLA HAACK (2) MAISIE ROBSON

7.52 Harvey, Francis Rudd, second child of John and Mary Rudd Harvey, born 16 March, 1886, in Arthur, Ontario. He was a practicing surgeon. His M.D. degree was from the University of Toronto. While in school in 1910 he married Rella Haack, a nurse. Their son was John Francis. Frank first practiced in the small town of Plenty, Sask., 30 miles from Kerrobert, Sask., where your author was born in 1911. After WW I he moved his practice to Kitchener, Ontario, for the next 30 years. His first marriage dissolved some time after moving to Kitchener. In 1930 he married Maisie Donaldson Robson, born 7 August, 1902, in Owen Sound, Ontario, of Scottish parents. Their three children were Ann, Miln, and Frank. The family lived in Kitchener, Ontario. Frank was an excellent surgeon, a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons (FRCS-Canada). In 1933 his younger brother, Dr. Miln Harvey, also a surgeon, joined Frank's practice. Frank died of stomach cancer 25 August, 1950, and was buried in Kitchener. In 1988 his wife, Bobbie, was living in her own apartment in a retirement village in Cambridge, Ontario.

John Francis Harvey

7.521 Harvey, John Francis, only son of Rella Haack and Frank Harvey, born in Plenty, Saskatchewan, circa 1911. John was a lawyer, a California law school graduate. He was also a flier. He enlisted in the English Fleet Air Arm when he failed the Canadian pilot physical. He was a lieutenant (A) when he was killed in a shipboard accident in the North Sea in 1942. His promotion to captain was in process at the time. He was buried in Arbroath, Scotland.

Barbara Ann Harvey - Roy Cross family

7.522 Harvey, Barbara Ann, eldest child of Bobbie Robson and Frank Harvey, born 15 July, 1931, in Kitchener, Ontario, Canada. She worked with her mother and had her own business when she was 22, "Ann Harvey Shoppe", a specialty shop with children's and women's apparel. On 14 March, 1959, in Toronto, Ontario, she married Roy Harold Cross, born 8 October, 1919, of Scot-Irish parents in St. John, New Brunswick. He was a commercial artist and lithographer. Their two children were Cynthia and Mary and they lived in Richmond Hill, Ontario. Roy died of cancer 26 January, 1980. Afterwards Ann returned to school and became a very successful licensed real estate agent in spite of poor health. In 1988 she lived in Thornhill, Ontario. Ann died September 1990.

Excerpted from June 4th, 1980, letter from Dr. Harvey; nearly 81: "I have given up on Ireland and frankly am disgusted with the vicious activities of the IRA who are the responsibility of the south of Ireland who only provide lip service in their control, but I doubt even that. You should have no trouble being from USA. The hatred of the south has been engendered and passed on to the children so I see no solution consequently, I have foregone Ireland and am ashamed of them. Too bad World War I shelved Home Rule or Dominion status, as I believe such an event would have brought peace, at that time, and developed the will to get along with each other. The assassination of Lord Mountbatten was a dastardly act and unforgivable."

After 47 years Miln officially closed his office 15 November, 1980. He died three days later of a brain tumor and was buried in Woodland Cemetery, Kitchener. Eileen lived until 10 May, 1988, a month after her 91st birthday.

William Harvey - Patricia Overhill family

7.541 Harvey, William Francis, b. 9 September, 1934, in Kitchener, Ontario. He was a doctor, a urologist in Toronto. His M.D. degree was from University of Toronto. He was a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Canada. On 22 June, 1963, in Vancouver, B.C., he married Patricia Joy Overhill, b. in 1937, in Revelstoke, B.C. Her B.S. degree was in household science from University of British Columbia, Vancouver. Their two children were Christopher Charles Miln, 13 July, 1971; and Megan Patricia Katherine, 5 July, 1976; both born in Toronto. The family lived in Islington, a suburb of Toronto, in 1986.

Douglas Alan Cameron Harvey - Deirdre Mungovan family

7.542 Harvey, Douglas Alan Cameron, born 25 July, 1939, in Kitchener, Ontario. Cameron was a lawyer with a B.A. degree from University of Toronto, with L.L.B. and L.L.M. degrees from Osgoode Hall, University Law School. In 1986 he was professor in the law faculty of Robsen Hall, University of Manitoba Law School in Winnipeg. On 4 June, 1968, in Toronto, he married Deirdre Kathleen Mungovan, born 25 April, 1938, in Toronto, of Irish background. She was a lawyer with a B.A. degree in journalism from University of Western Ontario and an L.L.B. degree from Osgoode Hall. Their two children were John Thomas Patrick, 11 August, 1969; and Ainslie Margaret Lenore, 20 December, 1970; both born in Winnipeg before the divorce in June, 1975. Deirdre and the children lived in Toronto in 1986 where she was employed by the Borough of Etobicoke. The children spent some summer times with their father in Winnipeg.

7.6 Rudd, Alfred Henry, sixth child of Robert Francis and Anne Cobbe Rudd, born 17 June, 1860; he died 26 July, 1860.

ROBERT FRANCIS RUDD - EVA MAY NORRIS

7.7 Rudd, Robert Francis II, seventh child of Robert Francis and Anne Cobbe Rudd, born 6 November, 1861, near Alma, Ontario. Frank went to school in Alma and farmed with his father until his folks retired to "The Cedars" in Alma circa 1892. He took over the family farm and his sister, Susannah, kept house for him until her marriage in 1894. For the next four years Frank kept "bachelor's hall". His nephew, Frank Archibald, 7.22, lived with him during much of this period. Twice Frank Rudd took shipments of cattle to the English market via Liverpool including stock from the John Harvey farm and probably from other neighbors and relatives. On each trip he visited Rudd families still in Ireland. On the second trip early in 1897 he brought two of his cousins to Canada; the two eldest sons of Joe Rudd, Jr., Code 2.1, who was killed in a market accident. Joseph William, 2.21, was just 16. George, 2.23, was three months under age 13. They lived with Frank several years after he took a bride in '98. (Joe joined his folks in Brooklyn, New York, in 1905 when they arrived from Ireland. George continued with Frank on the farm two or three years then went to Brooklyn.)

On 25 June, 1898, in Arthur, Ontario, Frank married Eva May Norris, born 29 September, 1873, in Arthur. Their four children were Norris, Florence, Frank, and Edith, all born while living on the old Alma homestead. In 1906 Frank made a trip to Saskatchewan area and bought a section of land at Bryceton, now Riverhurst, 100 miles south of Saskatoon on the Saskatchewan River. He purchased 320 acres at Gervin, Sask., half way between Saskatoon and Regina. (His nephew, Robert Johnston, Code 7.44, rented this acreage from Frank in 1917.) Frank did not develop either of these properties for several years. In 1912 he rented out the Alma farm and moved his young family to Davidson, Sask. His plan to be there a year or so as an experiment became a 17 year stay. In 1929 Frank turned the Gervin and Riverhurst farms over to two sons and moved back to Alma. The Alma homestead had been sold; later Frank repossessed it. The Rudds moved into "The Cedars" and managed the Alma homestead property from there for another six years. In 1935 they rented out the Alma farm and moved to Vancouver, B.C. to live with their youngest son, Frank, for a short time. Eva had a heart attack and died 6 July, 1936; Frank died of a coronary thrombosis 7 March, 1937; both were buried at New Westminster, British Columbia.

NORRIS COBB RUDD - ALICE LEWIS

7.71 Rudd, Norris Cobb, eldest child of Frank and Eva Norris Rudd, born 10 January, 1899, near Alma, Ontario, on the original Frank Rudd homestead. In 1912 at 13 Norris moved with his family to a rented farm at Davidson, Sask., and later to their own property at Bryceton, now Riverhurst. Norris grew up to be a farmer and farmed with his father for several years before his marriage to a local school teacher. On 29 June, 1927, in Vandura, Sask., he married Alice Jane Lewis, b. 27 October, 1901, on a farm near Moosomin, Sask., very close to the Manitoba border. Alice was a rural school teacher, the seventh girl in a family of eight girls and four boys. Her father had said "I will give all my girls an education and my boys a half section of land." At one time there were five Lewis girls teaching. Alice taught for 8 years, 1919 to 1927, all in country schools with as many as 40 students spread across ten grades in one room. Her teaching contracts ranged from $900 to $1300 a year.

In 1929 when his folks moved back to Ontario, Norris took over the 640-acre home section at Riverhurst and farmed it continuously for 46 years. After post-WW I collapse, then '29 Wall Street crash, the "Dirty Thirties" years of the depression winds brought "Black Blizzards". Due to several dry drought years, the top soil blew away and crops were very poor or non-existent. The farm included a Government Illustration Station testing different methods of dry farming and new varieties of grain. This extra income helped to survive rough times. The Norris Rudds' two children were Marjorie and Kathleen who were born during these years. Norris was bothered by arthritis which became increasingly serious. By 1947 his doctor advised a warmer climate to keep Norris out of a wheel chair. They sold their livestock and moved into Saskatoon where the girls attended school. Norris was affiliated with the Masonic Blue Lodge, the Royal Arch in Saskatoon; the three Scottish Rite Lodges; the Lodge of Perfection, and Rose Croix in Moose Jaw, and the Saskatchewan Consistory in Regina. He was a 32nd degree Mason. In 1953 they spent their first winter in the south and continued to winter in Arizona, California, Texas, and Mexico and returned each spring like birds to plant the crops and take in the harvest. They sold the farm in 1975 and moved to Stettler, Alberta, and set up their retirement headquarters in an apartment in the home of their daughter, Marjorie.

They traveled extensively for several years contacting remote family members and maintaining good contacts by regular visits and liberal correspondence spiced with the unique wry, dry, humor and observations which were so typical of Norris. Norris and Alice made a memorable trip to Ireland to visit cousins on the old sod in 1975 after my 1973 trip. In 1980 Mari and I used Alice's scholarly, detailed, travel notes extensively in our visits and research. Their good groundwork contributed much good information to our family research files and is gratefully incorporated into this publication. Alice had increased health problems; she developed cancer in 1983 and died 24 June, 1985. She was buried in Lakeview Cemetery in Stettler. Norris was severely handicapped by arthritis. Walking was difficult; however he participated in Rudd Roundup I, Jackson, Wyo., 1983, and Rudd Roundup II, Burlington, Ont., 1986, with daughters Marjorie and Kay. In 1988 he moved into a Stettler nursing home and kept his sense of humor intact.

Marjorie Rudd - George Tait family

7.711 Rudd, Marjorie Eleanor, born 9 April, 1928 in Riverhurst, Sask. She grew up on the wheat farm and attended local schools. Nurse's training was at University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, and Saskatoon City Hospital. She received her B.Sc.N. degree in 1950. Marj said tuition was $40 annually and room and board was $35 a month with 12 hour hospital shifts 7 to 7 with 1/2 day off each week. Residence rules permitted one night a week out until 10:30 and one night a month til 12. The first two years in Public Health were in Lloydminster, Alberta. On 10 November, 1952, in Saskatoon, Sask., she married George Malcolm Tait, born 11 August, 1924, in Shaunavon, Sask. He was a watchmaker and had served 3 years in the Winnipeg Grenadiers in WW II and was left with a medical discharge in 1943. He worked for Gulf Oil in Nevis, Alberta. After marriage Marjorie was employed part time in Edmonton with a home nursing organization, the Victorian Order of Nurses, before the move to Stettler, Alberta, in 1956. Their two children were Janice and Norris. Marj nursed full time in 1967. George's health was a serious problem in 1968 resulting in total confinement by 1972. He died of cancer 10 June, 1978, and was buried in Stettler. In 1986 Marjorie was the nursing supervisor of Alberta East Central Health Unit covering 7,000 square miles with 50,000 population and a nursing staff of 16. She lived in Stettler in 1988.

7.7111 Tait, Janice Louise, born 11 May, 1957, in Edmonton. In 1979 she received her B.Sc.N. degree with distinction from University of Alberta in Edmonton. She was a community health nurse 3 years in Peace River area and was nurse-in-charge for a season at Fox Lake Nursing Station, an isolated fly-in two nurse station for 850 Cree Indians in northern Alberta. She was a pediatric nursing instructor at Red Deer College before returning to study for master's degree at University of Calgary. She was a world traveler concurrently to Europe, Scandinavia, Greece, Hawaii, Australia, New Zealand, New Guinea, Mexico, and Alaska. On 2 August, 1986, in Banff, Alberta, she married Aaron Peter Gerling, born in Edmonton. They met at University of Calgary. He was in hotel and restaurant management, and they lived in Calgary in 1986.

7.7112 Tait, Norris Malcolm, born 14 August, 1958, in Edmonton. He was a licensed auto mechanic and attended Southern Alberta Institute of Technology in Red Deer and also worked in Stettler. On 22 May, 1982, in Stettler he married Laurie Anita Haustein, born 20 November, 1961, in Stettler. She graduated in computer accounting from Red Deer College and earned a secretarial science certificate. She worked for City of Stettler before their two children were Ryan Malcolm, 17 December, 1987; and Jeffrey Gerhart, 4 October, 1988; both born in Stettler area. The family lived at Nevis, Alberta, in 1988 near Stettler.

Kathleen Rudd - Harding Swan

7.712 Rudd, Kathleen Enid, born 19 August, 1930, in Riverhurst, Sask. She attended local schools, graduated in household science from University of Saskatchewan at Saskatoon. For several years she worked for Imperial Optical Company, Saskatoon, fitting glasses and hearing aids. In 1958 she moved to Vancouver, B.C. to enter the insurance business. On 3 March, 1962, in Calgary, Alberta, she married Harding Walter Swan, born 3 July, 1922, in Islay, Alberta. He was a business executive for Memorial Gardens and for a mining company. He retired early due to a serious heart condition then managed a number of apartment buildings. He died of cancer of the pancreas on 5 August, 1985. Kay attended Rudd Roundup I, 1983, in Wyoming; and Rudd Roundup II, 1986, in Niagara area, Ontario, with her father and sister, Marjorie. In 1986 Kay was an underwriter for Insurance Co. of North America and lived in Vancouver. Kay and Marjorie were at Williamsburg in 1989.

FLORENCE RUDD - JOHN WESLEY JACKSON

7.72 Rudd, Florence Emily, second child of Robert and Eva Norris Rudd, born 8 October, 1900, in Alma, Ontario. In 1912 she moved with her family to Davidson then to Riverhurst, Sask., where she attended school and grew up. She became a teacher for 8 years in British Columbia, and Saskatchewan before marriage. On 8 December, 1928, in Saskatoon, she married John Wesley Jackson, born 27 September, 1890. Their son was Lorne. Wesley was a farmer with large holdings near Riverhurst. He developed a foundation stock of polled Herefords. The family lived on the farm until 1980 when they built a new home in Riverhurst. Florence died suddenly 10 November, 1983, of cancer of the liver which was diagnosed a short time before her death. She was buried near Riverhurst on land donated to the community by the Jacksons. Wesley lived until 19 September, 1987 just 3 weeks short of his 97th birthday.

Lorne Jackson - (1) Shari Hartwell (2) Paula Hamilton

7.721 Jackson, Lorne Wesley, born 30 June, 1934, in Riverhurst. His bachelor's degree in agriculture was from University of Saskatchewan at Saskatoon. He was an accomplished musician on piano and pipe organ. After his father's retirement in 1980, Lorne farmed the Jackson acreage himself. On 3 March, 1961, in Riverhurst he married Shari Hartwell, born 26 December, 1939, adopted by Michigan parents. Their two children were Allan and Rena before the 1972 divorce. As Lorne had custody of the children they grew up with him and their grandfolks. On 2 June, 1984, in Riverhurst, Lorne married Paula Irene Hamilton. She had two adopted children by a previous marriage: Jeremy Aden Hamilton, born 27 May, 1978, in Prince Albert; and Tara Alyse Hamilton, born 30 July, 1981, in LacLaRouge, Sask. Lorne and family attended Rudd Roundup I, 1983, in Wyoming. In 1986 the family lived in a new home on their farm near Riverhurst.

7.7211 Jackson, Allan Wesley, born 12 May, 1962, in Vancouver, B.C. He was seriously injured in an auto accident at 16 and was confined to a wheelchair. Allan earned many special trophies in school. He met a lot of cousins at Rudd Roundup I, in Jackson, Wyoming, 1983. In 1986 he lived in Regina and was very active in wheel chair sports.

7.7212 Jackson, Rena Catherine, born 24 April, 1965, in Riverhurst, Sask. She completed secretarial training at business college in Moose Jaw. In 1986 she was a secretary and lived in Regina. Rena married John Paul Park on 20 July 1991.

ROBERT FRANCIS RUDD III - ROSE JONES

7.73 Rudd, Robert Frances III, third child of Robert and Eva Norris Rudd, born 19 October, 1907, in Alma, Ontario. He was age five when the family moved to Davidson, Sask. He grew up on the farm in Riverhurst area; attended high schools in Ontario, Saskatchewan, and British Columbia. He graduated from University of Saskatchewan. His B.A. degree was in economics and accounting. Frank tried farming as his parents had given him land at Gervin, Sask., when they retired to Alma, Ontario, but Frank farmed only a few years. In 1934 he moved to Vancouver, B.C., to pursue an accounting career.

On 14 February, 1935, in Vancouver he married Rose Emily Jones, born 16 February, 1911, in London, England. Her father was lost in action in 1918 in WW I. In 1920 Rose's mother took her two daughters to Stratford, Ontario, where a former school friend lived. A year later they joined a harvest excursion train to Saskatchewan and located in Rocanville, Sask., near the Manitoba border where Rose's mother was a housekeeper for a farmer, Joseph Dumville. She later married the farmer's son, John Edwin Dumville. Rose grew up in Rocanville, trained to teach, and taught for four years before marriage. She met Frank while she taught in Riverhurst and boarded with the Norris Rudd's. Their two daughters were Marian and Noreen. Frank was employed in Vancouver by Riddell, Graham, and Hutchinson, an accounting firm, and became a chartered accountant. In 1952 Frank founded Rudd, Gould, and Elliott, and retired in 1970. The firm later merged with Price Waterhouse, global accountants. Frank became a building contractor and constructed an 18 suite condominium apartment building in White Rock, B.C. Frank and Rose traveled extensively and also kept in touch with many cousins in Canada and USA and shared their family information for incorporation into this publication. Frank and Rose participated in Rudd Roundup I, Jackson, Wyoming, 1983, provided badges; greeted and registered attendees; and kept good cash accounts. He was an enthusiastic horseman with four horses in 1988 while he trained a colt and lived in White Rock.

Marian Rudd - Robert Boese family

7.731 Rudd, Marian Florence, born 29 November, 1938, in Vancouver, B.C. She was a teacher and a talented musician; a graduate of University of British Columbia, Vancouver, 1961, with a bachelor of education degree. She was organist and directed the choir at Unitarian Church while she attended school. She taught one year in North Vancouver before marriage and was organist for Highlands United Church. On 26 December, 1961, in Vancouver she married Robert Joseph Boese, born 6 February, 1937, in Hepburn, Sask. His father's family were German Mennonites who escaped Europe through Russia. Both parents were deaf and mute. Robert learned to speak when he began school. His Ph.D. in medical sociology, verbal communication, was from University of California, Santa Barbara.

He was employed by Department of Pediatrics, University of British Columbia to consult with parents of deaf children. He started a family health food business and later co-founded a preventive medical clinic, "The Wellness Centre". Their three children were Geoffrey, Noreen, and Jonathon; they lived on Galiano Island, a farm experiment, where Jonathon was taught at home in early years. Robert died from cancer on 10 March, 1985, in Vancouver. In 1986 Marion lived in Vancouver with Jonathon Morgan, their son, born 21 July, 1977, in Vancouver. He attended Wonder Tree, an alternate education school in Vancouver in 1986.

7.7311 Boese, Geoffrey Francis, born 28 April, 1963, Vancouver, B.C. His early schooling was in California and British Columbia. He began home education at nine; helped in food manufacturing business and later on a small farm and orchard. He rounded out his skills with courses in electricity, carpentry, and diesel mechanics at Columbia Pacific College in Vancouver. On 18 September, 1983, in Vancouver, he married Katrina Shewchuk, of Ukrainian parentage, b. 30 October, 1956. She was a professional photographer specializing in school portraits before marriage. They homesteaded on Galiano Island; operated a small mill in Sechelt, B.C; and operated a retail produce market and delicatessen there in 1986.

7.7312 Boese, Noreen Elizabeth, born 11 January, 1966, Vancouver. All her schooling was at home, specializing in music, art, dance, home skills, and family business training. Noreen worked in sales and the sound business and catered. She planned to create a Wellness Centre to further her father's vision and she lived in Vancouver in 1986.

Noreen Rudd - David Hoar family

GORDON ARTHUR RUDD, JR. - MARY ANN JONES

Code 8: Rudd, Gordon Arthur, Jr., eighth child of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd, born in townland of Graigavalla, Rathsarn parish, Queens County, later County Laois, Ireland. He was born early 1829; Rathsarn church records his baptism on 30 April, 1829. He had whatever schooling was available and grew up in Rathsarn area. An early letter noted Rudd youngsters crossed a small stream to attend school in County Tipperary. Gordon Jr. emigrated from Ireland to New York in late 1849 with his oldest brother, William and his family. The British ship Lady Milton out of Dublin landed in New York on 2 January, 1850. Gordon was listed on the ship's manifest as "20 yrs. of age, labourer". He may have remained in New York State with the William Rudd family the first year or so. William worked on the railroad out of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., until September, 1851. The family moved to Canada West where another brother, John, was farming near Goderich, Huron County and an older sister, Jane, was married and lived near Caledonia southwest of Hamilton.

We do not know where the William Rudd family lived the next five years before their move to Sanilac County, Michigan. There is a gap of 12 years in the Gordon Rudd history. As Gordon Jr. was a farmer, he probably did farm work until he could afford to buy or rent acreage of his own. In 1852 he married Mary Ann Jones, born in New Brunswick, Canada, in 1830. The 1870 census lists Mary's age as 42; Gordon's as 40. Their eight children were George, Frank, Alice, Rachael, Mary, Susan, Fred, and Gertrude. The first four were born in Canada West; the first in Hamilton; the third in Guelph. The next three children were probably born in Marlette, Michigan; the youngest born on Jeddo homestead. The family moved to the Marlette area in 1863. Brother William and family arrived there seven years earlier. In the HISTORY OF THE TOWNSHIP AND VILLAGE OF MARLETTE. published 1956, it was recorded the Gordon Rudd place on Stevenson hill south of town was the site of the first area post office; Gordon Rudd, first postmaster, which he resigned in 1869. He recommended the post office be moved into the village to the John McGill store. Perhaps at this time the family moved to Jeddo homestead, 25 miles east of Marlette. Jeddo is no longer on 1980 road maps. It was located between current villages of Amador and Blaine, five miles from Lake Huron. Charles Rudd, 6.3, noted in a letter his visit to his Uncle Gordon at Jeddo in 1883. Probably Gordon and Mary Ann lived out their lives here. Gordon died 27 September, 1897. Mary Ann lived until 4 September, 1905; records of burial site not found. One of the children, Fred was buried in Croswell cemetery 10 miles north of Jeddo.

GEORGE RUDD - (1) MARY WHITE (2) ELIZABETH COLWELL GLASS

8.1 Rudd, George Gordon, born 24 March, 1854, in Hamilton, Ontario. He may have been christened Gordon George, but was known as George G. Rudd in adult records. He was a businessman; an entrepreneur, from an early age. The Rudd School, District #2 in Marlette area, was organized around 1860. The first teacher was Ann Carpenter. By 1862 or so there was a one room school building. There is an early record of George Rudd's contract to furnish the stovewood for the school at $.68 per cord when he was 12 to 14. He later worked in mercantile business. In April, 1881, he started his own store: "G.G. Rudd, Groceries, Crockery, Glassware, and Bakery". It was still active when the SANILAC COUNTY PORTRAIT was written in 1884. It was presumed to be George's business until the move to Spokane, Washington, in 1890s.

On 28 March, 1880 in Marlette township he married Mary Jane White, born 1 May, 1852 in Brynston, Ontario, north of London. George's cousin, Robert Rudd, 1.3, had married Mary Jane's older sister, Eliza, in 1864. George's and Mary's daughter, Myra Edna, was born before Mary's death 14 July, 1890 at age 38. Around 1891-92 in Marlette, Michigan, George married Elizabeth Colwell Glass, born 21 October, 1856, widow of John Henry Glass killed in a threshing machine accident 25 October, 1887. Della Colwell, her younger sister by 21 years married William Arthur Rudd, 1.31, of the Fargo, North Dakota Rudds. Three of Elizabeth's four children by John Glass were Amelia Page, 1874; James, 1877; and Frank. In the mid 1890s the family moved to Spokane, Washington. George opened a feed and seed store and was involved in banking operations. Elizabeth died of cancer 8 February, 1912. In later years George lived with his daughter Edna's family, the Marshalls. He died in 1934 and was buried in Spokane area.

MYRA EDNA RUDD - JAMES MARSHALL

8.11 Rudd, Myra Edna, only daughter of George and Mary White Rudd, born 31 January, 1881, in Marlette, MI. Her mother died when Edna was age 9. Her new stepmother wanted much for her own children and Edna's growing up period was difficult. She trained in Spokane and was ready to teach when she married. In 1902 in Spokane she married James Marshall, born 1871 in Iowa. Jim's folks had died when he was age two. He and his brother, Charles, were raised by the family of Alfred Marshall and Elizabeth Murphy, a large and very musical farm family. Everyone sang or played the violin. The atmosphere generated a love of music in Jim which he passed on to his own family. Their three children were Ethel, Georgia, and Alfred and they lived at 317 Shannon in Spokane.

Jim was a great violinist. His grandson, Jim May, remembers him playing the fiddle with gusto on his hip, not under his chin. Jim and Charles learned to cook. They started working in cook wagons; migrated to San Francisco to cook in restaurants; and ended in the northwest in Spokane where Jim met Edna. He left the restaurant cook stove to be a head waiter. For years he was maitre d' at the Rockaway, Spokane's finest restaurant, an extension of the internationally famous Davenport Hotel. Edna died at 52, a year before her father, on 3 July, 1933, and was buried in Spokane. Jim lived until 1968. During his later years he lived with the Robertsons, the family of his eldest daughter, at Lake Oswego, Oregon, where he was buried.

Ethel Marshall - John Robertson family

8.111 Marshall, Ethel Lavina, born 4 June, 1903, in Spokane, WA. Encouraged by her father, Ethel became a concert musician on both the piano and organ. She studied with a particularly fine Spokane organist who had been a student for four years with Alexander Guilmont of the Paris Conservatory of Music; famous for his work with such notable musicians as Bennet, Dupri, and Dubois. Ethel was the organist at the First Presbyterian Church when she was 14. At 17 she was the top organist at the Liberty Theater in the silent movie days. After the last show she gave a one hour organ concert over Radio Station KFPY. This lasted for several years from 1920-1926. She also accompanied a small singing group which practiced at Al Rinker's home, including a young singer, Bing Crosby.

My brother, Clayton, who was in high school in Spangle, Washington, south of Spokane, recalled joining the group for a sing-along several times. In 1924 Ethel married John Henry Robertson, born 1902 in Leadville, Colorado. He was an insurance statistician and worked for Neighbors of Woodcraft Lodge many years. Their four children were Wayne, Shirley, Donna, and Janet and they lived in Lake Oswego, near Portland. After the family arrived, Ethel resumed church organ work, a lifetime activity on "real organs" she said. She practiced two hours a week into her declining years and also was interested in Japanese flower arranging. She was considered an expert; a certificated teacher who conducted classes in the art. John died 10 November, 1975, a year after their 50th wedding anniversary. Ethel spent her final days in Canterbury Rest Home, Lake Oswego, and lived until 2 September, 1983. She was buried in Lake Oswego, Oregon.

8.1111 Robertson, Wayne Marshall,born 12 June, 1926, in Spokane, WA. He was employed by the telephone company with management responsibilities over three states. On 7 September, 1948, in Lake Oswego, OR, he married Patricia Barry, born 14 September, 1927, in Medford, OR. Her mother was Elizabeth Applegate, a member of the Oregon Trail pioneer Applegate family. They were in the first wagon train which arrived in Willamette Valley in 1843. The Robertson's four children were Elizabeth, John, Thomas, and Anne. A baby daughter, Mary Kay, born 16 September, 1958, died of crib death at four months. Jim retired in 1982. He became a gentleman farmer and rebuilt a 100 year old home on 15 acres in Hubbard about 20 miles south of Portland, where the family lived in 1988.

8.11111 Robertson, Elizabeth Karen, born 18 August, 1949, Portland, Oregon. She married Curt Nyquist. He was with the phone company in Eugene, Or. Their three children were David, Jason Charles, 31 January, 1972; and James Thomas, 22 April, 1975, before the parents divorced. In 1988 Elizabeth and sons lived in Portland where Elizabeth was employed by U.S. National Bank.

8.111111 Nyquist, David Marshall, born 25 June, 1967.

8.11112 Robertson, John Thomas, born 19 August, 1953, Portland, OR. He was in management with the telephone company. In October, 1973, he married Kate Loomis, born 15 March, 1953. Their two sons were Luke William, 21 December, 1982, and Daniel Oliver, 22 December, 1985. The family lived in Poulsbo, Washington in 1988.

8.11113 Robertson, Thomas John, born 4 August, 1954, Portland, OR. Thomas worked in the office of Mercer Industries, window and door fabricators. In October, 1978, he married Patricia Josephine Sawyer, born 8 July, 1954. Their daughter was Angela Joy, born 1 May, 1984, and the family lived in Gladstone, OR, in 1988.

8.11114 Robertson, Anne Sarah, born 29 May, 1956. In May, 1976 she married Lawrence Blaufus, of German extraction, born 20 November, 1955. Larry was in marketing for Pacific Power and Light. Their three children were Matthew Daniel, 4 September, 1978; John Lindsey, 1982; and Sarah Patricia, 20 August, 1986. The family lived in Portland in 1988.

8.1112 Robertson, Shirley May, second child of John and Ethel Marshall Robertson, born 6 August, 1929, in Lake Oswego, OR. On 19 August, 1966, in New York, she married Filson Glanz, born 7 August, 1933, in Manhattan Beach, CA. Filson's electrical engineering degree was from Stanford University, Palo Alto, CA. In 1988 he was professor in electrical engineering at University of New Hampshire, Durham. Their son was Dehan. Shirley was a children's librarian in Durham where the family lived in 1988.

8.11121 Glanz, Dehan Meier, born 12 June 1968. In 1989 Dehan was in his third year at Stanford University in Palo Alto, California.

8.1113 Robertson, Donna Ethel, born 25 November, 1931. Donna was married to James Paul, music teacher at San Diego City College in 1960s. They divorced. In 1988 Donna lived in Portland, OR, and was in the publishing branch of U.S. Western Telephone Company. Donna married James Nielson on 16 March 1990.

8.1114 Robertson, Janet Linda, fourth child of John and Ethel Marshall Robertson, born 19 April, 1944, Portland, OR. She was a manager with the telephone company before and after marriage. On 2 September, 1966, in Portland, she married Rene Frederick Fortin, born 12 August, 1943, in Portland. Their son was Andre and they lived in Portland in 1988.

8.11141 Fortin, Andre Rene, born 1 April, 1967, in Portland, OR. He enrolled at Portland State University for communications and political science major.

8.112 Marshall, Georgia May, second child of James and Edna Rudd Marshall, born 19 April, 1905, in Spokane, WA. She graduated from Whitman College in Walla Walla, WA, and did additional studies at Pacific Lutheran College. She was Art Supervisor at Pomeroy, WA, before marriage. On 2 July, 1928, in Couer D'Alene, Idaho, she married Elmer Mark May, born 28 May, 1904, in Washtucna, WA. Georgia changed her middle name to Marshall after marriage to Elmer (Kelly) May. Kelly was self employed, part owner of a plywood cooperative in Tacoma, WA. Their two children were Barbara and James and they lived in Seattle, WA, area. Kelly died 6 October, 1968, and was buried in Lakewood Cemetery, Tacoma. Georgia lived in Seattle and moved to Bureen Terrace Care Center in later years. She developed serious health problems complicated by blood pressure medications for 30 years. She suffered Bells Syndrome, a paralysis of a nerve in her cheek. Georgia died February, 1988, and was buried in Tacoma.

8.1121 May, Barbara Joan, born 1 December, 1930, in Seattle, WA. Her communications degree was from University of Washington. In June, 1951, in Seattle, she married Edward Wilbur Elliott, born 26 April, 1930, in Seattle, WA. His family were of English heritage. He was a heavy construction equipment salesman. Their four children were Linda, Edward, Susan, and Vicky and they lived in Issaquah, WA, southeast of Seattle. Edward died 25 December, 1985, at 55 and was buried in Issaquah near where Barbara lived in 1988.

8.11211 Elliott, Linda Lee, born 22 December, 1953, in Seattle, WA. On 1 June, 1974, she married Gary Dean Risdon, born 21 February, 1953. He was with the Metro, county water and waste department. Their two children were Theressa Lynn, 11 July, 1976; and Gary Dean, Jr., 22 August, 1979; both born in Bellevue. Linda was a nurse at Bellevue Hospital, in Seattle suburbs in 1986. The family lived in Issaquah, WA, in 1988.

8.11212 Elliott, Edward Wilbur, Jr., born c. 1955. He was an engineer, graduated from Central Washington College, Yakima. In 1986 he was with Leizure Homes. He lived in Renton, south of Seattle, WA, in 1989. Edward married Anne Straalsund 27 October, 1990.

8.11213 Elliott, Susan Marie, born 1 May, 1956, in Seattle, WA. In May, 1975, she married Joseph Barton Boranian, born 17 December, 1967. He was a heavy equipment operator. Alfred Gordon Marshall

8.113 Marshall, Alfred Gordon, third child of Jim and Edna Rudd Marshall, born circa 1908. He was a merchant seaman most of his life. During WW II his ship was involved in a series of military operations in which he was seriously injured and developed chronic illnesses including malaria. Alfred was married at one time and later divorced. In later years he lived in Missoula, Montana, where he died in a merchant marine hospital on 6 January, 1977.

FRANCIS WILLIAM RUDD - ELIZABETH LOUNT

8.2 Rudd, Frank; second child of Gordon and Mary Jones Rudd, born in 1856 in Canada West. He was eight years old when the family moved to Sanilac County, MI, in 1864. His teen years were on the family homestead near Jeddo, MI, after he lived nearly five years outside the village of Marlette, MI. He was a farmer and likely worked and farmed for himself in the area of Marlette before marriage. In September, 1883, in Marlette, he married Elizabeth Ann Lount, born 3 April, 1862, in Sanilac County, of Ontario parents. In April, 1884, they moved to Dakota Territory to settle near Redder, in present North Dakota. Later they moved to Hand County near Orient. Orient lies between Hand and Faulk Counties in South Dakota. The Gordon Rudds, Code 1.6, were already located in Orient. Later the Harvey Rudd's, Code 1.63, farm adjoined the Frank Rudd homestead. Frank and Elizabeth raised three daughters: Lulu, Jessie, and Hazel and they farmed here until Frank's death in 1908. Later Elizabeth and the two younger girls moved to Spokane, WA, where Elizabeth married George Wallace Robinson, a farmer. The family lived in Spokane and George died in 1949. Elizabeth moved to Inglewood, California, her youngest daughter's home, for a time; then moved to her second daughter's home in Hollywood area where she spent her last five years. She died 12 March, 1956, nearly 94, and was buried in the Inglewood Park Cemetery family plot.

LULU RUDD - JOHN HANEY

8.21 Rudd, Lulu Leotta, born 1 May, 1886, on the Orient, S.D., farm. She attended Orient area schools. An 1897 souvenir program from School District #1, Faulk County, Orient, S.D., listed Lulu and Jessie Rudd among the 32 students. The program was presented to the students at the end of the school year by their teacher, Robert Henry Rudd, Code 1.64, their second cousin. He later became the father of your author, Norman, Code 1.642, in 1911. Lulu trained for teaching and was certified by age 18 to teach South Dakota rural schools. She was a good pianist all her life and perhaps taught before marriage at 22, the year her father died. On 8 September, 1908, in South Dakota, she married John Clayton Haney born in Indiana, 1883. He was originally a carriage painter and was a painter later in Oakland, CA. Their three daughters were Margaret, Vivian, and Avaloo, born in Oakland area. John died circa 1917. Lulu later married Howard Bosworth who was in the trucking business. His three daughters from a previous marriage were Evelyn, Grace, and Gladys. They all lived in San Jose, CA. Howard's health was poor and Lulu worked to help support the family. Margaret, the eldest, went to live with their grandmother, Elizabeth Robinson in Spokane, WA. Howard died in the early 1920s and Lulu continued to live in San Jose in her own home. She collected antiques along with other hobbies and was very civic minded and active until her death from complications due to a broken hip. She died 21 February, 1967, nearly 80, and was buried in the San Jose Cemetery.

HAZEL RUDD - (1) TYLER JOHNSON (2) EDWARD TRUEDSON

8.23 Rudd, Doris Hazel, third child of Frank and Elizabeth Lount Rudd, born 3 July, 1899, on the farm near Orient, S.D. Hazel was nine when her father died and the family moved to Spokane, WA. She worked in Security National Bank during WW I. Margaret Phoenix, 8.211, remembered when Hazel still lived at home in 1918-1919 when Margaret lived with her Grandma Robinson there. Hazel bought her first car and drove the family to church. She was married twice; first to Tyler Johnson then after divorce to Edward Truedson. In the early 1940s the Truedsons moved from Spokane to Inglewood, CA. Hazel's mother lived with them around 1949. Hazel contracted Parkinson's disease and her mother lived with the Jessie Broad family. Hazel died 2 July, 1957, and was buried in Inglewood Park Cemetery.

ALICE RUDD - JAMES DORWARD

8.3 Rudd, Alice M., third child of Gordon and Mary Jones Rudd, born 3 March, 1859, in Guelph, Ontario. She moved with the family to the village of Marlette, MI, in Sanilac County, in 1864 when she was five and attended school in the area for five years before the family moved to a homestead near Jeddo, MI. Jeddo was east of Marlette and five miles from Lake Huron near the present villages of Amador and Croswell. On 27 November, 1878, in Worth township she married James Livingston Dorward, born 24 August, 1845, who had emigrated from Scotland with his parents in 1849. James worked with his father, a bricklayer and stonemason, when a teenager until his 20s. He sold real estate and farmed for several years before moving to Sanilac County in 1876 where he bought 280 acres in Section 22, Worth township. He and Alice raised their family of seven: Anna, Elizabeth, Mable, Byron, Raymond, George, and Clarence. Edna, the eighth child, apparently died while an infant. The origin of the name Dorward was publicized in Ripley's Believe It or Not column. The story told of a man who protected his king by substituting his arm for a broken bar on the castle door. This delayed the invaders long enough for the king to escape. The king decreed that this man's name should be Dorward meaning Warden of the Door. There was also significance to James's middle name. His mother was Margaret Livingston, sister of famous English explorer Dr. David Livingston, discoverer of Victoria Falls and the headwaters of the Nile, Zambezi, and Congo rivers in Africa; the greatest explorer and missionary of the 19th century who exposed the slave trade in interior Africa. Mr. Stanley eventually located him and published news of his discoveries. James died on 20 October, 1917, and was buried in Croswell Cemetery. Alice lived in Detroit with daughter, Elizabeth, until her death and was probably buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, Detroit.

NETTIE JANE WEAVER - WILLIAM BOYD

8.63 Weaver, Nettie Jane, third child of William and Susan Rudd Weaver, born 7 October, 1896, in Point Edward, north of Sarnia, Ontario. She was a seamstress before marriage. On 24 October, 1921, in Sarnia, she married William John Boyd, born 10 September, 1893, in Ballygawley, County Tyrone, one of the six counties of Northern Ireland. He was a grocer and operated his William John Boyd Grocery in Sarnia for 20 years. They lived in their Sarnia home into their late 80s. Bill died 23 June, 1985. In 1986 Nettie lived in a Sarnia rest home at age 90.

In the Introduction to Part II of this book, we used our first contact with the Weavers as an example of how obscure yet fortunate contacts contribute to family research. Nettie visited Ireland in 1920 in search of Irish cousins. The incident and her Sarnia address were recorded in an unsigned page of Irish notes we received in 1978 from Muriel Rudd McLean, Code 6.83, who lived in Carrickfergus, a Belfast suburb in Northern Ireland. A letter of inquiry I sent 57 years later to the Sarnia address brought a response from Myrtle Burgess, younger sister of Nettie. This was the first contact I made with the Weavers, Code 8.6, and through this contact reached the Dorwards, Code 8.3, and these extensive families and their descendants up to 1989.

IRENE WEAVER - HUGH THOMAS

8.64 Weaver, Mary Irene, fourth child of William and Susan Rudd Weaver, born on Moore township farm near Courtright, Ontario, on 19 July, 1898. Irene was a grocery clerk before marriage. On 26 June, 1919, in Sarnia, she married Hugh Murray Thomas, born 6 May, 1895, in the Camlachie District east of Sarnia. His family were pioneer Welch people from Carmarthan, Wales; site of Bishop Anthony Rudd's home while he was Bishop of St. David's Cathedral and preached to Queen Elizabeth I in early 1600s. Hugh's grandparents had established their homestead near Camlachie on 16 July, 1833 after a three month ocean voyage plus working their way up through the Great Lakes to their homestead plot: Lot 4, Plympton township, Lambton County. Hugh's and Irene's three children were Stewart, Ivan, and Aileen. They farmed in Sarnia County until 1942 when Hugh became an operator of the Petrolia Pumping Station at Bright's Grove, Ontario, on the shores of Lake Huron. Hugh retired in 1964 and died 19 December, 1977. Irene died 7 February, 1978. Both were buried in Forest, Ontario.

Aileen Thomas - Tatton Carr-Brown

8.643 Thomas, Aileen Mary, born 6 March, 1925, in Camlachie, Ontario. In October, 1957, in Camlachie she married Tatton Carr-Brown, born in Trinidad where his folks were plantation owners. He was a sailor, an adventurer. They lived in the Caribbean on Montserrat for a time early in their marriage. Aileen was a severe diabetic. Her health worsened and she returned to Ontario where she lost her vision. Her seeing eye dog was Babsie, a beauty she received from a school in New Jersey. She died at 42 on 25 September, 1970, and was buried in Forest, Ontario. Tatton died in Vancouver, B.C. in April, 1986.

WILHELMINA WEAVER - ARCHIBALD LAMONT

8.65 Weaver, Emma Wilhelmina, fifth child of William and Susan Rudd Weaver, born on Moore township farm near Courtright, Ontario, on 23 March, 1903. At five the family moved to Sarnia, Ontario, and she attended business college in Sarnia and was a bookkeeper and clerk before marriage. On 21 May, 1927, in Sarnia she married Donald Archibald Lamont, of Scottish parentage. Their son was Donald and they farmed in Sarnia township until the depression forced Archie into the general insurance business in 1933. In the early 1940s Archie was treasurer and tax collector with the Sarnia township municipal office. He became township clerk and treasurer after completing courses at Queen's University. He was awarded a Centennial Medal in 1967 for his long time services for the township. Wilhelmina also served 23 years in the township municipal office. She was secretary and bookkeeper before retiring in 1968. Both were very active in the Presbyterian church and Masonic lodge and the Shriners groups. Archie died 26 May, 1969, and was buried in Lakeview Cemetery, Sarnia. Wilhelmina sold the home and lived in an apartment in Sarnia in 1988.

8.6754 Van Huizen, John William Ben, born 17 October, 1965, in Sarnia. In 1988 John was a chemical technician for Ethel Corporation of Sarnia.

FREDERICK RUDD - LUCETTA MCNAIR

8.7 Rudd, Frederick M., seventh child of Gordon Jr., and Mary Jones Rudd, born in 1869 in Sanilac County near Marlette, Michigan. His family moved to the homestead near Jeddo, Michigan when he was a baby and he grew up there as a farmer. There is very limited information on this family beyond a simple headstone in the Croswell, MI, cemetery:

Frederick M. Rudd 1869 - 1920
Lucetta McNair 1875 - 1913

Ethel Marshall Robertson, Code 8.111, recalled a visit of her Uncle Fred around 1920 when he suffered from very severe headaches. He returned to Michigan and died a short time later.

GERTRUDE RUDD - ADOLPH YOUNGS

8.8 Rudd, Gertrude, born 1872, the youngest child of Gordon, Jr., and Mary Jones Rudd, and the only child born on the Jeddo, MI, homestead. She grew up in the Jeddo area and worked in Detroit where she met her husband, Adolph Youngs of German descent. The name was adapted from Jungs. They married in Detroit where Dolph worked. Their two children were Ora and Leo and they lived in Detroit until Dolph's death. There have been several references from other relatives of visits at the Youngs' home. Dolph was buried in Detroit. Gertrude moved to California to live with her daughter. She died in 1954 and is reportedly buried in the Burbank, California, area.

ORA YOUNGS - KENNETH CONDON

8.81 Youngs, Ora, born and married in Detroit, possibly on Sturtevant Street, according to one note. She married Kenneth Condon, a painter, and moved to California. Their family was four girls and one boy. One girl was named or called Deedee, a second girl was named Inez, married to Battle. The boy was Kenneth, Jr. who may have lived in the Norwalk area south of Los Angeles.

8.82 Youngs, Leo, born in Detroit. He grew up and worked in the Detroit area. One report indicated he moved to California.

ELIZA ANN RUDD - JOHN ARMSTRONG

Code 9: Rudd, Eliza Ann, Elizabeth in later records, the youngest of nine children of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd, born early 1831, baptized 31 July, 1831, townland of Graigavalla, civil parish of Rathsarn, Queens County, Ireland. Rathdowney was the closest village about half way between Dublin and Limerick. Elizabeth may have emigrated from Ireland with one of her brother's families in the mid 1850s to the Goderich area of Canada West near Lake Huron where other relatives were living. She was married in 1858 to John Armstrong who was born in Belfast, 1830. The Huron County Marriage Register carried the entry ":Elizabeth A. Rudd, Goderich, married John Armstrong, 1858." The 1861 census listed John as a farmer living in a one story log house and labeled "a Bible Christian." The Armstrongs farmed in the Goderich-Clinton area for 20 years. All nine children were born there: Alice, Joseph, Anne, John, Jane, Emily, Florence, Gordon, and Bertha. In 1878 they sold the farm and the family, with the exception of daughter Alice who was married, boarded a tourist train west to the new province of Manitoba. Olyve Rooke Stevens, Code 9.42, in her account of the trip states: "The family took their own food. There was a large cookstove in each railroad car. Each family cooked, lived, and slept in their coach. The railroad ended at the Ontario border. The balance of the trip into Manitoba was made by covered wagon." The Armstrongs settled in the Holmfield district near the village of Killarney about 200 miles west of Ontario province and 10 miles north of the U.S. border. Elizabeth and John apparently lived out their lives in the Armstrong family home in Manitoba. John may have died first. Olive Rooke Stevens wrote in her memoirs: " Aunt Bertha went west to Spokane after her mother died to visit her sister, Emily." Olyve said this was before her birth in May, 1900. Olyve's memoirs provided much information on birth sequences of the Armstrong family.

ALICE ARMSTRONG - CHARLES DISNEY

9.1 Armstrong, Alice Victoria, born 1858, in the Goderich-Clinton area of Huron tract in Canada West. She married in 1874 or 1875 at 16 to Charles James Disney, born 1850. He was a first cousin of Walt Disney. In order to clear up any misconception, Walt Disney children carried no Rudd genes. Four Disney brothers, of French Norman origin, emigrated from County Kilkenney, in southern Ireland around 1836. Roy Disney, in a recent issue of "Irish America," stated that the Disneys were part of a settlement of French Huguenots that came to Ireland in the 18th century. The original name was D'Isney. The oldest brother, Robert, married Jane Cooke and was Charles Disney's father. The second brother,Elias, married Flora Call and was Walt Disney's father. Charles' children carried Rudd genes through their mother, Alice Armstrong and Disney genes through their father, Charles. Walt Disney was their father's first cousin with no Rudd connection. The Isabella Disney descendants are the only ones who carry Disney genes. The other three girls had no children.

The Charles Disneys farmed in the Goodrich-Clinton area. They remained behind when the rest of the family moved to Manitoba in 1878 and continued to farm in Ontario for eleven more years. During this period four girls were born; Isabella, Ethel, Emily, and Myrtle. There was also a son and twins who died at birth. Judging by the birthdates of the girls, the boy may have been the first birth around 1876. According to Olyve Rooke Stevens, her Aunt Alice gave birth to twin boys born dead between the daughters Ethel and Emily. In 1889, when Myrtle, the youngest girl, was a year old the Charles Disney family moved to Manitoba and farmed in the Holmfield area for 30 years. In 1919 Alice and Charles retired to Vancouver, British Columbia. He died in 1925 and Alice died in 1930.

ISABELLA DISNEY - (1) RUSSELL SHANEMAN (2) FREDERICK SMELTS

9.11 Disney, Isabella Evelyn, born 4 August, 1880, in Goderich Clinton area. Her family moved to Manitoba in 1889 and she grew up there. On 10 December, 1908, she married Isaac Russell Shaneman, born 23 August, 1879, in Sananoque, Ontario. He was a banker and the family lived in several small Manitoba towns including Souris, Hartney, and Killarney. Their two sons were Russell and Jack. Russell, Sr., was hurt in a fall and died 31 October, 1913 at age 34. In 1923 in Vancouver, Isabella married Frederick William Smelts, born 1896. Fred was a labour consultant in the Vancouver area. They had over 30 years together. Fred died 1956 and Isabella died in 1969 and was cremated.

Russell Shaneman - Marjorie Jones family

9.111 Shaneman, Russell Disney, born 22 October, 1911, in Portage la Prairie, Manitoba. Russell's B.A. degree and his B.Com. were from University of British Columbia. On 10 October, 1942, he married Marjorie Doreen Jones, born 1914, in Mayfield, Sussex, England. Their two sons were Roger and Peter. Russell was a professional soldier. He served 30 years in the Canadian Army around the world. He retired to Vancouver, B.C., as Lt. Colonel 12 March, 1963. Marjorie died 1980; Russell died 29 August, 1987.

9.1111 Shaneman, Roger Michael, born 3 May, 1947, in Hamilton, Ontario. With his MSc degree he was an environmental engineer in Calgary, Alberta. On 31 August, 1974, he married Viviana Svoy Mai Lieu, born 24 April, 1950, in Shanghai, China. Their daughter was Vanessa, born 11 July, 1986, in Calgary where the family lived.

9.1112 Shaneman, Peter Geoffrey, born 31 August, 1951; died at age 4-1/2 on 12 February, 1956, of influenzal meningitis.

John Shaneman - Elizabeth Johnston family

9.112 Shaneman, John Allen, born 11 July, 1913, in Harney, British Columbia. Jack was a dairy farmer. His B.A., B. of C. and B. of Agriculture degrees were from University of British Columbia in Vancouver. On 3 November, 1939, in Duncan, B.C., he married Mary Elizabeth Johnston, born 30 July, 1912, in Duncan. Their four children were John, Leslie, Brian, and Mark. Jack farmed in Duncan area on Vancouver Island until his death in 1957 from a massive heart attack after he had finished the morning milking and his breakfast. Betty was a commercial artist and sculptor and lived in Duncan area many years before moving to Victoria, B.C., near her eldest son. In 1988 she lived in Berkley Farm Lodge, a retirement home in Victoria.

9.1121 Shaneman, John Frederick, born 30 August, 1941, in Victoria, B.C. He was a licensed master mechanic, trained at B.C. Vocational School. He later earned a diploma of Technology in Engineering after two years of study at the British Columbia Institute of Technology. On 17 May, 1968, in Vancouver he married Sandra Maud Cook, b. 11 January, 1948. Their two daughters were Melissa Tracey Elizabeth, 30 September, 1969; and Emilie Sarah 15 February, 1973; both born in North Vancouver. The Shanemans separated 30 August, 1982. Melissa lived with her father in Duncan where he was self employed as an auto mechanic. Emilie lived with her mother who worked in advertising in West Vancouver. In 1988 both girls lived with their father in Victoria. On 29 July, 1989, John married Joanna Maria Zoltwska, b. 11 February, 1949, in Poznan, Poland. John's brother, Mark, officiated at the wedding ceremony. Joanna's two children by a former marriage were Lileth Dawn Caron, 17 February, 1976; and Julian Blyth Caron, 15 October, 1977.

9.1122 Shaneman, Leslie Elizabeth, born 4 September, 1944; lived only three weeks.

9.1123 Shaneman, Brian Ainsle, born 6 January, 1948, in Vancouver, B.C. He was a carpenter by trade. He was an adventurer also. His mother reported his riding a motorbike across the Sahara Desert. His first marriage was in Australia. On 19 December, 1970, in Noosa Heads, Australia, he married Toni Benzley, born 22 June, 1941, in Melbourne, Australia. She was an artist and writer; a third generation Australian; Swiss and German on her father's line and Irish and French on her mother's. Their three sons were Jarrah, 28 August, 1971; Shugi, 9 October, 1974; and Bo, 2 April, 1977; all born in Queensland, Australia; all ash blondes. There were no middle names: Jarrah was the name of an Australian eucalyptus tree; Shugi was selected by Jarrah to name his new brother; and Bo resulted from meditation. The parents separated March, 1980. Toni and the boys lived on 22 acres of bush in a subtropical area of Queensland; no electricity; but near some magnificent surfing beaches. Jarrah was cited for bravery in saving a woman's life in a treacherous surf. In 1986 Brian was a carpenter in the Los Angeles area. On 15 March, 1984, he married Allison Paige-Acker, born 22 December, 1953, in Lancastershire, England. Allison was a naturalized American. Their daughter was Jessie Rose, born 15 May, 1985, in Newbury Park, CA, where the family lived. Brother Casey joined his sister Jessie c 1988.

9.1124 Shaneman, Mark Russell, born 23 September, 1950, in Duncan, B.C. He was a Buddhist monk in Dharmsaki, H.P., India, for fourteen years in the political center for the Tibetian government in exile; home of His Holiness, Dalai Lama. Jhampa returned to Canada in 1984. On 7 January, 1985, in Duncan, B.C., he married Diana Maria Sari Ryan, born 23 October, 1951, in Klamath Falls, Oregon. Maria's two children by a former marriage were Tenzin James, born 1975 in Dharwalia, H.P., India; and Aimee Odlma, born 1979, in Klamath Falls, OR. Maria was divorced in 1981 from Labsaig Gyalsten. She was a registered nurse, trained for intensive care units. In 1986 she and Jhampa lived in Duncan, B.C. He was a coordinator for Inter Cultural Society in Comichan Valley and was a Tibetian translater. He taught Buddhist philosopohy part time.

She was married in the family home on 14 September, 1893, to James Rooke, born 1865, in England. His family emigrated from County Devon, England to Hamilton, Ontario, around 1870. His father was a landscape gardener who came to Ontario to care for the gardens of a wealthy English family. He later moved west to LeRiviere, Manitoba. James left home early and was on his own by 1877 when he was only age 12. He was a salesman for Massey Harris farm equipment and covered a large area around Pilot Mound, Manitoba, when he married. Their first home was an apartment over the McClung Drug store in Pilot Mound. Their first child, Tilsley, was born in Pilot Mound. Later they bought farm land in the Holmfield area near the Armstrong home and the homes of the two older sisters, Alice Disney and Annie Cross. Their second child, Olyve, was born on the farm in 1900. About 1904 Jim felt an urge to go west. He heard of fruit acreage selling in the British Columbia mountains along the international border near the town of Grand Forks. He sold everything; settled his young family in a cottage next to his wife's sister, Annie Cross, in Killarney, Manitoba, and left for British Columbia. He returned as the owner of 30 acres of planted fruit trees which would not begin production of fruit for two years. He bought three horses, a cow, some chickens, a wagon, two buggies, some farm machinery, a cutter, and a sleigh. He shared a freight car with another Manitoba man and moved west to his new holdings. Jennie and the two children stayed with the Crosses in Killarney and later with the Riddells in Winnipeg; a younger sister, Florence. The family joined Jim in March, 1905, in a partly completed house in Grand Forks. Jennie was very lonely; didn't like the mountains; and missed the rest of her family. The Crosses moved to Spokane, Washington, in 1905. Younger sister, Beulah, was already in the area. As a result there was much contact with Spokane relatives over the years. Jim was very active in the irrigation organiation; was involved in the school; the packing shed; and the sale of local fruit. He served a term as president of the B.C. Fruit Growers. He was also a curler and belonged to the Conservative party. Jennie was active in her church and in the Sunday School on both sides of the border; in Danville, Washington, and in Grand Forks, British Columbia. They sold the fruit ranch in 1920 and moved into Grand Forks where Jim died 5 June, 1933. Jennie moved to Vancouver, B.C. and lived with their daughter, Olyve, for a time. She died in Victoria, B.C. on 30 April, 1944.

TILSLEY ROOKE - (1) ALICE TIDEY (2) CATHERINE WILSON (3) ANNABELLE TUFF

9.51 Rooke, George Tilsley, oldest of James and Jenny Armstrong Rooke, born 5 November, 1895, in Pilot Mound, Manitoba; later moved to a farm near Holmfield, Manitoba. In 1905 the family moved to Grand Forks, B.C., where Tilsley grew up and went to school. In 1916 during WWI he enlisted in the Canadian Army and went overseas with the 54th Battalion. He was wounded and met his first wife while hospitalized in England. In October, 1918, in England he married Alice Maude Tidey, born 4 July, 1895, in Epsom, England. She was a nurse and she went to Canada and Grand Forks before Christmas, 1918, ahead of Tilsley who was not discharged from the Service until early 1919. After Tilsley arrived home he went to work in a local sawmill. He and Alice lived in a small house on the farm until his father sold the place in 1920. Their first child was born here. Their four children were Dorothy, George, John, and Barbara. Both families moved into Grand Forks. Alice and Tilsley divorced in 1926. It is presumed the children were raised by their mother, but not verified. In 1935, Tilsley married Catherine Wilson in Vancouver; she developed cancer and died six months after the marriage. In December, 1936, Tilsley married Annabelle Tuff in Vancouver. She was born in Scotland. Her father was a minister. Anabelle's daughter by a former marriage was Helen Margaret Ord who Tilsley adopted. Tilsley and Annabelle lived out their lives in Vancouver. He died in August, 1963; Annabelle died in 1970. Both were buried in North Vancouver.

Alice Tidey Rooke moved to Republic, WA, after the 1926 divorce. She married Paul Chapman; their daughter was Ruth Kay Chapman, b. in 1943. Ruth married Jim Laswell in Spokane, WA, 24 September, 1955. Alice died 6 May, 1963; was buried in Spokane.

EMILY ARMSTRONG - JOHN TILSLEY

9.6 Armstrong, Emily L., sixth child of John and Elizabeth Rudd Armstrong, born 1867, in Goderich area, Huron County, Ontario. She grew up in Holmfield, Manitoba, after the family moved there in 1878. She trained for teaching and taught in Winnipeg schools for two years before going west to Walla Walla, Washington, where her brother, John and family lived. In Spokane, WA, she became a deaconess in the Methodist Church where she met John H. Tilsley whom she married. John had a grocery store which he sold and opened a real estate, stock, and bond office at Riverside and Howard in Spokane. When WWI started in 1914, he closed the business when elected county treasurer. Later he was Commissioner of Public Safety for the City of Spokane. In 1920 he was mayor of Spokane when he died. After John's death, Emily spent several years in California before moving back to Seattle, WA, where she later died and was buried.

FLORENCE ARMSTRONG - JOHN RIDDELL

9.7 Armstrong, Florence, M., seventh child of John and Elizabeth Rudd Armstrong, born May, 1870, in Goderich area, Huron County, Ontario. When eight the family moved to Holmfield, Manitoba. She trained to teach and taught briefly before marriage to a young Methodist minister, John Riddell, in 1898. Their two sons were Harold and Gerald; both died at young ages. John left the ministry to lecture at Wesley Theological College in Winnipeg. When Alberta College opened in Edmonton, Dr. Riddell was appointed its first president and he remained there until his early 50s. He then moved back to Winnipeg as president of Wesley Theological College. He finished his career there. John and Florence presumably died and were buried in Winnipeg.

9.71 Riddell, Harold, born 1899, died 1916 of memingitis while in France.

9.72 Riddell, Gerald, born 1911, died of a heart attack on vacation in New York City, circa 1940, when he was private secretary to the Canadian Secretary of State, Lester Pearson.

GORDON ARMSTRONG - MAUDE HOUSTON

9.8 Armstrong, Gordon, eighth child of John and Elizabeth Rudd Armstrong, born circa 1872, in Huron County, Ontario. He grew up in Holmfield, Manitoba. He was a carpenter and met his wife, Maude Houston, born in Tween, Ontario, while working in Edmonton, Alberta. After marriage they moved to Red Deer, Alberta, where John set up his contracting business which turned into a very successful venture. He transferred his business to Edmonton during a building boom and made a small fortune. He retired to Victoria, B.C.; bought waterside property and built a spendid home. Two years of retirement was all Gordon could stand. The story from Olyve Rooke Stevens' notes told he made a deal with wife, Maude. He gave her the house and a cash settlement for his freedom. Gordon disappeared. About 15 years later Annie Armstrong Cross received word Gordon had died and had been buried in California.

BERTHA ARMSTRONG - N.H. HOSKINS

9.9 Armstrong, Bertha, the youngest child of John and Elizabeth Rudd Armstrong, b. circa 1874 in Huron County, Ontario, four years before the family moved to Holmfield, Manitoba. After her mother's death in the late 1890s, Bertha went west to visit her sister, Emily Tilsley, in Spokane, WA. While there she met a young English minister, W.H. Hoskins, and they married. He served in parsonages in the outlying areas around Spokane but never in a very large church. There was no information on where they retired or were buried.

Conclusion

Bertha Armstrong is the final member of the ninth family descended from Gordon Arthur and Alicia Wellwood Rudd. Living membership in these nine lines changes daily, monthly, and yearly with the natural increases and losses. Following is a breakdown of the population of each of the nine families as of 1989, recognizing there were still some missing descendant's names and unreported births and deaths.

It is hoped this study of family history will encourage all of you to keep good family records and extend them through 1989 and beyond and keep in touch with your widely spread family. Most anywhere you travel on this globe you should be able to find a Rudd connection; a friendly relative with mutual interests. It makes travel meaningful and more fun. To those archivists among you, there are still holes to fill and research to follow in these records. This was not a family tree. It was a reverse research tracing nine lines in one family from the early 1800s. If you wish further challenge turn the records around and develop your own family tree. Good luck and happy hunting adventures to you all. It is hoped you will find it as exciting and rewarding as Mari and I have. Our travels have been very colorful and filled with wonder and discovery as we visited Rudd locations and families around the world; they are remarkable people with a memorable history. May you add your own to it!

Your Cousin, one way or another,

APPENDIX

General Comments and Explanations

In addition to the coverage in the preface and introduction further detail is needed to clarify some of the procedures followed in putting this book together.

1. As stated in the preface the manuscript, the cut off date was 1988, with only a very few births and marriages added after December of that year. There were some pictures added up to 1990, but the great majority of the 1100 pictures in the book were taken before 1989. Many pictures are dated to provide some perspective.

2. In Part II, all individuals 21 years and over are coded under the simple coding system explained in the introduction. Again, because of the need for a cut off date, 21 in 1988 or those born in 1967 or earlier have their own codes and a separate entry. Those born in 1968 or later are not coded, but their names and birthdates are part of the family write-up. Any special details, particularly for the young adults not yet 21 in 1988, are also included in the family coverage. One exception to the cut off date in coding would be the cousin who married early. Any married cousin in 1988, whether 21 or not, is individually coded in the text.

3. Whenever possible maiden names of married women are included in order to help clarify relationships.

4. Adopted children are treated as blood relatives and are coded as such, as are their spouses and offspring. Children by a previous marriage but not adopted are listed by name and birthdate but are not included in the coding system. Listing of their offspring has been limited to the first generation.

5. Spouses are coded by adding a zero to the code of the blood relative.

6. Cousins and other Rudds outside of the nine families are coded 10, with a distinguishing letter added: 10T for Templemore Rudds; 10W for Wexford Rudds; 10A for Anthony Rudds; 10V for Virginia Rudds, etc.; with additional coding of descendants following the same general pattern used for the nine original families.

7. In the Part II text itself, full headings, all caps, were used for the first three generations. A subheading with only caps on the first letters was used for fourth generation families. Fifth and subsequent generations are listed by code only in family sequence: senior members followed by their juniors and by their off spring, etc. No heading was used for senior members who died in infancy.

8. A series of charts and family summaries have been added to help clarify family relationships. These are listings of family members in chronological order in lieu of family trees. These charts don't carry page numbers but are listed in the contents as facing a particular page, or following a listed page when they are two pages back to back; 42a faces p. 42, etc.

9. Because of confusion between American and European date designations, all dates are expressed as days-months-years, with the month spelled out, e.g., 3 Dec 1988.

10. We tried to be consistent the usage and spelling of Irish place names, e.g., Rathsarn parish rather than the older spelling Rathsaran; Boroughan selected from several spellings encountered; Graigavalla - from many more complex spellings; Co Laois rather than Co Leix, the restored name of Queens Co.; both Eire and Republic of Ireland for southern Ireland.

11. A table developed by J. Alan Evans, Code 4.143, has been included in the Appendix to help establish the relationship between any two cousins when their codes are known.

Errata

Hopefully, significant errors and corrections will be limited. Pictures will be properly identified. Names and relationships will be correctly stated. This undoubtedly is wishful thinking. There will be errors of fact, incorrect dates, and faulty identification, in addition to simple clerical errors. If you note a significant error in the text or in picture identification, let us know. After a suitable period we will issue an errata sheet and distribute it to all book holders.

" A Sermon preached at Richmond, before Queen Elizabeth of famous memory, upon the 28 of March 1596, By the Reverend Father in God, Anthony Rudd, Doctor of Divinity and Lord Bishop of St. David's. Printed for Thomas Man, 1603.

" Psalm 90, 12.

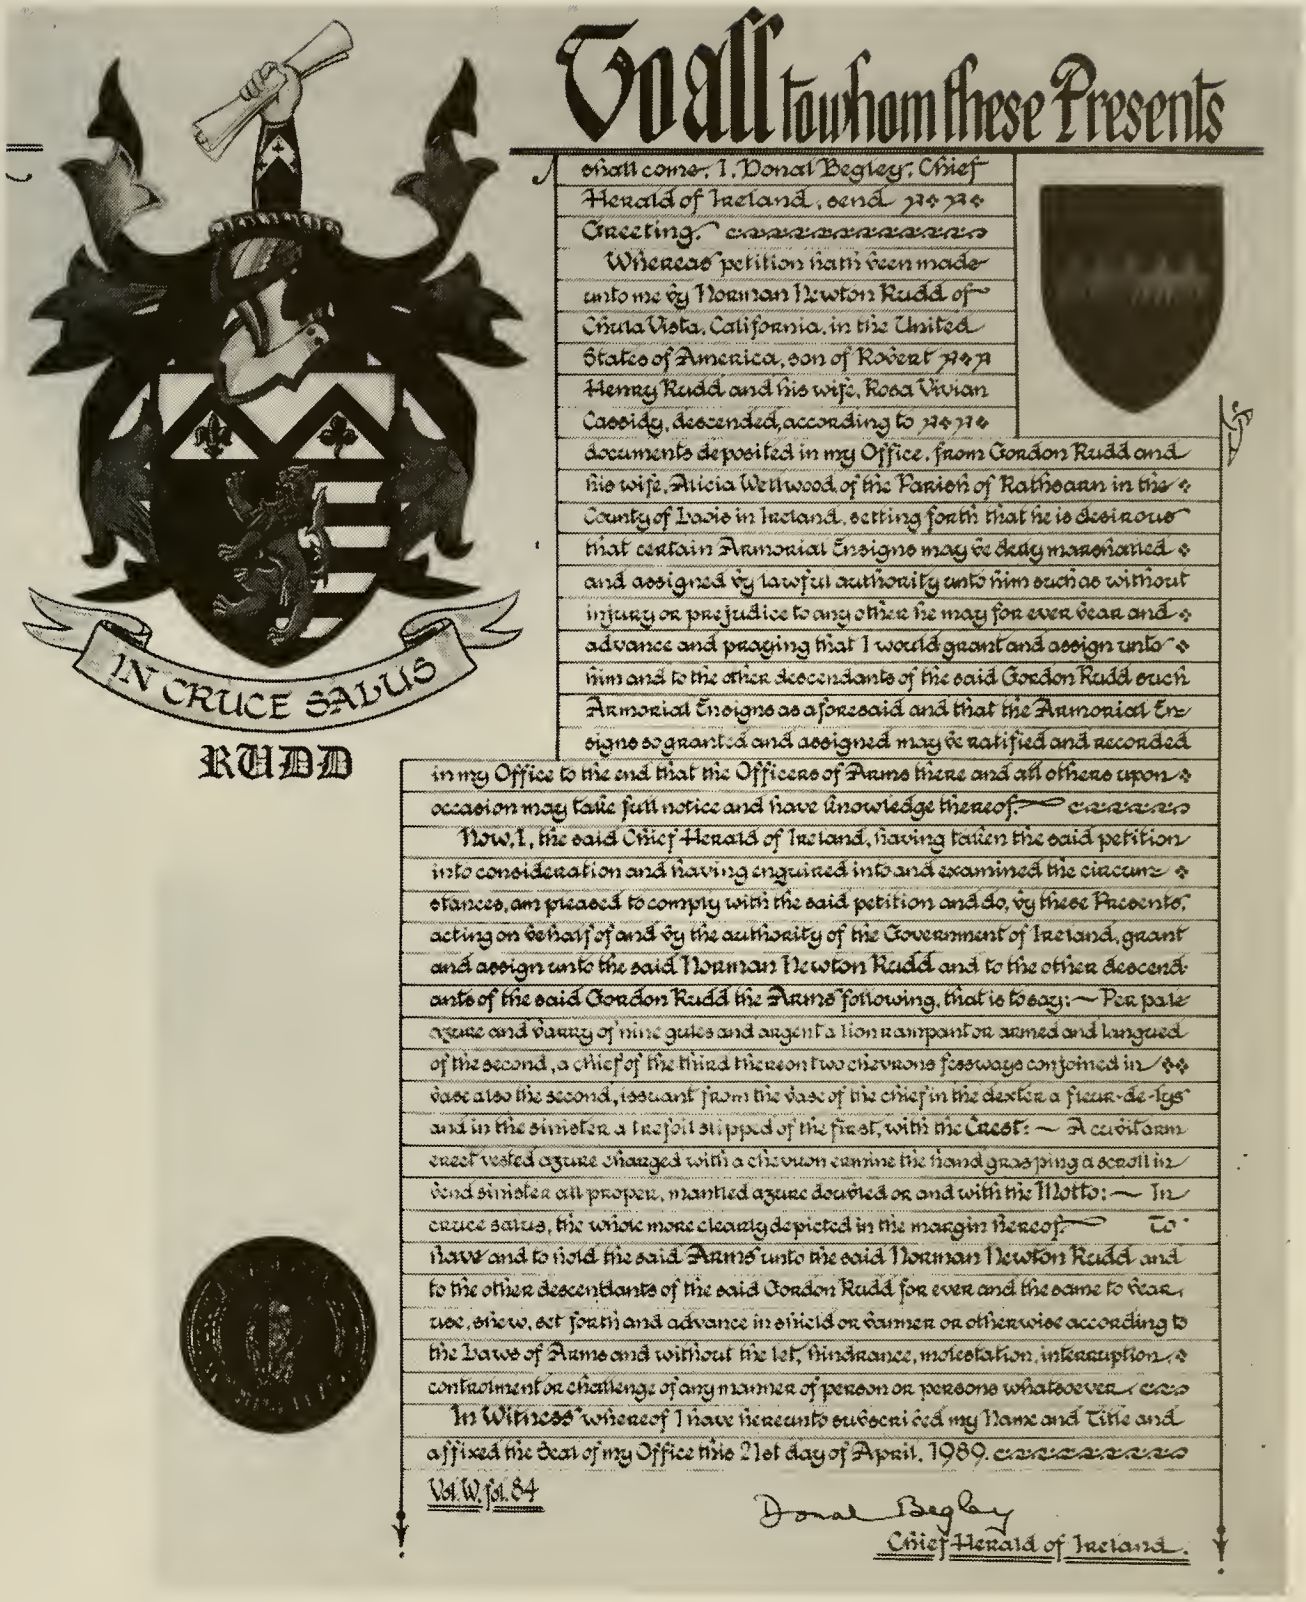
" Teach us to number our dayes, that we may applie our hearts unto wisdome."

(Extract.) " Let me now come to the most reverend age of my most deare and dread Soveraigne, who hath (I doubt not) learned to remember her yeares, that she may apply her hart unto wisdome, that in her soliloquia or private meditations she frameth her speech in this wise.

" Remember not the sinnes of my youth, nor my transgressions but according to thy kindnesse remember me, even for thy goodness sake, O Lord. Behold I was borne in iniquitie, and in sinne hath my mother conceived me. . . . Lord I know and confesse that in my predecessors dayes and in the 37 yeares past of my raigne thou hast delivered me as wonderfully from all my malicious and dangerous enemies an Thou didst deliver thy servant David from the tyranne of Saul and his adherents, from the invasion of forraine adversaries, as the Philistines, Ammonites etc. and from inward insurrections. . . . Therefore I will give thanks unto thee O Lord. . . .

" O Lord I am now entered a good way unto the climactericall yeare of mine age which mine enemies wish and hope to be fatal unto me. But thou Lord which by thy prophet Jeremy commandest the house of Israel not to learn the way of the heathen. . . . I who by thy mighty hand and outstretched arme madest the yeare of the greatest expectation even 88, marvellous by the overthrow of thine and mine enemies; now for thy Gospel's sake, which hath long had a sanctuarie in this Iland make likewise 96 as prosperous unto me and my loyal subjects. . . . Lord I have now put foot within the doores of that age in which the Almond tree flourisheth; wherein men begin to cary a Calendar in their bones, the senses begin to faile, the strength to diminish, yea all the powers of the body daily to decay. Now therefore grant grace, that though mine outward man thus perish yet mine inward man may be renewed daily. . . . For though I have outlived almost all the Nobles of this Realme whom I found possessed of Dukedoms, Marquisats, Earledoms and Baronies at mine entering into the Kingdome; and likewise all the judges of the land and all the Bishops set up by me after my comming to the crowne, and although I have seene an end of sundry of these once or twice over, yet what availeth this my long temporal life in furnishing others unlesse I my selfe had always a spirituall life while I continue upon earth, in hope to enjoy an eternal life when I am dead. . . .

" And though Lord I have lived in respect of myself long enough in this valley of miserie; so that in regard of troubles past and dangers future, I see some reason to say with Elias—' It is enough O Lord, take my soul for I am no better than my fathers,' and with Paul ' I desire to be loosed and to be with Christ,' yet because this people reckon of mee as David's subjects did of him whom they termed the Light of Israel; and for that they esteem of me as the Jews did of Josias whom they called the breath of their nostrils; Therefore for their sakes let me, their candle, burn yet a while longer and let me breathe still among them until I have met with dangers present or imminent, and established the state for the time to come; so that not only peace and truth may be in my days but also that after my departure out of this life they may in the future age live in peace and plentie in every quarter and corner of my Realme from Barwicke to Porchmouth, and from Margets to the Mount, like as Israel and Judah dwelt without feare every man under his vine, and under his figtree from Dan to Beer-sheba, all the days of Solomon," etc.



shall come, I, Donal Begley, Chief Herald of Ireland, send greeting.

Whereas petition hath been made unto me by Norman Newton Rudd of Chula Vista, California, in the United States of America, son of Robert Henry Rudd and his wife, Rosa Vivian Cassidy, deceased, according to documents deposited in my Office, from Gordon Rudd and his wife, Alicia Wellwood of the Parish of Rathcarn in the County of Laois in Ireland, setting forth that he is desirous that certain Armorial Ensigns may be duly matriculated and assigned by lawful authority unto him such as without injury or prejudice to any other he may for ever bear and advance and praying that I would grant and assign unto him and to the other descendants of the said Gordon Rudd such Armorial Ensigns as aforesaid and that the Armorial Ensigns so granted and assigned may be ratified and recorded in my Office to the end that the Officers of Arms there and all others upon occasion may take full notice and have knowledge thereof.

Now, I, the said Chief Herald of Ireland, having taken the said petition into consideration and having enquired into and examined the circumstances, am pleased to comply with the said petition and do, by these Presents, acting on behalf of and by the authority of the Government of Ireland, grant and assign unto the said Norman Newton Rudd and to the other descendants of the said Gordon Rudd the Arms following, that is to say:— Per pale azure and vairy of nine gules and argent a lion rampant or armed and langued of the second, a chief of the third thereon two chevrons fesswaye conjoined in base also the second, issuant from the base of the chief in the dexter a fleur-de-lys and in the sinister a trefoil slipped of the first, with the Crest:— A cubit arm erect vested azure charged with a chevron ermine the hand grasping a scroll in bend sinister all proper, mantled azure doubled or and with the Motto:— In cruce salus, the whole more clearly depicted in the margin hereof.

To have and to hold the said Arms unto the said Norman Newton Rudd and to the other descendants of the said Gordon Rudd for ever and the same to bear, use, show, set forth and advance in shield or banner or otherwise according to the Laws of Arms and without the let, hindrance, molestation, interruption, contradiction or challenge of any manner of person or persons whatsoever.

In Witness whereof I have hereunto subscribed my Name and Title and affixed the Seal of my Office this 21st day of April, 1989.

This document is available as an 11x14 color print suitable for framing.

RUDD PATENT OF ARMS - - - BLAZONRY OR HERALDIC DESCRIPTION

SHIELD:

"Per pale azure and barry of nine gules and argent"
(split vertically, one half blue, the other half is nine red and white (silver) horizontal bars)

"A lion rampant or armed and langued of the second" color
(a gold rearing lion; teeth, tongue, and nails painted red)

"A chief of the third, thereon two chevrons fessways conjoined in base, also the second"
(upper third of the shield in white or silver containing two horizontal red chevrons joined at base)

"Issuant from the base of the chief in the dexter, a fleur-de-lys"
(On the base one third down the shield, an azure fleur-de-lys under the right chevron as carried)

"And in the sinister, a trefoil slipped on the first"
(and on the left as carried, an azure shamrock)

CREST:

"A cubit arm erect vested azure charged with a chevron ermine"
(A forearm, erect, dressed in blue, with an ermine chevron on the sleeve)

"The hand grasping a scroll in bend sinister all proper"
(A hand holds the scroll diagonally; the upper end pointed to the left)

(mantle: fabric scarf, is blue with a gold lining)

MOTTO:

"In Cruce Salas": (In the Cross.... Salvation)

Note: The mantling is not considered a part of the Coat of Arms but generally is the principle color of the shield lined with the principal metal. The wreath between the helmet and crest is usually a combination of the same colors. The motto can also be changed without affecting the grant of arms. However any change in the shield or the crest should be recorded in a modified grant of Arms by the Chief Herald of Ireland.

RELATIVELY SPEAKING ---

--- it's interesting and fairly easy, once you know the system, to use your Rudd family Code to figure out your relation to another person.

No doubt it's safe to assume that you know the meaning of such terms as "parent","sister","uncle",and "niece"! But the terminology of kinship gets a little confusing beyond these simple relationships. So here are some definitions:

SIBLINGS : Brothers/Sisters
FIRST COUSINS : Children of Siblings
SECOND COUSINS : Children of First Cousins
THIRD COUSINS : Children of Second Cousins
FOURTH COUSINS : Children of Third Cousins
Etc.

Then, of course, there are relationships involving generational differences :

FIRST COUSIN ONCE REMOVED : Your relation to a First Cousin's child
FIRST COUSIN TWICE REMOVED : Your relation to a First Cousin's grandchild.
SECOND COUSIN ONCE REMOVED : Your relation to a Second Cousin's child
SECOND COUSIN TWICE REMOVED : Your relation to a Second Cousin's grandchild
Etc.

The Tables on the next page enable you, by comparing your Rudd code number to another person's, to name the relationship. First, familiarize yourself with the following LEGEND :

SIB = Sibling
1C = 1st Cousin
2C = 2nd Cousin
3C = 3rd Cousin
4C = 4th Cousin
5C = 5th Cousin
1C1R = 1st Cousin once removed 2C1R = 2nd Cousin once removed 3C1R = 3rd Cousin once removed 4C1R = 4th Cousin once removed 1C2R = 1st Cousin twice removed 2C2R = 2nd Cousin twice removed 3C2R = 3rd Cousin twice removed
P/C = Parent/Child
A/U N/N = Aunt/Uncle-Nephew/Niece
GA/GU GN/GN = Great Aunt/Uncle-Great Niece/Nephew

INDEX OF MEMBERSHIP
November 1991

The index lists the Rudd Family Research Association membership rolls as of November, 1991. It includes living coded entries and genetic descendants over age 21 born in 1970 or earlier. Female entries include maiden names to indicate origins. Spouses are listed by the descendant's code plus a zero. This also applies to widows, widowers, and divorced spouses where children are involved and to several spouses who serve as Family Coordinators. The alphabetical listing is simplified into separate family groups 1 through 9 for the nine families of the nine children of Gordon and Alicia Wellwood Rudd. Other Rudds are Category 10. Persons under 21 and most spouses are not indexed, most are covered in manuscript with genetic partner or forebear. Underlined page numbers indicate photos.

CODE 10 - OTHER RUDDS

These are Rudd descendants other than the nine families of Part II. They are on the membership rolls, receiving newsletters when at good addresses. The Wexford, Anthony, Roscrea and Templemore Rudds are Irish; The New England, Virginia, Texas and other southern Rudds are chiefly English. Partial codes have been included to aid identification.
